TO FEMALES IN DELICATE HEALTH.

DR. DOW, Physician and Surgeon, No. 7 Endicott Street, Boston, is consulted daily for all diseases incident to the female system. Protrusion Uteri or Falling of the Womb, Fluor, Whites, Suppression, and other Menstrual derangements, are all treated on new pathological principles, and speedily relieved in a very few days. So invariably certain is the new mode of treatment, that most obstinate complaints yield under it, and the afflicted person soon rejoices in perfect health.

Dr. Dow has no doubt had greater experience in the cure of diseases of women than any other physician in Boston.

Boarding accommodations for patients who may wish to stay in Boston a few days under his treatment.

Dr. Dow, since 1845, having confined his whole attention to an office practice for the cure of Private Diseases and Female Complaints, acknowledges no superior in the United States.

Last Wishes of a Child.

All the hedges are in bloom, And the warm west wind is blowing; Let me leave this stifled room—

Let me go where flowers are growing. Look! my cheeks is thin and pale,

And my pulse is very low; Ere my sight begins to fail—

Take my hand, and let us go. Was not that the robin's song,

Piping through the casement wide? I shall not be listening long; Take me to the meadow side.

Bear me to the willow brook; Let me hear the merry mill; On the orchard I must look;

Ere my beating heart is still. Faint and fainter grows my breath—

Lead me quickly down the lane; Mother, dear! this child is death,

I shall never speak again! Still the hedges are in bloom,

And the warm west wind is blowing; Still we sit in silent gloom—

O'er her grave the grass is growing.

Straps.

An exchange paper very gravely informs us that a young man who was recently bathing in the Missouri river seeing a number of ladies approach, drew himself from motives of delicacy.

Rob how is your sweetheart getting along? Pretty well, I guess; she says I needn't call any more.

A Scotch nobleman seeing an old gardener of his establishment with a very ragged coat, made some passing remarks upon its condition.

It's a very good coat, said the honest old man. I cannot agree with you there said his lordship. Ay, it's just a vera good coat, persisted the old man; it covers a contented spirit, and a body that owes no man anything, and that's mair than many a man can say of their coat.

The Mendota Press says, that two citizens of that town have lost their wives by elopement, and that the customary substitution in the streets, instead of "How do you do, sir," has become: "Is your wife safe this morning?"

An exchange, speaking of the treatment a police officer received from a drunken woman whom he was endeavoring to take to jail, says, she kicked and cuffed him around, as freely as if he had been her husband!

Benevolence does not measure its charities too nicely. The clouds never send down to ask the grass and plants below how much they need; they rain for the relief of their own full bosoms.

If you are so foolish as to purchase a man's friendship, you are fool enough to be the dupe of anything. The paid "friend," is always on the qui vive for a new purchase.

FIRE! FIRE!

$200 REWARD! WHEREAS, certain buildings have been destroyed by fire in this town, during the last fortnight, and as there can be no doubt that they were the work of incendiaries, the above reward will be paid to any person who will give such information as will convict the person or persons who set said fires.

And the above reward will also be paid to any person who shall detect any one setting fire to any building of the value of Two Hundred dollars, within the town, on the 1st day of March next, on conviction of the offender.

Miscellaneous.

Kitty's Wager.

It's against my principles, said Parker Pelham, buttoning his pockets, and inclining his chair at an angle of forty-five degrees against the piazza railing. Taxes, taxes, nothing but taxes! Government must suppose a man is made of money; and then, right on the top of that, every woman of your acquaintance expects you to pay funds into her war treasury. It's all nonsense; and I, for one, won't be victimized! Besides, I don't consider it fair for us men to be bled at every pore, while the women keep their own purses intact. If you female kind are so vitally interested in the hospitals, and all that sort of thing, why don't you lend a helping hand?

Mr. Pelham screwed up his lips, tapped his fingers on the railing, and nodded his head, as one who should say, "rather guess you'll find that argument unanswerable." Kitty Brace, standing among the roses that shut out the June sunshine, turned round so suddenly, that the tinted petals showered softly down around her like a pink snow storm. Parker instinctively moved his chair back, as he caught the dangerous sparkle of her hazel eyes, and saw the crimson pennon of defiance fluttering across her cheek.

Please to explain yourself, Mr. Pelham, said Kitty, clasping a sprig of roses very tightly in her two little hands, lest they should descend wrathfully upon Parker's ears, in spite of her determination to be very proper and dignified. Have we not spent time and money both in this cause. Have we not denied ourselves every unnecessary luxury? Nay; have we not even parted with our jewels and trinkets, to send aid to those who suffer in their country's behalf?

That's all very fine, said Parker, turning up his nose in lofty disregard of feminine logic. Smooth sailing, smooth sailing. You may talk as much as you like, Miss Kitty, but you'll never persuade me you're in earnest until I see you make some sacrifice worth boasting of.

I don't want to boast, said Kitty, indignantly; but Oh! if I were only a man—I if I could only earn money!

You'd do unheard-of things, I've no doubt, said Mr. Pelham, sarcastically. But you can earn money if you choose to try.

How, pray?

Well, for instance, those crimson sprinkled strawberry beds on the hill-side; a man would turn 'em into money quick enough; a woman don't choose to take the trouble—it's easier to beg!

Yes, said Kitty, taking no notice of the covert sneer, but nobody wants strawberries here—there is no market for them.

There is in the city, I suppose. Ah, yes—that's right, Miss Kitty—curl your lips, and toss your head! Come now—here's an exemplification of my assertion that you shrink from the slightest effort in this cause. You expect us to do every thing, while you are willing to do nothing. Now, I'm not afraid to wager fifty dollars you wouldn't sell five dollars worth of strawberries to keep your soldier's heroes from want.

Kitty was silent for a moment; then she drew out her little morocco pocket book with solemn emphasis.

I'll call witnesses, sir, and the wager shall be registered.

Parker Pelham eyed the little beauty as if he scarcely understood her.

Mind, you are to sell them yourself, Miss Kitty, no man's money.

Set your heart at rest, Mr. Pelham; all the conditions of your bargain shall be complied with.

But, Miss Kitty—have you reflected? Such a very un ladylike thing—

I see nothing un ladylike in endeavoring to serve my country's defenders, said Kitty, quietly; a lambent smile sparkling in her eyes as she noted Parker's perturbed brow. Fifty dollars—it is a very neat little sum. And now I must go to see about some baskets for my berries—there is no time to be lost!

Fifty dollars! feebly muttered Mr. Pelham, as the light dress fluttered down the garden walk. What a confounded fool I was! Why couldn't I have said five instead!

But of course I am perfectly safe—she'll never do such a thing, never!

Strawberries! who'll buy my strawberries? Mrs. Leclerc was reading in her cool, quiet parlors as the silvery voice echoed through the street. Instinctively she rose and pushed aside the curtains.

A slender figure in a brown calico dress, her face shaded by a blue-ribboned Shaker bonnet, was leaning over the area railings, on which she dexterously balanced a basket of ripe strawberries, glowing scarlet through their covering of fresh vine-leaves.

Mrs. Leclerc shaded her eyes with her hands, and looked again.

Why, Kitty Brace! can it be possible that that is you?

"I myself, and no other, laughed Kitty. I'm selling strawberries on a wager—will you buy some?"

Buy some? of course! Give me a dozen baskets; and then come in, you little witch, and tell me about it.

Not just now—haven't time, answered Kitty, but you shall hear of it by-and-by!

Mrs. Leclerc thought that Kitty had never looked so pretty, in tulle or pearls, as she did under the quaint shadow of that Shaker bonnet—her eyes dancing with mischief, and the bright curls tucked behind her ears; and the old maid behind the window blinds of the opposite house thought it very queer to see Mrs. Leclerc lean from her casement to kiss the strawberry girl!

Strawberries? How much be they a basket?

Mrs. Jones rubbed the soapuds from her sodden fingers, and polished them off on her check apron, as she opened the basement door.

Five cents? that's too much; I won't give but four. James Adolphus! if you don't keep your hand out o' that strawberry basket, I'll skin you. I'd calculated to get a few for preservin', but sugar is so awful high—Julius Alexander, come in out of the street this minute, or I'll come out after ye! I put up two jars of pineapples, but James Adolphus got at one, and 'tother blowed up with a bang on Easter Sunday. Can't ye give four baskets for a shillin'?

Them baskets for a shillin'? Them baskets for a shillin'? Take postage stamps? Well, pour 'em leaf in one of the baskets! Look here young woman, don't you ever show your face here again sellin' strawberries! A leaf—just to fill up, I'll warrant! Where do you expect to go when you die, I'd just like to know?

The door was slammed in Kitty's face with more emphasis than politeness. Strawberry vending has its unpleasant aspects as well as most other occupations in this world; but our little heroine was undismayed! It takes a good deal to daunt a courageous woman.

Late in the afternoon, Mr. Parker Pelham's clerk came softly into the bank office, where his master was busily engaged in writing.

I beg your pardon, sir, but do you wish to buy any strawberries?

Strawberries—no! said Mr. Pelham, abstractedly.

I told the young person so, sir, but—Dear me, here she is, now!

There was a defiant little tap on the door, and Miss Kitty Brace walked in, her hazel eyes sparkling like two stars under the Shaker bonnet.

You don't wish to purchase, Mr. Pelham? That's fortunate, for I've sold every berry! Please to count my change—I believe it amounts to nine cents over and above the specified five dollars!

Parker Pelham stared at the double handful of postage currencies in blank astonishment and dismay.

You don't mean to say, Miss Kitty, that—I do mean to say that I have won the wager, sir!

How pretty she looked in that moment of bright animation! Ordinarily, Parker Pelham would have hesitated long ere parting with a red cent of his hoarded money, but beauty is a wonderful seducer. All the treasured hopes of months leaped up in that moment of fascination.

I own myself vanquished, Miss Kitty, said, handing over a neatly folded fifty dollar bill. Take it—and—

He paused a moment in awkward uncertainty.

Kitty—will you take my heart with it? Thank you, sir, said Kitty, demurely, but I should scarcely know what to do with the article. My promised husband is fighting under the Stars and Stripes, and one heart is all I can take care of at this time. Good evening, sir!

Also for the humiliated and discomfited Parker Pelham! Was it not hard enough to lose fifty dollars, but he must lose a sweetheart, too? But all the Rothschilds never felt so rich as Kitty Brace when she enclosed that fifty dollar bill to purchase comforts for the soldier.

For the Patriot.

Western Liberty.

The West sets a good example to the East in the matter of practical generosity. Western men make money quickly. But they do not hoard it. They give it freely.

We were reading, not long since, of a Picnic excursion, twenty-six miles out on the Pacific railroad, from San Francisco, for the benefit of the Sanitary Commission. The cars were detained on the way, and one of the passengers, catching sight of a hare running, jumped out and shot it, and bringing it back to the train, sold it over and over again, until he had realized a large sum for the Commission. A bag of flour, which had done similar duty before, was sold several times, until several hundred dollars had been paid for it. A box of strawberries, which had been presented to Dr. Bellows, and by him given to the exhortationists, was sold at the rate of a dollar a berry. And the net proceeds of the Picnic were several thousand dollars.

There is a church in St. Louis which contributes fifty thousand dollars per annum for outside benevolent and missionary purposes. Being lately in company with a friend who had made acquaintance with some of the prominent members of this Society, we expressed surprise at such unwonted liberality, and inquired how such a result was attained. Why, he replied, there are some parishioners who contribute a quarter of their yearly incomes, and I know one man who gives half of his income. It was either this individual, or another of the same fraternity, who, being worth about one hundred and twenty thousand dollars, gave towards the establishment of some good enterprise twenty thousand dollars.

Now, we of the East, have not been backward; and yet, such examples as these may well stir us to fresh effort. It is very much to be doubted, whether, generally speaking, rich men among us give in proportion to their means. Suppose that a subscription paper is started in a town to raise money to prevent the draft. The laborer, the mechanic, the tradesman, who get but a few hundred a year, and have little or nothing laid up for the future, give five or ten dollars. And what do they, who count their incomes by thousands or tens of thousands, and have laid up greater or lesser fortunes, contribute? Fifty, or one hundred, or five hundred, or one thousand dollars? By no means. Twenty dollars is considered by rich men, on such occasions, a great gift.

We state this as the general rule. We shall be only too glad if anybody will prove us mistaken. We shall be specially delighted if our own honored town is an exception to the rule. We have been waiting to see the list of contributors to the last call for money. The meeting voted to publish it. Where is it?

For the Patriot.

The Old Bell.

be? This is the question which the people must decide. We fight to conquer a peace, not to continue the war for any political purpose whatever for any party, North or South, and why not fight it out on this line?—Boston Herald, June 23.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, July 2d, 1864.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

ACCIDENTAL. In noticing the return of the brave soldiers of the Eleventh Regiment in our last issue, we overlooked the name of one of the noblest of them; one who has been with his regiment every day since it left camp, and seen the blood flow as freely as water; we mean the honored name of John Scott. Although a native of South Carolina, he felt it a duty to stick to the old flag, for which he has fought bravely and nobly.

PLEASANT EXCURSION. We with pleasure call the attention of those who enjoy sailing in Boston Harbor, and breathing the fresh sea breeze, to the accommodations now offered by Capt. George Spear, whose notice will be found in our columns to-day. Mr. Spear is a venerable sea captain, probably well known to most of our citizens, being a native of this place, although he has spent a large portion of his days upon the briny deep. He is therefore just the man to take parties among the islands—being safe and reliable.

REAL ESTATE. The beautiful two-story dwelling house, on the Hancock lot, now occupied by Messrs. Steadman and John Williams, and owned by Mr. William Dutton, has recently been purchased by Mr. John W. Hall, as a residence for himself and family.

We learn that a Mr. P. intends shortly to enter the holy bonds of matrimony with one of the fair daughters of this place and is to share a part of house with Mr. Hall.

We understand that the old Barrell house recently bought by Mr. Henry H. Faxon, is to be re-modeled and otherwise improved, for the Messrs. Williams.

CAKES AND PIES. We would call the attention of our readers to the card of Mr. Flint in another column. He intends keeping constantly on hand, cake and pies for the accommodation of families; and will make to order, wedding, cup, currant, gold, silver, frosted, sponge and other kinds of cake at short notice. Also, all kinds of pies. Those in want will do well to give him a call as his "better half," understands the art of making delicacies to perfection.

SOLDIERS' RECORD. Deaths and Casualties. Besides the names of Quincy boys, who were killed at the late engagements in Virginia, recorded in another column, we have the following to add:

Deaths. James Hughes, Company D, 30th Mass. Reg., died of wounds received near Spottsylvania.

Particulars not received. Thomas Woods, Co. D, 39th Regiment.

Wounded. Albert L. Giles, Co. G, 32d Regiment, in foot, June 18th.

Peter Talbot, Co. L, H. Artillery, slight wound.

GENTLE FURNITURE AT AUCTION. One of the best chances ever offered our citizens to purchase at auction, rich and elegant furniture, will be on Tuesday next, at the house of Mr. Gage, on Elm street. The furniture is nearly new, and in excellent condition—well worthy the attention of buyers generally. It is seldom in this place, that articles of so nice a quality are offered at auction. For full particulars, see advertisement in another column.

THE NEW COMPANY. At a meeting of the members of the new volunteer company, on Tuesday evening last, George G. Souther was chosen Chairman, and William Sanders, Secretary. The rolls and documents which were expected, not arriving, but little was done, and the meeting adjourned till next Tuesday evening, at the same time and place.

FIFTH MASS. BATTERY. Capt. Charles A. Phillips of this Battery is now in command of three batteries attached to Gen. Griffin's Division, 5th Corps, and the Battery is now commanded by a Quincy boy—we mean no other than 1st Lieut. James Edward Spear, an honored son of Capt. Edward A. Spear. They have had some hard marching and tough fighting of late, but the surviving ones are all in good health and spirits.

THE INCOME TAX. The Income Tax has been fixed as follows by the Committee of Conference on the Tax Bill:

Over $600 and not exceeding $5000, 5 per cent; over $5000 and not exceeding $10,000, 7½ per cent; over $10,000, 10 per cent. No additional rates are imposed on citizens living abroad. An amount not exceeding $200, paid for rent of homestead is deducted.

SUFFOLK BANK. The Stockholders of this institution have voted not to re-organize under the National Banking Act.—Bos. Post

Celebration of the Fourth.

NORTH WEYMOUTH, JUNE 27, 1864.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

MADAM: Please allow me to suggest the propriety of calling the attention of your readers to the celebration of the next glorious 4th of July, and the Freedom of the Hingham and Quincy Turnpike and Bridges as well; which will be participated in by the inhabitants of Weymouth, Quincy, Hingham, and other towns on the line of the road.

All persons who feel disposed to rejoice with us are invited to join in the procession, in carriages, any where on the route, and also to participate with us in a picnic breakfast in Union Grove, near Weymouth Forever Bridge, where will be music by the Band of Bands, and singing and speeches, appropriate for the occasion.

It will be a morning affair; commencing at Quincy and North Weymouth; at Quincy, the procession will start sufficiently early to be at North Weymouth at a quarter before five o'clock, and join with the Weymouth procession, which will move from Harding's corner, exactly at five o'clock, amid the booming of cannon far and near; the ringing of bells, the floating of flags, and music by the full Weymouth Brass Band, and perhaps by the Quincy Brass Band. The procession will have their carriages decorated with flags; and with it will be the old "Rates of Toll" boards, which have so long adorned the toll-houses, but which will thenceforth be forever consigned to oblivion, and on which on that day there will be inscribed suitable mottoes.

The procession will move through Sea, Athens and Bridge streets to Hingham—over Broad Bridge, Fort Hill, through East Weymouth, Forever; over Paine's Hill, through Quincy village, Quincy Point, over the bridge to Union Grove, where it will probably arrive at about 9 o'clock; and the time from then till 12 o'clock, will be improved as above stated.

At noon, thirteen guns will be fired on Harding's Hill. Much interest is being manifested in the celebration, and appearances indicate a glorious time.

The people who have hitherto borne the intolerable burden of paying tolls at those bridges, in addition to paying their full share towards maintaining other roads and bridges, are rejoiced that their emancipation has at length arrived; they desire to give full expression to their joy—and they will do it!

Our motto is: Free Roads and Bridges, and a FREE PEOPLE!

Very truly yours, E. S. BEALS.

The Fourth—Free Bridge Celebration.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

On Monday next, the anniversary day of our Nation, the Bridges on the line of the Hingham and Quincy Turnpike, by Act of the Legislature, become free—to be traveled by all men without fee or toll. This is an event in which our Weymouth neighbors have a deep interest, and they propose to celebrate it by appropriate ceremonies.

A procession in carriages, accompanied by the Weymouth Band, will leave Harding's corner, as called, in North Weymouth, at 5 o'clock in the morning, and passing over the line of the Turnpike, will return through Quincy by way of the Point Bridge, to the Grove immediately beyond it, known as Union Grove, where arrangements have been made for addresses, music, collation &c., and afterwards for a social dance. It is understood to be the wish of those most directly interested that the citizens of Quincy should unite in this celebration; and it seems fitting and proper that on that day we should exchange congratulations with our Weymouth friends, on the removal of a barrier heretofore existing between us, and pledge ourselves to each other for the full and prompt discharge of our duties to our common country in this, her hour of trial.

Those who do not wish to travel over the whole route can unite with the procession, in carriages or on foot, as it passes through our own town; and why cannot associations and individuals interested, take measures to join the procession here, in a body, with banners and music, and thus cultivate friendly feelings between the two towns, and add to the pleasure and interest of the day.

A CITIZEN OF QUINCY.

ICE CREAMS. Carver's excellent Ice Creams were the greatest luxury on those hot days of anything we know of. Those who have not tried their quality should do so on the Fourth, as a good supply will be at their command.

CHEAP COAL. A number of the citizens of Lynn have made a move toward supplying themselves with coal at rates cheaper than those demanded by dealers. A meeting has been held, and a committee of enquiry appointed.

THE NEW ENROLLMENT BILL, as passed by the House, authorizes the President, at his discretion, to call for any number of volunteers. In case the quota of any State, District, &c., shall not be filled in sixty days, the President may order a draft for one year. Those who serve for one, two or three years, are to receive bounties respectively of $200, $300 and $400. No commutation is to be allowed.

Sad Announcement.

JUNE 23d, NEAR PETERSBURG, (VA.)

To Mrs. William L. Burrell, Weymouth.

According to agreement between ourselves, that if either should fall in battle, the one who remained should write to the wife of the other. It is now my painful duty to inform you, that while I am writing to you our boys are burying Orderly Sergeant, William L. Burrell. When we found his body, the rebels had stripped it of every thing it had on. He was killed the 22d of June, Captain Chandler is in command of the Regiment this morning. Sergeant Joyce and George Turner are dead. Serg. Joyce was killed the 16th of June. All the Sergeants but myself are killed or wounded. I am in command of Company M, and find but twenty-five men. Have but one boy from Weymouth—John Moore, he is all right. Captain Chandler will give a full account of all the deaths in the Lynn papers as soon as he can. He can't find time to write to all. You must excuse this, it is the best I can do now. In haste yours,

SERGEANT GEORGE F. KELLY.
Co. M, 1st Mass. Reg. Heavy Artillery.

* Writing to Weymouth at such a time is probably the cause of including all from Quincy as from Weymouth.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, JULY 1, 1864.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The varieties in the weather of the past month, will long be remembered. Some days very cool; on the night of the ninth a frost; variable in temperature, but no rain; on the night of the 25th the warmest but one night in June for twenty-five years past; the month passes away leaving as severe a drought in New England as has occurred for a long time past. So much in the natural world. Business enterprise in most branches has been very limited; and gold, currency and merchandise, have daily advanced, and still are advancing in value. The next movement that may be expected will be a steady advance in the rate of interest. In proportion to the scarcity of paper currency, so will be the rise in its value. Now the sovereign people have more power to regulate prices and the currency, than the government or all the brokers in creation. Buy as little as possible, only as necessities require; wear articles of domestic manufacture; shun the purchase of foreign imports until the war is over; spend one dollar where we now spend two, and the prices of all the necessities of life will in a short time be brought to a rapidly descending scale. We are told that large sales of gold occurred in New York, yesterday at $250, and that business men in that great city regard gold speculation as a deliberately organized system to break down the credit of the government as a diversion in favor of the rebels, but the real evil lies in extravagance.

The events of the week as reported from the headquarters of the army of the Potomac, have been exciting and desponding to many timid people in these parts. There is no cause for alarm or doubt. The rebels are struggling to preserve their railroad communications, but General Grant will soon find a way to destroy them effectually. Richmond once cut off from supplies, will soon be in Federal hands. The prospects of the Confederate army are anything but encouraging. It is represented that we have over 50,000 rebel prisoners on our hands, while from 40,000 to 50,000 sick men are in Lee's camp.

The change of tone, says the Boston Herald:

"Which marks the rebel papers is significant and suggestive. The boast that Lee intended to quarter his troops in Maryland and in Pennsylvania this summer has not been verified. The rebel papers have but little to say about England and France, except in denunciation of the countries named. The rebel armies retreat from one point to another, where they have built heavy fortifications, and because Grant and Sherman do not choose to fight them behind entrenched positions, but march around them, they blow about a defeat of the Union army, and what great things they (the rebels) are doing. Lee has been driven from the Rapidan to the Appomattox, yet because Grant does not see fit to fight early wars, the rebels think they are not defeated, and keep their courage up as best they may."

The present session of Congress is nearly closed. The Commutation Clause of the Conscription Act is repealed. All the Massachusetts delegation voting for the repeal.

Secretary Chase has informed the Ways and Means Committee that the Tax bill just passed will not yield revenue enough; and he therefore urges a supplemental bill to be passed before the adjournment of Congress; probably for an increase of tax, seventy-five to one hundred millions of dollars.

The purpose of the government being the overthrow of armed rebels in the field, and the security of permanent peace and union, by liberty and justice under the Constitution, calls for a cordial co-operation of men of all parties who love their country, in raising all such appropriations as the Federal authorities need to prosecute the war to a successful issue for liberty and freedom.

STATE BOUNTY TO SUBSTITUTES. A letter from Adjutant General Schouler, states that substitutes furnished by persons not liable to draft, in accordance with the Proclamations of Provost Marshal General Frye, are entitled to the State bounty of three hundred and twenty-five dollars.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

The price of beef is said to be coming down at the West, there having been a decline of from two to three cents per pound during the last fortnight.

It has been decided to postpone the meeting of the Democratic National Convention, to be held at Chicago, until August 29th.

LETTERS Remaining unclaimed in the Post Office at Quincy, State of Mass., 21 day of July, 1864.

Poetry.

Going Home.

"Will you come with me, my pretty one?"
I asked a little child;
She looked on me and smiled;
Then, in a low, sweet, gentle voice,
She said, "I cannot come,
I must not leave this narrow path,
For I am going home."
"But will you not?" I asked again—
"The sun is shining bright,
And you might twine a lily-wreath
To carry home at night;
And I could show you pleasant things,
If you would only come."
But still she answered as before,
"No; I am going home."
"But look, my child; the fields are green,
And 'neath the leafy trees
Children are playing merrily,
Or resting at their ease,
Does it not hurt your tender feet
This stony path to tread?"
"Sometimes; but I am going home!"
Once more she sweetly said.
"My Father bade me keep this path,
Nor ever turn aside;
The road which leads away from him
Is very smooth and wide;
The fields are fresh, and cool, and green,
Pleasant the shady trees;
But those around my own dear home Are lovelier than these."
"I must not loiter on the road,
For I have far to go;
And I should like to reach the door
Before the sun is low."
I must not stay; but will you not—
O, will you not come too?
My home is very beautiful,
And there is room for you."
I took her little hand in mine;
Together we went on;
Brighter and brighter o'er our path
The blessed sunbeams shone.
At length we saw the distant towers,
But, ere we reached the gate,
The child outstripped my lingering feet,
Too overjoyed to wait.
And as she turned her radiant face
Once more to bid me come;
I heard a chorus of glad songs,
A burst of "Welcome Home!"

The Red, White and Blue.

O, Columbia, the gem of the ocean,
The home of the brave and the free,
The shrine of each patriot's devotion,
A world offers homage to thee.
Thy mandates make heroes assemble,
When Liberty's form stands in view,
Thy banners make tyrants tremble,
When borne by the red, white and blue.
When war winged its wide desolation,
And threatened the land to deform,
The ark, then, of freedom's foundation,
Columbia rode safe through the storm.
With her garlands of victory around her,
When so proudly she bore her brave crew,
With her flag floating proudly before her,
The boast of the red, white and blue.
The wine-cup, the wine-cup bring hither,
And fill you it true to the brim;
May the wreaths they have worn never wither,
Nor the star of their glory grow dim.
May the service united ne'er sever,
But they to their colors prove true;
The army and navy forever,
Three cheers for the red, white and blue.

Anecdotes.

Mrs. Blifkins was very anxious that a conservatory should be added to the parlor. Blifkins didn't see it, saying with all the bustle of his nature that his home was so much like a hot house nearly all the time, that it needed no improvement.

A certain Scotch friend of ours, who is not a member of the temperance society, being asked by a dealer to purchase some fine old Jamaica rum, dryly answered: "To tell you the truth, sir, I cannot say I am very fond of rum; for if I take more than six tumblers, it's very apt to give a body the headache."

A darkey was sent to cut down every tough tree, but his axe flew back for some time with but little effect. A storm occurring meantime, and a crashing shaft of lightning shattered a huge oak to splinters near him. Brose de Lord! exclaimed Sambo, dat's well done. "Pose you try dis one next—guess you get your match, mess."

A well primed lover of the bottle, who had lost his way, reeled into a teetotal grocery, and hiccupped, Mr. —, do you keep—a—yes—good—to take here?
Yes, replied the temperance shopkeeper, we have excellent cold water—the best thing you could have.

Well, I know it, was the reply; there's no one thing that's done so much for navigation as that.

You will upset the tray, and break all the dishes on it! said an anxious mother to her daughter.

Oh, no, mother, retorted the witty girl; I shall break all the dishes off it, if it upsets!

On a child being told that he must be broken of a bad habit, actually replied—Papa, hadn't I better be mended?

NEW LAW

Relation to Dogs!

THE Following Law in relation to Dogs, passed by the last Legislature, has just been received by the Town Clerk:

CHAPTER 293.

SEC. 1—Every owner or keeper of a dog shall, annually, on or before the first day of April, cause it to be registered, numbered, described, and licensed, for one year from the first day of the ensuing May, in the office of the Clerk of the city or town wherein he resides, and shall cause it to wear around its neck a collar distinctly marked with its owner's name and the registered number, and shall pay for such license two dollars for a male dog and five for a female dog.

SEC. 2—Any person becoming the owner or keeper of a dog not duly licensed, on or after the first day of May, shall cause said dog to be registered, numbered, described, and licensed, until the first day of the ensuing May, in the manner, and subject to the terms and duties, prescribed in this act.

SEC. 3—Whoever keeps a dog contrary to the provisions of this act, shall forfeit fifteen dollars to be recovered by complaint.

SEC. 4—The Assessors of the cities and towns shall, annually, take a list of all dogs owned or kept in their respective cities and towns, on the first day of May, with their owners' or keepers' names, and return the same to the city or town Clerk on or before the tenth day of July. Any owner or keeper of a dog who shall refuse to give just and true answers to the Assessors relative to the ownership thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars.

SEC. 5—The Mayor of cities and the Chairmen of Selection of towns shall, annually, within ten days from the first of July, issue a warrant to one or more police officers or constables, directing them to proceed forthwith to kill or cause to be killed all dogs within their respective cities or towns not licensed and collared according to the provisions of this act, and any person may, and every police officer shall, kill or cause to be killed, all such dogs wherever and whenever found.

SEC. 6—The Mayor of cities and the Chairmen of Selection of towns shall, after issuing their warrant to police officers, as specified in the preceding section, forthwith certify the facts, under oath, to the District Attorney of their respective districts, whose duty it shall be to prosecute all such officers as fail to comply with this requirement.

SEC. 7—Any town, city or county officer refusing or neglecting to perform the duties herein imposed upon him, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars.

SEC. 8—This act shall take effect in thirty days from its passage; but any licenses heretofore duly granted under existing laws shall be valid for the term for which they were granted. (Approved May 14th, 1864.)

SEWING MACHINES.OUR LETTER A
Family Sewing Machine

Is fast gaining a world wide reputation.

It is beyond doubt the

BEST AND CHEAPEST

And Most Beneficial of all Family Sewing

Machines yet offered to the public. No other

Family Sewing Machine has so many useful

appliances for Hemming, Binding, Felling,

Tucking, Gathering, Gauging, Broiding,

Embroidering, Cording, and so forth. No

other Family Sewing Machine has so much

capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make

our Family Sewing Machine most reliable,

and most durable, and most certain in action

at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch which is the best stitch known.

Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity,

can see at a glance, how to use the Letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sew-

ing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine

is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine

when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work. While

some of the Cases, made out of the choicest

woods, are finished in the simplest and chas-

tet manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb

manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family

Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family

sewing as our Manufacturing machines are

for manufacturing purposes.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

Celebration of the Fourth.

Another of the anniversaries of our Nation's birthday passed away quietly last Monday. The principal excitement in our village was the celebration attendant upon the Hingham and Quincy Bridges becoming free. As announced in our last, a large procession left North Weymouth, led by their Band, and passing over the old road, entered Quincy at Paine's hill; here it was received by our citizens with our Band, and escorted through some of the streets to the Point; the scholars of the school were there to receive, and join the escort, headed by a drum corps. On passing the Bridge, the Weymouth delegation again took the lead, and welcomed their friends into the beautiful grove, where a sumptuous breakfast awaited them.

Elias S. Beals, Esq., the President of the day, was assisted by six Vice Presidents. He first called upon the Rev. Mr. Rockwell, who invoked the Divine blessing; then the good things were distributed with liberal hands. Jeffrey R. Brackett, of this town, was then called upon, and his remarks were followed by a National anthem. Other addresses, interspersed with music and songs, were made by Hon. Mr. Day, Henry F. Smith, Col. Stone, Rev. Mr. Hamilton, and others.

Mr. Brackett was first introduced by the President, as the Treasurer of the Corporation, that had until lately owned the road. In reply, he said, that he never knew a Treasurer of a defunct Corporation to be drawn upon with any expectation that the draft would be "honored"—especially, when, as in this case, "at sight"—though he could not say "without grace." He thought a protest, under the present circumstances would be excusable, because the drawer more than any other man was responsible for his being "without funds."

He was reminded of one of the arguments used so successfully at the State House in bringing about the result they were celebrating. It was said that the people of "Old Spain" could not go away from it, in any direction, freely. On their north, was Neptune to be periculated; on the south, Charon and the Styx; and on either side, old Cushing or young Cushing. Now he did not see why they were anxious to go away, if it always was as pleasant as on this occasion; for he for one did not wish to go; and this, in the language of President Lincoln, reminded him of a little story—and quite as applicable as some of his. He had heard that at the opening of this road, a big gun had been placed on yonder hill to give clat to the occasion; and was charged all ready; but when the time came it wouldn't go off; he had been in fact surprised by their hospitality—yet was in no mood to go off.

In continuance, he said: It has been suggested that I might tell you somewhat of the history of the Turnpike—the freeing of which we now celebrate; but I have read in the Quincy and Hingham papers lately, so truthful an account of it, I do not wish to tread too closely upon the heels of that illustrious predecessor. Besides, history almost loses its value when we are living a volume-full an hour; and prophecy is worse than useless, when falsified each moment. As I saw the "rates of toll" come rattling down Paine's hill this morning, I thought how difficult it was to read "the signs of the times." Indeed, it seemed that "Barnum would had come to Danvers." I therefore will take you, my friends, with your permission, farther back into the past—even beyond the Prophets. (I don't mean the profits of the Corporation, it would be difficult to find that time), but to those good men, after whom the great men of our day were called—Abraham and Elias.

The first requirement of civilization is a facility for crossing the streams or rivers, separating, otherwise adjoining districts. Animals, before men, showed wonderful ingenuity in accomplishing this, ere man had ever felled a tree, that he might cross upon its trunk. Elephants of wisdom and maturity, always took with them when travelling, large trunks of their own, by which they could cross the widest streams with safety.

The spider, before any suspension bridge had been built of steel or iron, flung his more graceful web from side to side.

The nautilus with its tiny sail, danced along the waves, long before the white-winged clipper, or the black nosed steamer, rode along their swelling crests in beauty and in might.

The sea-shell, in its gentle murmurings, told better stories of some distant shore, than any telegraphic cable that man yet has laid.

The Indians, by means of a grape vine, carried in the teeth of some strong swimmer, constructed passways; had sweet intercourse with neighboring tribes, and wooed their dusky maidens, beneath the sylvan shades.

Mr. President: One of the most beautiful, of the many beautiful legends, for which we are indebted to the Catholic Church, is that of St. Christopher, who lived about the middle of the Third Century. The Catholics of Europe contain paintings of him by the Old Masters, who have vied with each other in portraying this favorite subject: Michael Angelo, Albert Duren, Raphael and Spada, have been, perhaps, the most successful. I remember seeing one in Florence on a gigantic scale, representing him some thirty feet in height. In all Spanish buildings he is the most prominent; he seems to have been the Patron Saint of the Spaniards, and therefore belongs particularly to you of "Old Spain," and to this occasion. His day is celebrated sometime in July. Had he been an American, it would undoubtedly have been on the Fourth—and he would have been canonized as we have been to-day.

The story runs in this wise: Christopher was a sort of Sampson of immense size and power—but was never caught napping in the lap of any Delilah—so never lost his hair and strength. Being a devout man, and believing more in works than faith, he was desirous of putting his great might to some good purpose; and he was advised to serve his fellow-men, by assisting them over a dangerous river, hard by where he lived. This suggestion jumped with his own inclination, and from that time until his martyrdom, his life was spent in the service of travellers. One dark night he heard the moaning of a little child, who besought his aid; the kind hearted man immediately took him upon his shoulders and waded into the rapid waters. All at once he found a new and easier way than he had ever known before. The burden upon his shoulders became lighter and lighter, and when he reached the opposite shore, he found that unknowingly he had carried the child Jesus.

Now allegories like all Scripture, are written for our instruction; and on this natal day of our country—in her deep distress—let us learn a useful lesson from this one; which is—that if we would cross the terrible stream which is now deluging the Nation with the blood of her children, we must not rely upon our physical powers—not upon brute force—but we must take upon us the Lord Jesus, and follow the instructions of the Prince of Peace.

Miss Dawes.

Lieut. Stephen Howe, of the 59th Massachusetts Regiment, arrived home on Wednesday evening last, on a furlough from the Army of the Potomac. He has been severely ill, at Mr. Pleasant Hospital, (Va.) He speaks in the highest terms of the kindness and of the untiring efforts of Miss Dawes to relieve the sufferings of the soldiers in Washington. She is likened to an "angel of mercy" in her visits to the hospitals. And particularly is she attentive to all those whom she can find from Marlboro! Always accompanied with supplies of all needful and comforting things, to gladden the soldier's heart. The ladies of the villages of this town have taken especial pains to forward to her due supplies for general distribution, and we are sure that none more worthy, none more devoted could be found. The soldiers have received from her a sister's care, and it may be regarded as most fortunate, that such an one is there ready and more than willing to devote herself to this benevolent and patriotic work.

We hope our people will keep her supplied with an abundance of stores, so that she may be able at all times to continue in her ministering labors, and at some future time be able to return some part of the accumulating obligations which are and may be due her.—Fellonville Standard.

Correspondence of the Patriot.

The Fourth was not celebrated here with its usual clat. We saw no balloon ascension, regattas or public fireworks, yet everybody seemed to have a good time. Steamers and pleasure yachts went to the islands loaded with excursionists; while hundreds drove out into the suburbs; still, there was no diminution of the living tide which all day long flowed through the streets of the "Forest City."

Two grand, patriotic Concerts, formed our diversions for the day. The former, was in the great City Hall, or State House, as the people hope to call it some day. The United States Band from Fort Preble, some thirty performers, played, as usual, in splendid style. Hundreds of children formed the choir—the girls being dressed in white muslin with garlands of flowers, and the boys in Zouave and other costumes. The singing in both concerts was admirable. The latter, the afternoon concert, was held in Mechanic's Hall, and conducted by the officers of the Central Church Sabbath School. Among the elaborate decorations of the Hall, we noticed two tattered rebel battle flags. They were captured by the Maine Fifth, and attracted great attention.

Between these musical festivals was sandwiched a Strawberry feast, the avails of which were, in addition to those of the morning concert, appropriated to the Christian Commission.

When the speculators found that the people were upping in the matter of a supply of unions to preserve the health of our soldiers, they at once commenced buying them up.

For the Patriot.

The New Quincy Company.

And the Governor's Call for 100 Days' Men.

Considerable misapprehension exists with regard to the late Militia Law, and its bearing upon the action of some of our citizens who are endeavoring to form a new military company. The President's call, through the Governor, for five thousand volunteers to do garrison duty about Washington, (published in another column) has tended still farther to increase the confusion of mind so which many have become involved. I wish to unravel this snarl, if possible; and, by a few plain statements, to set the matter in a clearer light.

There are two distinct points to be noted: First: We wish to raise a company of Volunteer Militia in this town. By the new Militia Law it is ordered that all persons in the State between the ages of eighteen and twenty-four, liable to military duty; and also, any persons between the ages of twenty-four and forty-five, who may choose to "join the organization, shall constitute the Active and Volunteer Militia of the State, and shall be formed by the Commander-in-Chief into Regiments, Brigades and Divisions. Moreover, such companies as may not have been already formed, shall be formed by the Commander-in-Chief, as out of the Active Militia; this is, out of all persons subject to militia duty between the ages of eighteen and twenty-four. But, according to Section 16 of the new Law, "The Commander-in-Chief may authorize the continuance or formation of volunteer companies, formed of members of the active or of the reserve militia, who shall be liable to all the duties of the active militia; but shall be excused from duty in the Standing Company in which they are enrolled, so long as they shall continue members of such volunteer companies."

Now it has been proposed to form just such a volunteer company in Quincy, out of our active and reserve militia; that is, out of citizens between the ages of eighteen and forty-five. And according to my reading of the law, it seems plain that no man who signs the Company roll renders himself liable to any further service than will be required of all men in the town, between the ages of eighteen and twenty-four, liable to military duty,—that is not exempted for special reasons. Nor can the Commander-in-Chief require the company, as a company, to perform military duty beyond the State limits. The members may volunteer to go outside the State, or they may be drafted to go, but their organization as a military company does not render them any further liable to be called into active service in the army of the United States than they would otherwise be.

Second: The second fact to be considered has no necessary connection with the first. It is this:

The President has called for "five thousand Infantry Volunteers from Massachusetts, for one hundred days' service, to do garrison duty in the fortifications near the city of Washington." They will receive in addition to the United States pay, twenty dollars a month from the State, and will be exempted from any draft that may be ordered during their term of service.

Now it has been thought that having formed our Volunteer Company in Quincy, and chosen our officers, we might very appropriately offer our services to the Commander-in-Chief, under this call. But even if the Company should vote to go, the individual members of it would not be personally liable under the call. Any one might refuse to leave the State, and their places would be supplied by the Commander-in-Chief, or otherwise.

J. D. W.

We have carefully examined the above statements, and believe them to be correct. ERENEZER ADAMS, Chairman of the Board of Selectmen.

HENRY BARKER, Representative to the General Court.

Since the above was sent to press, I learn that the organization of a regular Volunteer Militia Company has been deferred for the present, and that the rolls have been so altered as to receive the signatures of all persons who are desirous of serving under the One Hundred Days' Call. Already thirty names have been subscribed. Let there be a grand rally this evening, so that we may be able to send a full company from Quincy.

PROFESSORSHIP. At the commencement of the Western University of Pennsylvania, the trustees conferred the degree of Doctor of Laws (LL.D.) upon Benjamin Franklin Palmer, of Philadelphia, also of D.D. upon Rev. John Brown, of Pittsburgh, Pa. They also voted to establish a chair of "Physical Culture, Anatomy, Physiology and Hygiene;" and elected Wm. M. Cornell, M.D., LL.D., of Philadelphia, to that Professorship. Dr. Cornell has long made these subjects a special study.

Speculators have agents traveling in all the New England States offering the farmers thirty cents in the fall for their butter. These fellows, bargain or no bargain, manage matters to their advantage, as they generally suggest the idea, and are successful in trading, that prices will be much higher by the close of the year.

Mr. George M. Gage.

It is with deep regret we learn that this gentleman who taught the Adams Grammar School so successfully for the past fifteen months, is about to leave us for a more extended sphere of usefulness.

The educational authorities of his native state have called him home to aid them in establishing the first State Normal School in Maine.

This is a work for which Mr. Gage is peculiarly adapted. He is a graduate of the State Normal School at Bridgewater in this State, and has for several years been very successful in carrying into practice the plans and principles he there acquired. His career in Quincy has been eminently successful. He has manifested here an enthusiastic interest in his calling and has been an active working member of the town teachers' association, and has given efficient aid to the cause of education in various ways, in both town and county.

Succeeding a teacher who for a long term of years had enjoyed the confidence of both the Committee and the public to a remarkable extent, Mr. Gage by his thorough scholarship, his energy, genial temper and manliness, has kept the school fully up to its former high standing, and has been beloved by his pupils and respected and honored by their parents and the community.

And we have no hesitation in saying that all who know him will regret his going—and that he and his bear with them the best wishes of us all.

Boston Correspondence.

The week as to news and events has been exciting, and the public mind has been quite alive. The new Conscription Law, abolishes commutation; provides a bounty of $100 for one year's service; $200 for two years; and $300 for three years' service for every volunteer; and requires a notice of fifty days before a draft. It is said that all the bills passed by both Houses of Congress, have received the signature of the President, except the bill providing for republican governments overthrown or usurped by the rebellion.

A heavy tax bill is created, including 5 percent on incomes over $600. The fugitive slave law is repealed. Congress adjourned on Wednesday last. Senator Fessenden has accepted the Secretaryship of the Treasury and has entered upon its duties; an able man, and spoken well of by all parties; which is rare for these times. The resignation of Mr. Chase produced a mighty sensation in the financial community; but order again prevails in Warsaw. Mr. Chase made many serious misnomers as head of the Treasury Department. His legal tender project was a design to break down the local banks and to substitute greenbacks in their stead, giving him the entire control of the currency. The effect has been injurious. It is believed that Mr. Fessenden who has both capacity and integrity, with speculative experience, will declare no hostility to the great moneyed institutions of the country.

By a general order from Washington five thousand volunteers have been called from Massachusetts to do garrison duty in the fortifications near Washington for one hundred days. This is producing quite a stir here, and from present appearances the call will be at once responded to. A rebel raid has occurred on the Upper Potomac, extending into Maryland and Pennsylvania. It is probably a small affair, and that the rebels will soon be driven back to their old lines. Reports as to the capture of Harper's Ferry and Hagerstown are very contradictory, at any rate there is quite a scare in that quarter. We have another sensation item from Europe, to wit: that on the 19th ult., the United States Gunboat Kearsage, near the coast of France, captured and sunk the pirate Alabama, Captain Symmes; nine pirates were killed and twenty wounded. Symmes, though wounded, escaped by the trickery of a "friendly" Englishman. Later arrivals from England confirm the glorious news of the destruction of this noted piratical cruiser, and the victory of the Kearsage adds new lustre to the flag of Washington.

The Fourth of July here passed off very pleasantly. It was a day of unalloyed enjoyment. Business is dull with a growing tightness in the money market and a further upward tendency in prices—Gold in New York, July 5th, at $240.

VACATION. The public schools in this town are soon to have their annual Summer vacation. It will commence on Monday the 25th inst., and last six weeks, giving the smiling girls and roguish boys a good long time to gather the berries, go on excursions, visit friends and have a good time generally. May they return to their books with renewed zeal, and thus show their teachers and parents that it has done them good.

TO TAX-PAYERS. We would announce to those in this place, who may be interested, that we are informed by Mr. French, Deputy Collector, that he will be at the Hancock House, in this town, on Wednesday, July 20, to receive duties and taxes, under the Excise Law, for the year 1864.

HINGHAM AND QUINCY BRIDGES. We have received from E. S. Beals, Esq. a very interesting pamphlet, the title page of which reads thus: "The Hingham and Quincy Bridges: their freedom and the manner in which it was obtained—by one who knows." We think this work worthy the perusal of any one who wishes to know the trials and difficulties experienced by the petitioners in freeing these bridges. There are some very important things in this pamphlet, which we think should be known by the citizens of Quincy and vicinity. For sale at the Quincy Bookstore. Price, 10 cents.

GENERAL ORDER, No. 23. I. The following circular, received from the Provost-Marshal General of the United States is promulgated by order of the Governor for public information:—

"Circular No. 25.

WAR DEPARTMENT,

PROVOST-MARSHAL GENERAL'S OFFICE,

Washington, D. C., June 26, 1864.

Persons not fit for military duty and not liable to draft, from age or other causes, have expressed a desire to be personally represented in the Army. In addition to the contributions they have made in the way of bounties, they propose to procure at their own expense, and present for enlistment, recruits to represent them in the service. Such practical patriotism is worthy of special commendation and encouragement. Provost-Marshal, and all other officers acting under his Bureau, are ordered to furnish all the facilities in their power to enlist and muster promptly the acceptable representative recruits presented, in accordance with the design herein set forth.

The name of the person whom the recruit represents will be noted on the Enlistment and Descriptive Roll of the recruit, and will be carried forward from those papers to the other official records which form his military history.

Suitably-prepared certificates of this personal representation in the service will be forwarded from this office, to be filed out and tested by Provost-Marshal to the persons who put in representative recruits.

JAMES B. FRY,

Provost-Marshal General.

The men enlisted under the provisions of the above circular, will be entitled to the bounty from the State; and their families, the State Aid. These men are Representative Recruits,—that is to say, men induced to enlist, by the exertions of patriotic men who are not themselves liable to do military service, and not substitutes who are enlisted in the place of men either liable to military duty, or who have been drafted.

II. In answer to numerous enquiries, information is given, by this order as follows, viz:

Bounties to all volunteers will be paid to those volunteering, as well in advance of future calls by the President, as after any call is made. But the State bounties are not payable by law to drafted men nor to their substitutes, whether furnished before or after a draft.

The "State Aid" is payable alike to drafted men and their substitutes, serving in the Army or Navy, as well as to volunteers.

HEAD-QUARTERS, BOSTON, JULY 6th, 1864.

GENERAL ORDER No. 24.

Five thousand Infantry volunteers have been called for from Massachusetts, for one hundred days' service, to do Garrison duty in the fortifications near the City of Washington.

Their services are required at once. Officers in command of Regiments and Companies of Massachusetts Militia will immediately perfect their organizations, and report for orders. Gentlemen not in Commission, qualified by character and experience to command Companies, will be authorized to raise new Companies upon application to these Headquarters.

These troops are to be employed in Garrison duty, and must be raised without unnecessary delay. The troops can be forwarded by companies to report at Washington.

In addition to the United States pay, each non-commissioned officer and private will receive from the Commonwealth twenty dollars a month during their term of service.

Volunteers under this call will be exempted from any draft that may be ordered during such term of one hundred days' service.

The young men of Massachusetts are expected to respond to this call with the same alacrity which characterized their fathers in the Revolution, and their brothers when the President made his first call in April, 1861.

By order of His Excellency JOHN A. ANDREWS, Governor and Commander-in-Chief, WILLIAM SCHOULER, ADJUTANT-GENERAL.

These men are Representative Recruits,—that is to say, men induced to enlist, by the exertions of patriotic men who are not themselves liable to do military service, and not substitutes who are enlisted in the place of men either liable to military duty, or who have been drafted.

II. In answer to numerous enquiries, information is given, by this order as follows, viz:

Bounties to all volunteers will be paid to those volunteering, as well in advance of future calls by the President, as after any call is made. But the State bounties are not payable by law to drafted men nor to their substitutes, whether furnished before or after a draft.

The "State Aid" is payable alike to drafted men and their substitutes, serving in the Army or Navy, as well as to volunteers.

By order of His Excellency JOHN A. ANDREWS, Governor and Commander-in-Chief, WILLIAM SCHOULER,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

HEAD-QUARTERS,
BOSTON, JULY 6th, 1864.

GENERAL ORDER No. 24.

Five thousand infantry volunteers have been called for from Massachusetts, for one hundred days' service, to do Garrison duty in the fortifications near the City of Washington. Their services are required at once. Officers in command of Regiments and Companies of Massachusetts Militia will immediately perfect their organizations, and report for orders. Gentlemen not in Commission, qualified by character and experience to command Companies, will be authorized to raise new Companies upon application to these Headquarters.

These troops are to be employed in Garrison duty, and must be raised without unnecessary delay. The troops can be forwarded by companies to report at Washington.

In addition to the United States pay, each non-commissioned officer and private will receive from the Commonwealth twenty dollars a month during his term of service.

Volunteers under this call will be exempted from any draft that may be ordered during such term of one hundred days' service.

The young men of Massachusetts are expected to respond to this call with the same alacrity which characterized their fathers in the Revolution, and their brothers when the President made his first call in April, 1861.

By order of His Excellency JOHN A. ANDREWS, Governor and Commander-in-Chief, WILLIAM SCHOULER,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL.

U. S. 10-40 BONDS.

These Bonds are issued under the Act of Congress of March 8th, 1864, which provides that all Bonds issued under this Act shall be EX-EMPT FROM TAXATION by or under any state or municipal authority. Subscriptions to these Bonds are received in United States notes or notes of National Banks. They are 10 BE REDEEMED IN COIN, at the pleasure of the Government, at any period not less than ten nor more than forty years from their date, and until their redemption FIVE PER CENT. INTER-EST WILL BE PAID IN COIN, on Bonds of not over one hundred dollars annually and on all other Bonds semi-annually. The interest is payable on the first days of March and September in each year.

Subscribers will receive either Registered or Coupon Bonds, as they may prefer. Registered Bonds are recorded on the books of the U. S.
Treasurer, and can be transferred only on the owner's order. Coupon Bonds are payable to bearer, and are more convenient for commercial uses.

Subscribers to this loan will have the option of having their Bonds draw interest from March 1st, by paying the accrued interest in coin—(or in United States notes, or the notes of National Banks, adding fifty per cent. for premium,) or receive their drawing interest from the date of subscription and deposit. As these Bonds are Exempt from Municipal or State Taxation,

their value is increased from one to three per cent. per annum, according to the rate of tax levies in various parts of the country.

At the present rate of premium on gold they pay

Over Eight per cent. Interest, in currency, and are of equal convenience as a permanent or temporary investment.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as the various descriptions of U. S. BONDS. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties or stock companies or separate communities only is pledged for payment, while for the debts of the United States the whole property of the country is held to secure the payment of both principal and interest in coin.

These Bonds may be subscribed for in sums from $50 up to any magnitude, on these same terms, and are thus made equally available to the smallest lender and the largest capitalist. They can be converted into money at any moment, and the holder will have the benefit of the interest.

It may be useful to state in this connection that the total Funded Debt of the United States on which interest is payable in gold, on the 31 day of March, 1864, was $788,965,000. The interest on this debt for the coming fiscal year will be $45,937,126, while the customs revenue in gold for the current fiscal year, ending June 30th, 1864, has been so far at the rate of over $100,000,000 per annum.

It will be seen that even the present gold revenues of the Government are largely in excess of the wants of the Treasury for the payment of gold interest, while the recent increase of the tariff will doubtless raise the annual receipts from customs on the same amount of imports, to $150,000,000 per annum.

Instructions to the National Banks acting as loan agents were not issued from the United States Treasury until March 26, but in the first three weeks of April the subscriptions averaged more than TEN MILLIONS A WEEK.

Subscriptions will be received by the First National Bank of Boston, Mass.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
Independence.

By F. M. ADLINGTON—Weymouth.

Our children bear their fathers' seal,
Their love of righteous laws,
And with a like unflinching zeal,
Content in Freedom's cause.

You'll not mistake their origin,
The same old English grit,
That mark'd the Pilgrim Fathers, in Their sons is living yet.

Their merit craves old John B.
Affects to disallow,
But kindred blood reacts, and he Now feels his own veins glow.

His great brave heart has felt the shock,
That Freedom's trumpet gave,
And honors those who break the chains,
And free the suffering slave.

In spite of those who hold his hands,
And Freedom's cause disown,
He longs to lift his giant foot,
To crush oppression down.

The brave old Anglo-Saxon race, Vanguards of Liberty!
Will bear their banner round the world,
Till every land is free.

Then hail Columbia land of ours,
The battle field of right,
Where 'gainst the despot's traitor horde,
True men for Freedom fight.

On this first day of jubilee,
While all our cannons roar,
Proclaim this land of Liberty,
Will know a slave no more.

Proclaim that all who tread our sod,
What e'er their race or name,
Who bear the image of our God,
Have laws and rights the same.

Then shall the promise'd blessing like
The dew of evening fall;
When justice with her sword and scales,
Maintain the rights of all.

July 4th, 1864.

The Northern Tempest

The lightning flashes in the sky,
The thunders now begin to speak;
Our eagle sits, with sternest eye,
Upon his bravest mountain peak.

The Country's flag is proudly flung,
With all its stars upon the breeze,
And Freedom's voice, with trumpet tongue,
Is sounding over land and seas.

His banner waving, but not his plume;
And only when he roused the dead
That slumbered in the Nation's tomb!

The shade of holy Vernon starts,
And leaves his silent mansion dim,
Awakened by the beating hearts
That bless the counterpart of him!

The northern drum was slow to beat;
The God of Battles we implored,
To quench the self-deceiving heat
And madness of the Traitor's sword.

But now the storm beclouds the sun;
The tempest furies take their wing;
And Freedom's battle, well begun,
Its flame will through the nation ring!

It only now remains to pray
That God will smile upon the Right;
The tempest quells; and speed the day
Serenely marching through the night.

Anecdotes.

Where have you been, Charles?
In the garden.
No—you have been swimming, you know
I cautioned you about going to the creek—
I will have to correct you. Look at your hair, how wet it is.

O, no, no, this is not water—it is sweat!
Ah, Charles, I have caught you fibbing, your shirt is wrong side out. (Boy, triumphantly.)—Oh, I did that just now, and, climbing the fence!

An anxious father had been lecturing a disobedient son, and after a most pathetic appeal to his feelings discovered no signs of contrition, he exclaimed:
What, no relenting emotion? not one penitent tear?

Ah, father, replied the hardened hopeful son, may as well leave off boring me; you will obtain no water, I can assure you.

A young lawyer of Philadelphia wrote to an old limb of the law near Chicago, as follows: Is there an opening in your part of the country that I can get into?
Yes, there's an opening in my back yard, about thirty feet deep, no curb around it. If it will suit, come on.

A dandy at a hotel table, who wanted the milk pressed to him, thus asked it:
Please send your cow this way. To whom the landlord retorted as follows:—
Waiter, take the cow down to where the calf is bleating.

Den, said a little four-year-old, give me a suspense to buy a monkey.
We've got one monkey in the house now, replied the elder brother.

Who is it, Dan? asked the little fellow.
You, was the reply.
Then give me suspense to buy the monkey
some time.

His brother shelled out immediately.

NEW LAW

Relation to Dogs!

THE Following Law in relation to Dogs, passed by the last Legislature, has just been received by the Town Clerk:

CHAPTER 269.

SEC. 1.—Every owner or keeper of a dog shall,
annually, on or before the thirtieth day of April,
cause it to be registered, numbered, described,
and licensed, for one year from the first day of the ensuing May, in the office of the Clerk of the city or town wherein he resides, and shall cause it to wear around its neck a collar distinctly marked with its owner's name and the registered number, and shall pay for each license two dollars for a male dog and five for a female dog.

SEC. 2.—Any person becoming the owner or keeper of a dog not duly licensed, on or after the first day of May, shall cause said dog to be registered, numbered, described, and licensed, until the first day of the ensuing May, in the manner, and subject to the terms and duties, prescribed in this act.

SEC. 3.—Whoever keeps a dog contrary to the provisions of this act, shall forfeit fifteen dollars
to be recovered by complaint.

SEC. 4.—The Assessors of the cities and towns shall, annually, take a list of all dogs owned or kept in their respective cities and towns, on the first day of May, with their owners' or keepers'
names, and return the same to the city or town Clerk on or before the tenth day of July. Any owner or keeper of a dog who shall refuse to give just and true answers to the Assessors relative to the ownership thereof, shall be punished by a fine
of not less than ten dollars.

SEC. 5.—The Mayors of cities and the Chairmen of Selection of towns shall, annually, within ten days from the first of July, issue a warrant to one or more police officers or constables, directing them to proceed forthwith to kill or cause to be killed all dogs within their respective cities or towns not licensed and collared according to the provisions of this act, and any person may, and every police officer shall, kill or cause to be killed, all such dogs whenever and wherever found.

SEC. 6.—The Mayor of cities and the Chairmen of Selection of towns shall, after issuing their warrants to police officers, as specified in the preceding section, forthwith certify the fact, under oath, to the District Attorney of their respective districts, whose duty it shall be to prosecute all such offenders as fail to comply with this requirement.

SEC. 10.—Any town, city or county officer refusing or neglecting to perform the duties herein imposed upon him, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars.

SEC. 11.—This act shall take effect in thirty days from its passage; but any license heretofore duly granted under existing laws shall be valid for the term for which they were granted.

The Singer

SEWING MACHINES.

OUR LETTER A

Family Sewing Machine

Is fast gaining a world wide reputation.

It is beyond doubt the

BEST AND CHEAPEST

And Most Beautiful of all Family Sewing

Machines yet offered to the public. No other

Family Sewing Machine has so many useful

appliances for Hemming, Binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering, Gauging, Braiding,
Embroidering, Cording, and so forth. No

other Family Sewing Machine has so much

capacity for a great variety of work. It will

sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make

our Family Sewing Machine most reliable, and most durable, and most certain in actionat all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch which is the best stitch known.Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity, can see at a glance, how to use the Letter AFamily Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine

is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial tableto sustain the work. While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and chastest manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family

Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family sewing as our Manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes.The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

My Mother's Voice.

My Mother's voice! it comes to me
In many a lonely hour,
And o'er my soul a spell it casts
Of sweet and magic power.
In gentle tones,—the tones of love,
I hear my mother say,
"My child in sadness weep no more,
I am not far away."

Upon thy soul, my orphan child,
Thy Saviour's image wear,
And thou, in this sweet world of light,
Thy mother's joy shalt share."

My mother's voice! my mother's voice!
"Twil never cease to ring Within my faithful mem'ry e'er,
When touched a tender string."

My mother's God! oh, grant me this,
To hear my mother's voice,
Mid angel harpings round the throne,
Where sainted souls rejoice!

My mother's God, oh, let me lift
My voice with hers to Thee,
And dwell beside my mother dear,
Through all eternity.

Straps.

"Thousands of men," says Chalmers, "breathe, live, and move, pass off the stage of life, and are heard of no more. Why? They did not partake of good in the world, and none were blessed by them as the means of their redemption; not a line they wrote, not a word they spoke, could be recalled; and so they perished. Their light went out in darkness, and they were not remembered more than the insect of yesterday. Will you thus live and die, young man immortal? Live for something! Do good and leave behind you a monument of virtue."

The Prince of Prussia is by trade a Printer. According to ancient usage in Prussia, all the princes of the royal family must learn a trade. The Prince Frederick William learned the trade of a compositor, at the office of Mr. Hanel, of Berlin.

Condemn no man for not thinking as you think. Let every man enjoy the full and free liberty of thinking for himself.

After a boy had called several times at a store in Bennington, Vermont, the other day, for "Mr. Dewey," he was asked what he wanted of him, and coolly replied, "Oh, nothing; his house is on fire."

Abstemiousness and frugality are the best bankers. They show a handsome interest, and never dishonor a draft drawn on them by their humblest customers.

The saying of a White Mountain stage driver to a New Yorker sitting with him "I s'pose if I went to York I should growk round just as you folks do here," was not bad.

No mouse has a narrower or meaner hole than a person who vauntingly "retires into his own mind."

Let your expenses be such as to leave a balance in your pocket. Ready money is a friend in need.

Try this, some of you: Fasten a nail or key to a string, and suspend it to your thumb and finger, and the nail will oscillate like a pendulum. Let some one place his open hand under the nail, and it will change to a circular motion. Then let a third person place his hand upon your shoulder, and the nail becomes in a moment stationary.

A lady recently issued cards for a supper party, and had "No Butter" printed on them.

There are certain exciting epochs in a woman's life that are never forgotten, such as, for instance—the first time she carries a parcel; the first time she goes to an evening party; the first time a proposal is made to her; the first time she wears a velvet dress; and the first time she puts on a wedding-ring.

A nameless French author truly says:—"The department of those who are truly wise, when contrasted with the assuming air of the ignorant, may be compared to the different appearances of wheat, which, while its ear is empty, holds up its head proudly, but as soon as it is filled with grain, bends modestly down, and withdraws from observation."

The longer I live, the more certain I am that the great difference between men—the great and insignificant—is energy, invincible energy, invincible determination, an honest purpose once fixed, and the victory. That quality will do anything that can be done in the world; and no talent, no circumstances, no opportunity, will make a two-legged creature a man without it.

Miss B. says that the sweetest line she ever read was her Simon's name written in molasses on the front stoop.

A sound discretion is not so much indicated by never making a mistake as by never repeating one.

At Montmartre Cemetery a tombstone has been erected with a colossal tear carved on it, and the words underneath: "Judge how we loved him!"

Boy you are not far from a fool. "Well as we ain't more than three feet apart, I give in to that," was the reply.

All sense and virtue consist in moderation; if once they exceed the proper bounds, they become metamorphosed into folly and vice. The philosopher Confucius wrote a system of morality and civil policy, entitled "The Great Midway," intimating that the middle way is the best to follow.

Miscellaneous.

An Adventure.

I never attended but one temperance lecture, said our friend B., with a peculiar smile, and I don't think I shall attend another.

You probably found it dry?
Well, yes; but that isn't it. The lecture was well enough, but I got into an awful scrape after it was over, that I never think of temperance meetings without a shudder. I'll tell you about it. It was in Jersey City, where I was something of a stranger, and the night was one of the worst of the season. Boreas! how it blew! It was enough to take your breath away. Well, sir, the lecture was over, and making my way through the crowd, I lingered in the doorway, contemplating the awful scene, when somebody took my arm.

Where have you been? said the sweetest voice in the world. I have been looking for you everywhere.

Very much surprised I turned my head and saw—but I can't describe her! It makes me mad to think how prodigiously pretty she was!

With her left hand she leaned on my arm; she was arranging her veil with her right, and did not notice my surprise.

You have been looking for me? I faltered.

Come, let us be going, was her reply, pressing my arm.

A thrill went to my heart. What to make of my lady's address I did not know; but she was too charming a creature for me to refuse to accompany her. We started off in the midst of the tempest, the noise of which prevented any conversation. At length she said, with a scream—

Put your arm around me, I shall blow away.

I need not describe to you my sensation, as I pressed her to my side and hurried on; it was very dark; nobody saw us—and allowing her to guide my steps, I followed her motions through two or three short streets until she stopped before an elegant mansion.

Have you your key? she asked.

My key! I stammered, there must be some mistake.

O, I have one.

And as she opened the door I stood waiting to bid her good night, or to have some explanation, when, turning quickly, she said:

How queer you act to-night? ain't you coming in?

There was something very tempting in the suggestion. Was I going in? A warm house and a pretty woman were certainly objects of consideration, and it was dreary to think of facing the storm and seeing her no more.

It took me three-quarters of a second to make up my mind, and in I went. There was a dim light in the hall, and as my guide ran rapidly up stairs, why, I thought I could do nothing better than run up too. I followed her into a very dark room.

Lock the door, John, she said.

Now, as if I had been the only John in the world, I thought she knew me. I felt for the lock without hesitation; wondering all the time what was coming next. Then an awful suspicion of some horrid tricks flashed upon my mind, for I have often heard of infuriated men being lured to their destruction by pretty women, and I was on the point of re-opening the door, when my lady struck a light. Then—being an excessively modest man—I discovered to my dismay that I was in a bed-room! alone with a woman in a bed-room! I cannot describe my sensation. I said something I don't know what it was, but the lady lighted her lamp, looked, stared at me an instant, turned as white as a pillow case, and screamed:

Who are you? How came you here? Go quick; leave the room; I—I thought you were my husband; and covering her face with her hands she sobbed hysterically.

I was petrified. Of course I was quite as anxious to leave as she was to have me. But, in my confusion, instead of going out of the door, I came in; I unlocked another door and walked into a closet.

Before I could rectify my error, there came a terrible thundering at the front door. The lady screamed; the noise increased, and I felt peculiar, knowing very well that now the lady's real husband was coming and that I was in rather a bad fix.

Well aware that it would not do to remain in the closet, and convinced of the danger of meeting a man who might fall into the vulgar weakness of becoming jealous, I was trying to collect my scattered senses in the darkness, when the lady rushed to me and whispered to me in a wild manner:

What shall I do? If you do not go he will kill me.

O—but consider—

The thundering at the door drowned her voice—she flew to open it. As the wrathful husband burst into the room, I felt a little cold and crept under some garments hanging in the closet.

A groff voice roared and stormed; Othello was jealous and revengeful; Desdemona innocent and distressed; then I heard ominous sounds, as of some one looking under the bed.

I know he is here! I saw him come into the house with you! You locked the door! I'll have his heart out!

Hear me! hear me! I will explain!
As I was listening very attentively for the explanation, the garments under which I was concealed were quietly lifted, and fancy my feelings discovered in such a situation by such a husband.

Well, B—, we cried deeply interested, for we knew that every word of his story was true; how did you get out of the scrape?

I used a violent remedy for so violent a complaint. Driven in a corner—my life in danger—perceiving at a glance that Othello was not as strong as I was, I threw myself upon him, fell with him, and held him there until I had given a full explanation of the error made him hear reason, and tamed him to be as gentle as a lamb. Then I left rather unceremoniously, and I have never seen Othello or Desdemona since.

Army of the Potomac.
BELLE PLAIN LANDING, (Va.)
May 16th, 1864.

Dear —: We left the Fort Tuesday about one o'clock, and reached the city of Alexandria about five, where we embarked on board of a large transport at half past ten.

We arrived at the mouth of the Potomac Creek at five this morning. We got under weigh and started up the Creek. We got around so often that we were seven hours away a distance of two miles. We are about twenty-five miles from the main army. At last we have seen something that looks like war. As we were passing along from the boat, we passed by a number of tents in which lay wounded Federal soldiers; some with fingers, some with legs, and some with arms off. One poor fellow sat there with his leg off just above the knee; but not a complaint was uttered by one of them. Those of them that were able cried out to us, "Boys, you are going, now do your duty."

CAMP ON N. RIVER, MAY 20th.
When I last wrote we were at Belle Plain. We started from there about 8 o'clock in the morning, and marched about thirty miles in 17 hours. As we came through Fredericksburg City, we saw all those fortifications, and that famous "stone wall" of the rebels; about every house has shot or shell holes in them; and some are entirely demolished. Soon as we encamped, we turned in; it was between one and two, and had to turn out again at four. We ate our breakfast, and went to the right of our line. We found they were fighting pretty lively, but we did not get into it that morning, for we were marched up on the side of the hill and there held in reserve.

We were called upon to render assistance as they came off conquerors, and took the line of rifle pits from the rebels, and then fell back. The rebels found out that we were on the side of the hill, and commenced to pitch their shells towards us. But all in vain, for they all passed over. We were then ordered to the left centre of the main army, about eight miles off, where we lay twenty-four hours. While we were laying in the woods, about all of our troops moved to the left unbeknown to us. We moved to the right about four miles, and found that was nearly as far as we could go; so we formed a line of battle in Division column at half distance. We remained in that position half an hour, when we were ordered to move half a mile further to the front. Then Company F was sent out as skirmishers. In about ten minutes firing commenced. In succession followed the 1st Battalion of our Regiment; 1st Battalion of the 2d New York Reg.; 2d Battalion of our Reg.; 2d Battalion of New York Reg.; then commenced tough fighting. Before a shot was fired by our Company, the man on the left of me was shot dead. It soon began to grow too hot for us, and we were obliged to fall back; we stopped on the side of the hill, and then met the rebels within twenty feet of us. We stopped just long enough to deliver our fire and load again, and then on we went over fences and through swamps, until we got behind a log fence, there we began to pepper them. We now found out what force we had been fighting; Ewell's corps of 15,000 men—and we with only 3,000. We moved back on another hill and there our force held them three hours. A Maryland Infantry joined us, and then commenced as heavy fighting as has been since the war commenced. Our small crowd drove them over the fences. Finally, it grew too hot for the rebels, and they fell back. We fought until 12 o'clock, and then was relieved by old troops. At 11 o'clock, Friday evening, orders came for a march, and we encamped at four the next afternoon, and rested until four the next morning, when we started again; marched four miles and then commenced throwing up intrenchments which took us all day. The next morning we found the rebels had passed by in the night, and the 5th Corps after them; so we were ordered to follow; and here we are about ten miles from where we threw up intrenchments. This makes the eleventh day since we started from the Fort, and six out of the eleven the death whistle has rattled over our heads.

May 30th. We are now in the front, eleven miles from Richmond. Since I last wrote, we have had hard marching and plenty of fatigue. The rebels are trying to shell us out from where we now are, but it is of no use; although the shells buzz round us good. We have got over one hundred thousand troops, so I guess we are good for them.

Mechanicsville, June 4th. Since I last wrote we have seen hot times, both in weather and shot flying. The next day after I wrote, we marched about a mile and took possession of a breastwork that our troops took from the rebels in the morning. At night there was about three hundred men detailed out of the Brigade for picket duty. We went to the front, and the Brigade went back to the old works. We went to within thirty rods of the rebel intrenchments; there we were posted right in an open field. We were told that we had better intrench ourselves, for the rebels might fire on us; so we went to work with our hands and dippers, which were all the digging implements we had; we worked nearly all night before we got them dug. At daylight when some of our pickets went out, the first thing they knew, whiz a dozen bullets over their heads; they did not stop to go back, but put for the rear works. We remained there till about ten o'clock, the rebels firing all the time; then an order came for every one to leave and retreat back to the works—but only one at a time. Then the fun commenced; quick as a man would pop up his head to start, away would come a shot; about all of us got out—a few remained, not daring to try it. I can not see why half the men were not killed; but not a man was touched. After that, we changed from pickets to skirmishers, and kept up a steady firing until three o'clock; then we could see they were trying to flank us on the right and left of our works. We all now had to leave. I expected our Regiment would run first, but the old ones took the lead. You would have laughed to see us running, and the bullets flying after us like so many hail stones. We ran until we got under cover of the breastworks, where our men were; we then formed into line again, and started back, and charged double quick up the hill, and drove them out of their works.

Coal Harbor, (Va.) June 11th, 1864. Last Sunday afternoon we started from where the shot and shell were flying as thick as hail; and our whole Division came down here. At night we threw up breastworks and here we have been ever since. We have got four days rations in our haversacks, consisting of thirty-six hard tacks, two potatoes, one pound of pork, half a pound of dried apples, and our coffee and sugar. I am not sorry that I ever left the Fort; for I can now say that I have seen and done something for my country. I did not feel as if I was doing my duty staying in the Forts. You wanted to know how I felt when that fellow was shot by my side. I felt as though the rebel that shot him must die. So I took my gun and brought it to bare on him, and when the smoke cleared away he was on his back, but whether I shot him or not I cannot say.

One mile from Petersburg, June 19th. When we started from the Fort, thirty-four days ago, we had one hundred and four men in this Company; all we could muster this morning was fifty-eight. If we had obeyed orders yesterday we should not have had a dozen men left. We turned out at 4 o'clock and started on a charge across an open field; drove the rebel skirmishers out of their line of works, and followed them to within three hundred yards of their other line of works, where they had two lines of battle awaiting us. There we stopped, for we had quite a little place to protect us. But we had not laid there long before they commenced a cross fire on us, and we had to lay and take it. There was quite a number killed and wounded by them, but finally our batteries opened on them and they ceased. We lay there until four o'clock; when the officers began to fly round; then we knew something was to be done. In a few minutes orders came to detail one hundred skirmishers and start them right out. I was one of that number. It looked hard—but go I must. We had just got started from the Brigade, when they themselves started. About three hundred followed us; the rest would not go at any rate; about half of them came back all right. In a short time our Brigade was relieved by the 1st Brigade of our Division. They had orders to charge. About seven hundred started, and only two hundred came back all right. The old troops say they never saw such a slaughter in all the battles they were ever in. We have made three charges this week and lost about thirty men. There were two Quincy boys killed and one wounded from Company M. Edwin L. Joyce and George Turner killed, and Peter Talbot wounded. Petersburg is a hard place to take, and we shall find it so before we get it. We have had only one night's rest for a week, and have been in the front line most of the time. We have thrown up six lines of breastworks, and four of them we have done in the night. A soldier's life in the front is a hard one. No one can tell when his turn is coming. I will now close.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

Old ocean—bah. It was a relief to get upon the "sure and firm set earth" again; upon something that is reliable and will not bob around, wind or no wind. We were made as comfortable as we anticipated at the Washington hotel during our stay in Liverpool—one day and one night—we then took the 4 p. m. express train for London, and arrived at 9 p. m., where we commenced a second edition of English hotel life. Liverpool is a rank secession place, and has supplied the rebels with large quantities of arms, ammunition, and other supplies; and not content with such an exhibition of neutrality, her merchants have fitted out pirates to destroy our commerce. The property they have destroyed, the English government must pay for; and it should pay the damage our commerce has sustained on account of these rovers; there is at the present time only one about the Florida. Passenger cars, are called here, carriages; they are divided off into small compartments, with entrances from the sides. Passengers face each other, and the inside of a first class carriage resembles an old fashioned stage coach—minus the middle seat and the space it occupies—this is a cosy arrangement when the occupants are all acquainted with one another, and are all amiable and good looking—a conversation can be carried on without twisting one's neck, as is necessary in American cars, but in case a passenger is a stranger, and desires neither to stare or be stared at, or he sits opposite a Frenchman who indulges in garlic, or being a bachelor, and bashful, is seated opposite one of England's fair—under some such embarrassing circumstances a passenger can realize the superiority of American cars, where he can change seats or cars at pleasure, not being, as is the case here, locked in six or ten passengers together, and seated in such a manner as to require the exercise of great caution to prevent treading upon each other's toes. The first class carriages are well upholstered, and contain six seats in every compartment; second and third class carriages are built plain—the ends of the compartments making upright backs to the seats. renders them as uncomfortable to sit upon as the chairs of our Forefathers which are on exhibition at Plymouth; a thin cushion upon the seats in second class cars makes the difference between them and the third class. No passenger can get upon the platform leading to the train, without first showing his ticket and having it punched; nor can a passenger leave a station without first giving up his ticket. There are no platforms to the cars as with us, and the brakemen is accommodated with a covered compartment. No person is allowed upon a railroad track, and all crossings are made either under or over the track. Those precautionary measures are required by law, and it prevents many accidents. We should profit by this example, and Congress should enact a law requiring every railroad company in the United States to make a suitable passenger crossing, either over or under their tracks at every station; such a law enforced, would save many valuable lives—say two hundred annually. With us, dividends are considered of more consequence than human life. But here, railroad companies must use every precaution against accidents, regardless of expense. Hot dinners served to Legislators will not save railroad companies here from answering to the demands of humanity.

How to Manage Children.

When a child is hurt, never hush it up; it is an inexcusable barbarity; it is fighting against nature it is repressing her instinct; and for the same reason; if physical punishment is inflicted upon a child, never repress its crying; it is a perfect brutality. Cases are on record where children have been thrown into convulsions, in their efforts to silence. A thousand fold better it is to soothe by kindly words and acts, and divert the mind by telling stories, or by explaining pictures, or providing with new toys. We have many a time, in our professional experience as to children, found more benefit to be derived from a beautiful interesting toy, than from a dose of phys-

c. The greatest humanity a mother can exhibit in regard to her child, is to divert it, divert it, divert it; in all the pleasing ways possible, as we ourselves, who are larger children, feel sometimes really sick, when a cheerful-faced and much loved friend came in, and before we knew it we have forgotten that anything was the matter with us.—Half's Journal of Health.

The Invasion.

Startling intelligence from Washington.—The community have been in a state of feverish excitement for the past few days, by telegraphic despatches, of the threatened danger of Washington and Baltimore by an invasion of the rebel army. From late accounts it would seem that while Grant is knocking at the gates of Richmond to take possession, the forces of Lee are bivouacking within a few miles of Washington. Their numbers are estimated from thirty-five to forty thousand—infantry and cavalry. The first demonstration of the approach of the enemy was on the 8th inst., at Monocacy, in Maryland. Here our troops met them, and formed in line of battle on the left of the railroad at Monocacy bridge. On the right two Ohio regiments were thrown out as skirmishers. The latter were attacked at half past seven in the morning, but fell back across the river in good order and small loss. About 10 a. m., another desperate attack was made by dismounted cavalry of the enemy, but were handsomely repulsed. Their loss here was very heavy, our men having the advantage of using rifles, while they had only carbines. After fighting until 3 p. m., a heavy body of the enemy were discovered to be moving upon our left flank, in consequence our troops had to abandon their position and fall back. The enemy followed for about three miles. Our loss in this action is said to be about one thousand in killed, wounded and prisoners; among the latter is General Tyler.

The enemy levied a tax on Middletown of $20,000. The women are reported to have been insulted, their clothes stolen, and numerous outrages committed. The rebels are supposed to be Ewell's corps. At Frederick they set fire to the depot and a barn adjacent.

Later accounts say that a large force was crossing at Edward's Ferry, commanded by Early, Breckenridge, Ransom, Imboden and McClainland, that Longstreet was at Gordonsville on Tuesday with a large force to join them.

In a fight at Alden, Mosby captured eighteen cavalrymen and killed twenty. He also captured a Major and a 12 pounder cannon. One of the incidents of his operations is given as follows:

"On Saturday afternoon last, a party of ladies and gentlemen went over to Falls Church, (Va.), near Washington, to hold a picnic. In the midst of their pleasure, they were surprised at the appearance of Mosby and twenty-five of his rebel troops, who told them not to be afraid. They then danced a set with the ladies, after which they went to the wagons, devoured the cream and eatables provided for the occasion. They appeared to have taken it very coolly.

In retaliation, they destroyed the dwelling of the Governor of Maryland, and in their route passed within a few miles of Washington, leaving a number of their wounded at the mansion of Francis P. Blair, Esq. The residence of Montgomery Blair, Post Master General, at Silver Spring, Maryland, near Washington, was destroyed with all its contents. The rebels are now retreating, carrying with them a large amount of plunder, closely pursued by the Federal army. The communication with the Capital is now uninterrupted.

The Drought which we are now suffering, has continued for many weeks. Rain is much needed to save our wasting crops from annihilation. Our gardens, with all the artificial appliances have not the freshness and vigor of former years. Potatoes, and even corn, begin to show the effects of the long continued dry weather. And the apple trees are casting their half-grown fruit in such quantities, that we have fears for the result. Unless we soon have copious showers, we shall have but little to harvest in the fall.

INSTALLATION IN WEYMOUTH. Rev. Miss Olympia Brown, was installed as Pastor of the first Universalist Church in Weymouth on Friday last. Invocation by Rev. A. E. Edwards; Reading of the Scriptures, Rev. G. H. Emerson; Sermon, Rev. Sylvanus Cobb, D. D.; Installing Prayer, Rev. J. E. Davenport; Charge and Delivery of the Scriptures, Rev. R. A. Howell; Right Hand of Fellowship, Rev. E. Hewitt; Benediction by the Pastor. Miss Brown is a full graduate of a regular theological institution, and is possessed of considerable talent. She is not quite twenty-four years of age.

A PROCLAMATION. The President, in accordance with a joint resolution of Congress, has issued a proclamation appointing the first Thursday of August next, as a day of humiliation and prayer for the people of the United States.

The New Company.

The new Volunteer Company which has been recruited within a few days in this place, for one hundred days service, chose their officers on Tuesday evening last, and on Thursday started for camp at Readville, (Dedham.) It is composed of some of the most intelligent and enterprising young gentlemen of Quincy. It has chosen most excellent officers, all of whom have done service under this rebellion, and who have energy and courage to lead their companions onward, even into action. We expect this Company will do credit to this old town-honored town. The following are the names of those who had joined this Company up to Wednesday evening last:

Captain, F. EDWARD BENT,
First Lieutenant, WARREN W. ADAMS,
Second Lieutenant, ALBERT KEATING,

For the Patriot.
Correspondence.

So long a pause may puzzle you to find the connection in our correspondence, and leave us in the cold, so far as exciting any warmth of interest in our letters is concerned; but look at us still in Vermont, winding round mountains so high that one's neck would tire to look at—and wading through sand so deep that our carriage is full, and our patient leathers quite cheap; with faces so colored that our best friends might suspect our temperance habits, and you would fully agree with us that writing on such an occasion may be better assigned to the retiring hours of business life. Such are not all the scenes of country vacations; but fill them up with the variety which we find of interesting subjects, and the scene becomes an unbroken round of pleasure, assuming attentions which we seldom care to bestow so attentively on purely business matters. All do not go into this exercise of country life with the proper spirit. Some persons carry their business and their troubles with them into the country to torment those around them. Mothers, who have griefs, go there to give them full expression—return home, little benefited by the change. It is not necessary to be audible in the expression of trying circumstances. If we could carry about us the appearance of never having experienced any of the trials of life, expressing sentiments only which concur in smiling features, how much would the happiness of this world be enhanced! A sober-looking face may be expressive of much happiness; and the first simple utterance of the person carrying it about will only increase our own. A smiling countenance and polluted utterance, will corrupt wherever it has an influence; and such we would prefer to be dumb. We know a man, both deaf and dumb, who writes his sentiments on a slate. He carries with him a smiling face, indicative of true heart emotions. Nothing is heard of discontent and trial. He has none; yet we would think he had much. Sometimes we think of this man as blessed because he cannot hear nor speak! How simple and pure are his utterances! Were we to write every word we speak, would we not take pains to clothe them in the simplest and purest language? So ought we to speak—whether in the more unrestrained walks of social etiquette, or in the restricted realm of home, that our conversation may be as deaf and dumb to all that would occasion sorrow and despair in those with whom we mingle.

THE HUNDRED DAYS MEN. It is stated that the hundred days men called for do not count upon the quota of the State, neither will they be exempt from draft, though it is understood the hundred days will be deducted from their term if drafted. It does not appear that the militia volunteering, are called upon for any particular field duty.

Reception of 12th Reg. at Weymouth.

Probably the largest gathering that Weymouth ever witnessed took place there on Tuesday last, on occasion of the public reception of the brave and gallant men who left there three years ago under the command of Captain James L. Bates.

An invitation was extended to the returned veterans through Col. Bates, and some one hundred and fifty availed themselves of it, and reached the town about noon.

A procession was formed under the Chief Marshalship of Mr. Timothy Blanchard, and at once commenced the march to the grove in the rear of the Town Hall, in the following order:

Quincy Brass Band: Cavalcade of citizens of Weymouth, about 100 in number.
Weymouth Brass Band: Twelfth Regiment, Col. Bates commanding, about 200 men appearing in the ranks.

Officers of the 12th in carriages.

Comp. H. 12th Reg., 25 men, under command of Lieut. Lewis.

A Boys' Company of Military.

Children in carriages.

A couple of hundred teams appearing in the procession.

On arriving at the grove there was found ample provision for some six thousand people who had gathered, and this was provided through the liberality of the ladies, who not only furnished the eatables, but devoted their holiday to dispensing them to the hungry ones.

After satisfying the cravings of hunger, the company proceeded to the Town Hall, which was very chastely decorated for the occasion by the young folks of the High School. The building although spacious, would not accommodate half of the large assemblage in waiting.

On the platform in the Hall, the Selectmen of the town and the officers of the Twelfth were seated. The latter comprised Colonel Bates, Lieut. Col. Cook, Captains C. C. Wheeler, A. J. Gerry, and F. B. Pratt; Surgeon W. H. W. Hinds; Assistant Surgeon C. A. Wheeler; Lieuts. J. A. Allen, and Edward Lewis.

The exercises commenced with music by the Weymouth Band, after which, James Humphrey, Esq., was introduced, and gave a formal welcome to the honored guests. He said: "That undoubtedly when they enlisted they expected that the rebellion would be crushed in a few months, and that the old flag would wave over every fort and arsenal over which it had ever waved. It might be inferred, that the citizens of Weymouth were more partial to the 12th Regiment than any other in the service, but he thought in this case it might be excused when it was remembered that the hundred men who had left with it were of the best citizens in the town, and knowing how good citizens they were it was certain they would make good soldiers. That this was the case the repeated commendations of the Generals under whom they had served showed; the record of the Regiment was glorious, and he enumerated several of the battles in which they had particularly distinguished themselves."

After the conclusion of Mr. Humphrey's speech, the Quincy Brass Band played the "Bold Soldier Boy," as an overture to the presentation of Colonel Bates to the audience, who was received with enthusiastic cheers. "He said he most heartily thanked the citizens of the town for the kind words of welcome that had been spoken. More than three years ago the Twelfth had left for the war, fortified with prayers and blessings, and these were universal throughout the State. Referring to his old Company, (Co. H.), he said that they brought more men home than the other companies, from the fact that it was not engaged at Antietam or Bull Run, but nevertheless, they all answered nobly when called on, and had proved themselves as brave as their comrades." It was an ovation to the bravery of a deserving corps of noble veterans, and was most happily consummated.

DEATH OF THE HON. JOSIAH QUINCY.—Our community has been visited by a severe dispensation in the death of one of the most illustrious and cherished of her citizens—the Hon. Josiah Quincy. He died at his residence in this place, on Friday afternoon, July 1st, in the full possession of his faculties, at the great age of ninety-three years and six months. Aside from the infirmities of old age, he had been perfectly well, and rode out the day before his death. His demise was peaceful and calm.

Mr. Quincy was born in Boston, on the 4th of February, 1772, almost four years and a half before the declaration of Independence. He had filled several of the highest offices to which an American can aspire, and he never held a post, the duties of which he did not prove himself more than equal to. His remains were removed to Boston, and the funeral took place at the church in Arlington street, on Wednesday, the 6th instant. Rev. Dr. Gannett officiated, and many public bodies and a large number of the most eminent men in the Commonwealth were present. The flags on the State House and other public buildings were displayed at half mast; the bells were tolled, and a long procession accompanied the remains to Cambridge bridge, the body being interred at Mount Auburn.

NORTH BANK OF THE JAMES RIVER, (Va.)
JUNE 25TH, 1864.
To the Publisher of the Patriot:

I will try and give you a slight description of the 17th in our Corps. The morning of the 16th our videttes advanced and found no opposition; entering the enemies' works, capturing about one hundred prisoners. They evacuated very hastily the night before on account of Petersburg being threatened by General Grant's force. Our whole force was soon in motion, and the cavalry advanced to the railroad and destroyed some three miles, burning the ties and heating the rails so that they will be of no use. Our Brigade was on the right, and two companies from our Regiment were ordered out as skirmishers. They soon ran on to the enemy, and firing was kept up through the whole day; just at night they pressed our skirmishers very hard, and they were ordered to retreat, which they did in good order. Our Company, (G) was favored as one of the skirmishing companies.

We had one man severely wounded, but not dangerous, and one man taken prisoner, William Thayer, belonging to Quincy. We retreated back to our picket lines, and everything becoming quiet, the force retired, and our Regiment left on picket. It was ascertained from a prisoner, that late in the afternoon, we were contending with the advance of Lee's army. About 4 o'clock of the 17th, the enemy made a simultaneous charge on our works but were repulsed. Constant firing through the day. In the afternoon the enemy made three unsuccessful charges, but were driven back, and finally gave up the idea of capturing our pits. Quiet through the night, and we were duly relieved. We had two slightly wounded.

June 20th. On picket. Orders suddenly came for us to be relieved and be ready to move at 5 p. m., with two days' rations, one hundred rounds of ammunition, in very tight marching order. We fell in and marched to Jones' Landing, a distance of three miles; we halted and waited for the pontoon boats to be launched; at 10 p. m. we went on board and rowed down the river, about three miles, and crossed and commenced a line of intrenchments. Worked till daylight. Our force consists of about two thousand men and one company of cavalry. Met with no opposition in landing. One company of the 100th New York Regiment made a charge on the rebels' picket post, driving them in all directions. It was a brilliant affair. We had a brave and efficient officer commanding us, and we shall have a chance to do good service. We are under General R. S. Foster.

It is extremely warm here, and we have very hard work; but yet any thing to help take Richmond. The ground is baked as hard as the ground would be at home in December, when it is thoroughly frozen. It is almost impossible to pick it up, let alone shoveling; but our boys have a neck of getting a hole started, and of building up heavy works. We are in pretty good condition to receive the enemy if they see fit to give us a call. Guerrillas trouble our pickets and mail boats a good deal, and measures are being taken to prevent it as much as possible. We go on picket to-night, so I will close.

PUBLIC DOCUMENT. We have received from the Hon. Charles Sumner, a volume containing the reports of the Committee on the conduct of the War, relating to the Fox Pillow Massacre and the condition of Returned Union Prisoners. In the case of the capture of Fort Pillow, the evidence sustains the charge of cruel treatment extending to the verge of starvation. The photographic pictures at the end, of the condition of some of the exchanged prisoners, are palpable proofs of rebel brutality.

PRICE OF NEWSPAPERS TO BE INCREASED. The New York city newspapers, on or before the first day of August, will raise (the dailies) to a five cent standard. The advance would have taken place ere now but for the disinclination of one establishment to venture on the experiment. The increased and increasing cost of all the materials that enter into the manufacture of a newspaper has made this step a positive necessity, and one which can no longer be deferred.

The attention of our readers is called to the removal notices of S. Cohen & Co., Boston, dealers in all kinds of worsted, &c., to their new store 192 Washington street.

A GOOD TIME. About a dozen of our citizens, consisting of lawyers, doctors, merchants, &c., doing business within a stone's throw of the town pump, enjoyed a day most pleasantly, in sailing and fishing in the harbor, on Thursday last, on board the pleasure yacht, John Q. Adams. This boat is one of the best in this vicinity for a good time, and we are sorry to learn that she has been engaged for a six weeks' trip along the coast, by a party from this town.

NOTICE. The Ladies' Aid Association, are about sending a box to Miss Lucy Dawes, of Washington and would be glad of any contribution. Any packages left at the House of Mrs. Whitney will be forwarded.

ANNIE L. WELLS, Secretary.

HONOR CONFERRED. We notice that on Thursday of the present week, Amherst College conferred the title of Master of Arts, upon Granville B. Putnam Principal of our High School. We also learn that on Wednesday he was unanimously elected Sub-master of the Bigelow School, Boston.

Summary of Intelligence.

A Nashville letter of the 7th says that within the last two or three weeks, General Rousseau, has levied and collected over $10,000 from rebel citizens for the murder of four soldiers in his department; and he has announced that for every soldier murdered, the rebel citizens in the vicinity must hereafter pay over $10,000 to the widow of the deceased.

It is calculated that fully five thousand people were injured throughout the country on the 4th of July from accidents from fireworks, fireworks, etc. Two million dollars' worth of property was destroyed. The loss of life was, however, small.

The wheat crop of Rhode Island are feasting on green corn at this early season. It is home grown and earns a good character from those who use it.

The wheat crop of New Jersey will be larger this year than ever before.

Since the commencement of General Grant's campaign, 1000 surgeons and nurses have been sent to the Army of the Potomac, of whom 194 were private physicians of the Volunteer Aid Corps, 42 Contract or Acting Assistant Surgeons, 9 regular Surgeons, and 773 Nurses.

The Springfield Armory turn out 1,000 guns daily, and have 265,000 on hand.

The corn and wheat crops in Central and Southern Illinois are reported to be large and promising. The scarcity of laborers gives some trouble in gathering the crop, and in some sections the women have done the principal portion of the field work.

U. S. 10-40 BONDS.

These Bonds are issued under the Act of Congress of March 8th, 1864, which provides that all Bonds issued under this Act shall be EXEMPT FROM TAXATION by or under any state or municipal authority. Subscriptions to these Bonds are received in United States notes or notes of National Banks. They are TO BE REDEEMED IN COIN, at the pleasure of the Government, at any period not less than ten nor more than forty years from their date, and until their redemption FIVE PER CENT. INTEREST WILL BE PAID IN COIN, on Bonds of not over one hundred dollars annually and on all other Bonds semi-annually. The interest is payable on the first days of March and September in each year.

Subscribers will receive either Registered or Coupon Bonds, as they may prefer. Registered Bonds are recorded on the books of the U. S. Treasurer, and can be transferred only on the owner's order. Coupon Bonds are payable to bearer, and are more convenient for commercial uses.

Subscribers to this loan will have the option of having their Bonds draw interest from March 1st, by paying the accrued interest in coin—or in United States notes, or the notes of National Banks, adding fifty per cent. for premium; or receive their drawing interest from the date of subscription and deposit. As these Bonds are their value is increased from one to three per cent. per annum, according to the rate of tax levies in various parts of the country.

At the present rate of premium on gold they pay

Over Eight per cent. Interest, in currency, and are of equal convenience as a permanent or temporary investment.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as the various descriptions of U. S. Bonds. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties or stock companies or separate communities only is pledged for payment, while for the debts of the United States the whole property of the country is held to secure the payment of both principal and interest in coin.

These Bonds may be subscribed for in sums from $50 up to any magnitude, on these terms, and are thus made equally available to the smallest lender and the largest capitalist. They can be converted into money at any moment, and the holder will have the benefit of the interest.

It may be useful to state in this connection that the total Funded Debt of the United States on which interest is payable in gold, on the 31 day of March, 1864, was $768,965,000. The interest on this debt for the coming fiscal year will be $45,937,126, while the customs revenue in gold for the current fiscal year, ending June 30th, 1864, has been so far at the rate of over $100,000,000 per annum.

It will be seen that even the present gold revenues of the Government are largely in excess of the wants of the Treasury for the payment of gold interest, while the recent increase of the tariff will doubtless raise the annual receipts from customs on the same amount of importations, to $150,000,000 per annum.

Instructions to the National Banks acting as loan agents were not issued from the United States Treasury until March 26, but in the first three weeks of April the subscriptions averaged more than TEN MILLIONS A WEEK.

Subscriptions will be received by the First National Bank of Boston, Mass.

Second National Bank of Boston, Mass.

National Bank of the Republic, Boston Mass.

First National Bank of Amesbury, Mass.

First National Bank of Barre, Mass.

Poetry.

True Faith.

Old Reuben Fisher, who lived in the lane,
Was never in life disposed to complain;
If the weather proved fair, he'd thank God for sun
And if it were rainy, with him 'twas all one;
I have just the weather I fancy," said he,
"For what pleases God always satisfies me."

If trouble assailed him, his brow was ne'er dark,
And his eye never lost its happiest spark,
"Twill not better fix it to gloom or to sigh,
To make the best of it I always shall try;
So, care do your worst, said Reuben with glee,
And which of us conquers, we shall see, we shall see."

If his children were wild as children will prove,
His temper ne'er lost its warm aspect of love;
"My dear wife," he'd say "don't worry or fret, Twill all happen right with the wayward ones yet."

'Tis the folly of youth that must have its way, They'll repent turn from their evil some day."

If a name were assailed, he would cheerily say,
Well, well, we'll not join in the cry any way;
There are always two sides to every tale—
And the true one at last is sure to prevail,
There is an old rule that I learned when a lad,
"Deem every one good till he's proved to be bad."

And when in the meshes of sin tightly bound,
The reckless and luckless mortal was found,
Scouted and railled at by woman and man,
And put under rigid and merciless ban,
Old Reuben would say, with sympathy fraught,
"We none of us do half as well as we ought."

If friends coldness showed, he'd say with a smile
"Well if they must go, heaven bless them the while;
We walked a sweet path till the crossing ways met,
And though we have parted, I'll cherish them yet—

They go by their way, and I'll go by mine—
Perhaps in the city ahead we shall join."

There was sickness and death at last in his cot,
But still Reuben Fisher in sorrow bleached not;
"Tis the Father's affliction, let Him do what he will,
What comes from his hand can mean us no ill;
I cheerfully give back the blessing He lent—
And through faith in the future find present content."

Then he lay on his death-bed at last undimmed,
No terror had death at which he was afraid;
"Living or dying—'tis all well with me,—
For God's will is my will," submissive said he,
And so Reuben died, with his breast full of grace,
That beamed in a smile on his time-furrowed face.

Germs of the Beautiful.

Scatter the germs of the beautiful!
By the wayside let them fall,
That the rose may spring by the cottage gate,
And the vine on the garden wall;
Cover the rough and the rude of earth
With a veil of leaves and flowers,
And mark with the opening bud and cup
The march of summer hours.

Scatter the germs of the beautiful
In the holy shrine of home;
Let the pure and the fair, and the graceful there
In the loveliest lustre come;
Leave not a trace of deformity
In the temple of the heart,
But gather about its hearth the germs
Of Nature and of Art.

Scatter the germs of the beautiful
In the temples of our God—
The God who starred the uplifted sky,
And flowered the trampled sod;
When he built a temple for himself,
And a home for his priestly race,
He reared each charm in symmetry
And covered each line in grace.

Scatter the germs of the beautiful
In the depths of the human soul;
They shall bud and blossom and bear this fruit
While the endless ages roll;
Plant with the flowers of clarity
The portals of the tomb,
And the fair and the pure about thy path
In Paradise shall bloom.

Anecdotes.

I come for the saw, Sir, said an urchin.
What sawer?
Why, the saw, Sir, that you borrowed.
I borrowed no sawer.

Sure you did, Sir—borrowed our saw, Sir.
Be off, I never borrowed your sawer.
But you did, Sir—there's the saw, Sir, now, Sir.

Oh! you want the saw?
Now my child, said a schoolmistress, I hope you will be good, so that I shall not have to whip you again.

If you must whip any one, said the youngster, you'd better whip one of your own size.

I am astonished, my dear young lady at your sentiments; you make me start.
Well, sir, I have been wanting you to start for the last half hour.

A good anecdote is told of the celebrated Dr. Abernethy. His prescription to a wealthy patient was:
Let your servant bring to you three or four pails of water and put it into a wash-tub; take off your clothes, get into it, and from head to foot rub yourself well with it, and you'll recover.

This advice of yours seems very much like telling me to wash myself, said the patient.
Well, said Abernethy, it is open to that objection.

GENTLEMEN!
Please call at the subscriber's place of business and get measured for one of Butterick's Perfect Fitting SHIRT PATTERNS!
Then you can have Good Fitting Shirts for a lifetime, at a trifling expense.
Notice the benefits which you will receive by procuring a Pattern cut by this celebrated rule:
First—You will always have Good Fitting Shirts.
Second—They will be cut from Less Cloth, thereby saving expense, and be perfectly easy to the wearer, as the proper quantity of Cloth is put in the Right Place.
Third—You will receive printed Directions with each Pattern, setting forth how to prepare the Cloth, cut and make the Shirt, quantity of Cloth and Trimmings for each pair, and the proper width of Cloth to purchase; thereby saving Cloth and many attches.
There is much time saved by using a Pattern cut by measure, with Directions so plain that any intelligent person will understand them.
EVERY PATTERN WARRANTED TO FIT.

THE SINGER
SEWING MACHINES.
OUR LETTER A
Family Sewing Machine
Is fast gaining a world wide reputation.
It is beyond doubt the
BEST AND CHEAPEST
And Most Beautiful of all Family Sewing
Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful appliances for Hemming, Binding, Filling, Tucking, Gathering, Quilting, Braiding,
Embroidering, Cording, and so forth. No
other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable,
and most durable, and most certain in action
at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch which is the best stitch known.
Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity,
can see at a glance, how to use the Letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine
is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine
when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work. While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and chast-est manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb
manner.
It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family
sewing as our Manufacturing machines are
for manufacturing purposes.
The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

NEW LAW

Relation to Dogs!
THE Following Law in relation to Dogs,
passed by the last Legislature, has just been received by the Town Clerk:

CHAPTER 299.
SEC. 1.—Every owner or keeper of a dog shall,
annually, on or before the thirtieth day of April,
cause it to be registered, numbered, described,
and licensed, for one year from the first day of the ensuing May, in the office of the Clerk of the city or town wherein he resides, and shall cause it to wear around its neck a collar distinctly marked with its owner's name and the registered number, and shall pay for such license two dollars
for a male dog and five for a female dog.

SEC. 2.—Any person becoming the owner or keeper of a dog not duly licensed, on or after the first day of May, shall cause said dog to be registered, numbered, described, and licensed, and the first day of the ensuing May, in the manner, and subject to the terms and duties, prescribed in this act.

SEC. 3.—Whoever keeps a dog contrary to the provisions of this act, shall forfeit fifteen dollars
to be recovered by complaint.

SEC. 4.—The Assessors of the cities and towns
shall, annually, take a list of all dogs owned or kept in their respective cities and towns, on the first day of May, with their owners' or keepers'
names, and return the same to the City or Town Clerk on or before the tenth day of July. Any owner or keeper of a dog who shall refuse to give just and true answers to the Assessors relative to the ownership thereof, shall be punished by a fine
of not less than ten dollars.

SEC. 5.—The Mayor of cities and the Chairmen of Selectmen of towns shall, annually, within ten days from the first of July, issue a warrant to one or more police officers or constables, directing them to proceed forthwith to kill or cause to be killed all dogs within their respective cities or towns not licensed and collared according to the provisions of this act, and any person may, and
every police officer shall, kill or cause to be killed, all such dogs whenever and wherever found.

SEC. 6.—The Mayor of cities and the Chairmen of Selectmen of towns shall, after issuing their warrant to police officers, as specified in the preceding section, forthwith certify the fact, by deed on oath, to the District Attorney of their respective districts, whose duty it shall be to prosecute all such officers as fail to comply with this requirement.

SEC. 7.—Any town, city or county officer refusing or neglecting to perform the duties herein imposed upon him, shall be punished by a fine
not exceeding one hundred dollars.

SEC. 8.—This act shall take effect in thirty days from its passage, but any license heretofore duly granted under existing laws shall be valid for the term for which they were granted.
(Approved May 14th, 1864.)

CAUTION
TO FEMALES IN DELICATE HEALTH.
DR. DOW, Physician and Surgeon, No. 7
Edicott Street, Boston, is consulted daily
for all diseases incident to the female system.
Prolapsus Uteri or Falling of the Womb, Fluor
Albus, Suppression, and other Menstrual derangements, are all treated on new pathological principles, and speedily relieved in a very few days. So invariably certain is the new mode of treatment, that most obstinate complaints yield under it, and the afflicted person soon rejoices in perfect health.

Dr. Dow has no doubt had greater experience in the cure of diseases of women than any other physician in Boston.
Boarding accommodations for patients who may wish to stay in Boston a few days under his treatment.
Dr. Dow, since 1845, having confined his whole attention to an office practice for the cure
of Private Diseases and Female Complaints, acknowledges no superior in the United States.

Another of the Father's gone; To slumber in the silent dust; But none for him has come to mourn; Who filled so well each place of trust; Loved most by those who knew him best, He's left behind an honored name! Death's angel saw he needed rest, And so to his relief he came; O, may the mantle which he wore, On his survivors gently fall; And as we think his virtues o'er, May each in life transcribe them all! And unto each the boon be given, To meet the "sainted one," in heaven. Saturday Evening Express.

Scraps.

Erskine puzzled the wits of his acquaintance by inscribing to a tea-chest the word "Tudors." It was some time before they found out the wit of this in the literal translation—"Thou tea-chest." (Thou tea-chest.) People who cross the ocean for mere pleasure generally conclude, before finishing the voyage, that they were wretched fools.

Bodily Deformity.—Getting up one's back at nothing, and being always bent on mischief. Michelet, the French author, asserts that "every folly of woman is born of the stupidity of man."

What old names some mortals are blessed with! A family in Michigan actually named their last son Finis, supposing that it was their last; but they afterwards happened to have a daughter and two sons, whom they called Addenda, Appendix, and Supplement. A man in Pennsylvania named his son James Also, and the third William Likewise.

A gentleman of the old school in one of the horse cars, the other day, gave his seat up to a lady who failed to make the proper acknowledgment. Standing a while after the car had moved on, he stooped over as if to listen, and said to her, "What did you say, madam?" "Nothing, sir," was the reply of the startled lady, "excuse me; I thought you said, 'Thankee!'"

"Going the whole hog" is now politely rendered, "accelerating the total piggy."

Why are ladies the biggest thieves in existence? Because they steal their petticoats, bone their stays, and crib the babies. Yes, and look their eyes, too.

A boy was asked if he was a copperhead. "No," said he, looking at his shoes, "I'm copper toed."

Silence may sometimes be very manly, but it is most unwomanly.

If a man wants to consider it clear duty or ingers to prepare for it, it is either left undone or done feebly.

Human nature is so constituted, that all see and judge better in the affairs of other men than in their own.

"I see the villain in your face," said a Western Judge to a prisoner. "May it please your worship," replied the prisoner, "that must be a personal reflection, sure."

No man can avoid his own company, so he had best make it as good as possible.

A woman had better not marry a widower by trade.

A fool in high station is like a man on top of a monument—everybody appears small to him, and he appears small to everybody.

When a woman intends to give a man the mitten she begins by knitting her eyebrows.

A silent wag—the wag of a dog's tail.

The Richmond Examiner says the Southern people can raise any article of Northern industry. Some witty wag coolly asks: Why don't they raise the blockade?

Why is it vulgar to send a telegram? Because it is making use of flash language.

A young man arrested at the Philadelphia Fair was searched and the following articles found in his possession:—One silver watch, one bottle of verberna water, two bottles of white pond lily, two bottles of extracts, two steel chains, one box of ladies' hair pins, a small inkjet, a toy shovel, two toy watches and a bottle of perfume. The prisoner seemed rather perplexed at this exposure.

A celebrated judge, who stooped very much when walking, had a stone thrown at him one day, which fortunately passed over him without hitting him. Turning to a friend, he remarked: "Had I been an upright judge, that stone might have caused my death."

A prison philanthropist recently passing by the jail of a country town, heard one of the prisoners, through the grates of his cell, singing in the softest and most melodious tone, that favorite song—"Home, Sweet Home." His sympathies were very much excited in favor of the unfortunate tenant of the dungeon, and upon inquiring the cause of his incarceration, was informed that it was for beating his wife!

Tom Hood speaks of a bird building its nest on the ledge over the door of a doctor's office, as an attempt to rear its young in the very jaws of death.

We dislike to see a man maintain his position so strongly, that he will neither listen to reason, nor move when his wife is sweeping.

Miscellaneous.

An Ingenious Defence.

If rogues exercised one-half the industry and ingenuity to be successful in an honest calling, which they put forth in knavery, they would be sure to stand high in any profession or trade. The following narrative shows what shrewd devices they adopt, and what perils they boldly incur, to secure their objects:

Many years ago, a gentleman, followed by a servant in livery, rode into an inn in the west of England one evening, a little before dusk. He told the landlord that he should be engaged by business in that part of the country for a few days, and wished to know if there were any amusements going on in the town to fill up the intervals of time. The landlord replied that it was their assize week, and he would therefore be at no loss to pass away his leisure hours. On the gentleman's making answer that this was fortunate, for he was fond of hearing trials, the other said that a very interesting case of robbery would come on the next day, on which people's opinions were very much divided, the evidence being very strong against the prisoner, but the man himself persisted resolutely in declaring that he was in a distant part of the kingdom at the time the robbery was committed.

The guest manifested considerable anxiety to hear the trial, but as the court would probably be crowded, expressed some doubt of getting a place. The landlord told him there could be no difficulty in a gentleman of his appearance getting a seat, but that, to prevent any accident, he would himself go with him and speak to one of the beaules. Accordingly they went into court the next morning, and through the landlord's interest with the officers of the court, the gentleman was shown to a seat on the bench. Presently the trial began.

While the evidence was proceeding against him, the prisoner had remained with his eyes fixed on the floor, seemingly very much depressed; till, on being called on for his defence, he looked up, and seeing the stranger, he suddenly fainted. This excited some surprise, and it seemed, at first, like a trick to gain time. As soon as he came to himself, being asked by the judge the cause of his behavior, he said:

O, my lord, I see a person who can save my life; that gentleman, pointing to the stranger, can prove I am innocent; might I not have leave to put a few questions to him?

The eyes of the whole court were now turned upon the gentleman, who said he felt in a very awkward situation to be called upon, as he did not remember to have seen the man before, but that he would answer any question that was asked him.

Well, then, said the man, don't you recollect landing at Dover at such a time.

To this the gentleman answered that he had landed at Dover not long before, but he could not tell whether it was on the day he mentioned or not.

Well, said he, but don't you recollect that a person in a blue jacket and trousers carried your trunk to the inn?

To this he answered that of course some person had carried his trunk for him, but that he did not know what dress he wore.

But, said the prisoner, don't you remember that the person who went with you from the boat told you a story of his being in the service; that he showed you a scar he had on one side of the forehead?

During this last question the face of the stranger underwent a considerable change. He said he certainly did recollect such a circumstance; and on the man pushing his hair aside and showing the scar, he became quite sure that he saw the same person. A buzz of satisfaction now ran through the court; for the day on which, according to the prisoner's account, the gentleman had met him at Dover, was the same on which he was charged with the robbery in a distant part of the country. The stranger, however, said he could not be certain of the time, but said he sometimes made a memorandum of dates in his pocket-book, and might possibly have done so on this occasion. On turning to his pocket-book, he found a memorandum of the time he landed, which corresponded with the prisoner's assertion. This being the only circumstance necessary to prove the alibi, the prisoner was immediately acquitted, amidst the applause and congratulations of the whole court.

Within less than a month after this, the gentleman who came to the inn attended by the servant in livery, the servant who followed him, and the prisoner who had been acquitted, were all three brought back together to the same jail for robbing the mail!

It turned out that this clever defence at the trial was a scheme skilfully arranged by the thief's confederates to obtain the release of their accomplice.

Foreign Correspondence

LONDON, June 24, 1864.

To the Publisher of the Patriot: The question is often asked here, how are you Americans going to pay your public debt? just as if the United States are less able to pay a national debt than the United Kingdom of Great Britain.

The answer to the question is, we will pay the national debt by levying an export duty upon cotton, of fifteen cents per pound—and this method is practical; because, after paying such an export duty, we can furnish England and other foreign countries cotton for a less price than they can obtain it from any other source. We can raise cotton with slave labor, for six cents per pound, and make a profit; and with free labor, which will hereafter be employed, cotton can be produced at a much less price. This is how we can pay our national debt; and the time, when the rebellion is subdued, can be estimated by Englishmen, who are the chief purchasers of American cotton, and are well posted on cotton statistics; but to say nothing of cotton, tobacco, grain and other products, which our soil and climate produces in abundance, with little labor; or our mineral resources, yet to be developed, and made to contribute to the visible wealth of the nation. We are better able to pay our national debt at the present time, than England is to pay her debt. Let us compare the debts and the resources of the two countries at the present time; and for the purpose of making a fair comparison, let us suppose both countries to be at peace with all the world.

The United States government owe a debt of $1,700,000,000; by the census of 1860, the value of the real and personal property in the United States, is $16,150,616,065; annual products or income, $1,900,000,000; population, 31,415,575; say, $55,000,000; the interest on the national debt is, say, $35,000,000; the other expenses of our government in time of peace, with a standing army to support, will be according to the estimate of Amasa Walker, $10,000,000.

The national debt of England is $791,574,000, sterling, equal in Federal money, to say, $3,957,870,000; the value of her real and personal property is estimated by the Edinburgh Review, to be $5,000,000,000; equal, to say, $30,000,000,000; her annual products or income, as estimated by the Chancellor of Exchequer, is, $560,000,000, or, $2,800,000,000; population in round numbers, is, $25,000,000. The interest on the national debt at 3 per cent. per annum, is, $118,736,100; and the other annual expenses of the government, are, say, $218,626,460; making the total annual expenses, $337,362,560. It will be observed that while the national debt of the United States equals 10 1/2 per cent. of the property in the United States, the debt of Great Britain is more than 13 per cent. of the value of her property; that while the annual expenses of the Federal government are equal to 1 1/2-100 per cent. of the property in the States, the annual expenses of Her Majesty's government are equal to 1 1/2-100 per cent. of the property in Great Britain; that while 10 1/2 per cent. of the annual products or income of the United States will pay the annual expenses of the government, it takes more than 13 per cent. of the annual income of Great Britain to pay her annual government expenses; that while in the United States, a tax of $6 1/2 upon every inhabitant will pay the annual expenses of government, in England it will require a tax of $12 65 to meet her annual expenses.

Englishmen seem to be influenced very much by the political prints, and most of them here are under the control of secessionists, or their sympathizers—and in lying, they beat the Boston Post and Boston Courier.

A movement is on foot to get a sword for the pirate Semmes; and to give all his admirers a chance to subscribe, subscriptions are limited to one guinea each. His subscribing friends must be few, or else it must be a costly sword. I copy the notice in the Standard of yesterday.

To the Editor: It will doubtless gratify the admirers of the gallantry displayed by the officers and crew of the renowned Alabama in the late action off Cherbourg, if you will allow me to inform them through your influential journal, that it has been determined to present Captain Semmes with a handsome sword, to replace that which he buried with his sinking ship. Gentlemen wishing to participate in this testimony to unflinching patriotism and naval daring, will be good enough to communicate with the Chairman of the Committee, Admiral Anson, United Service, court, Pellinell, or sir, with your obedient servant. SIX THOUSAND SOLDIERS' LETTERS. Five hundred thousand soldiers' letters were found north from the Washington Post Office recently. They are principally from the Army of the Potomac, and weigh upward of six tons.

Josiah Quincy.

[FROM THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.]

JOSIAH QUINCY was born in Boston on the 4th day of February, 1772. He was the fifth in descent from his emigrating ancestor, Edmund Quincy, who came to Boston with the Rev. John Cotton, in September, 1633. Edmund Quincy died in a very few years after his emigration, at the age of thirty-three, and little is known of his previous history or that of his family. That he was a person of some estate is proved by the fact of his bringing six servants with him; and that he was regarded as a person of consequence by the emigrants appears from their electing him in May, 1634, one of the Representatives of Boston to the first General Court. He was also the first-named of the Committee appointed to assess and raise the price to be paid to Mr. Blackstone for the relinquishment of his claim to the peninsula on which Boston stands. He purchased a tract of land at Mt. Wollaston, the Merry Mount of the graceless Morton, put to flight by Captain Miles Standish, and the scene of a romance of that name by the historian, Motley, afterward Braintree, now Quincy, a portion of which has remained in the family to this day.

The son of the first emigrant, Edmund, born in England, and a child when his father died, lived all his life on the estate at Braintree; was a magistrate and Lieutenant-Colonel of the Suffolk Regiment, and at the time of the deposition of Sir Edmund Andross in 1688, was made one of the Provincial Government that replaced him. His son, Edmund, born 1680, graduated at Harvard College in 1699, was a Member of the Council and a Judge of the Supreme Court, and sent to England by the Colony as its agent, in 1737, where he died, in London, soon after his arrival, February, 1737-8. The General Court erected a monument to his memory in Bunhill Fields, where he was buried, and granted his family a thousand acres of land in the town of Lenox. His son, Josiah, born 1709, graduated at Harvard College, 1728—was Colonel of the Suffolk Regiment, but not otherwise in public life—excepting that he was sent as Commissioner by the Government of the Colony to Pennsylvania in 1755, to concert measures of defence against the French, and especially to obtain assistance toward the contemplated attack on Crown Point. He succeeded in his mission by the advice and assistance of Dr. Franklin, as related in the Autobiography of that great man, and they ever after bore for each other, in Dr. Franklin's own words, "the most cordial and affectionate friendship." This gentleman, though verging toward seventy when the Revolutionary War began, was one of the few men of fortune and rank who was a firm and unhesitating Whig from the beginning. His youngest son, Josiah, known as Josiah Quincy Jr., he having died during the lifetime of his father, has his place in history as one of the prime pro-Revolutionary movers of the conflict with England, along with James Otis, Joseph Warren, and Samuel Adams. He went to England as the agent of the Revolutionary party here to consult with the leading Whigs there, but unfortunately died just before reaching land, on his return, April 24, 1776, at the early age of thirty-one years.

By this untimely death, his son, the subject of this notice, was left at the age of three years to the care of his mother. Happily that mother was a woman fully competent to the charge bequeathed her. She was the daughter of William Phillips, a merchant of the first eminence in Boston, who amassed a fortune large for these days, and vast for those; the bulk of which has survived the vicissitudes of three American generations, and is still in the possession of the present representative of the family. Her force of character and strong good sense prevented the passionate fondness of a young widow for her only child injuring him from excessive indulgence. Indeed, he used to attribute the excellent health which he enjoyed in so remarkable a degree during his long life, in a great measure to his good early training, and the correct physical habits he acquired under his mother's tuition. A remarkable proof of the command under which she kept her maternal fondness when it came into collision with what she conceived to be the best interest of her child, she exhibited in sending him away from her to school at Andover, at the tender age of six years, in the year 1778. This was the prevailing notion as to the proper bringing up of boys at that time, and she consented to what must have been a most cruel separation, in the belief that it was the best thing for him.

The Academy at Andover, then but lately established, was the first incorporation of the kind made in Massachusetts—and, we believe, in the country. It took its name of Phillips Academy, which it still bears, from the Phillips family, who had chiefly endowed it. It still retains a prominent place among preparatory schools, though it has been overshadowed by the Theological Institution, which, springing from the same root, has grown up by its side. In 1778, it was under the Mastership of the Rev. Eliphalet Pearson, L.L.D., afterwards Hancock, Professor of Oriental Languages at Harvard, and subsequently Professor of Sacred Literature in the Theological Seminary at Andover, in the establishment of which he was a main promoter. Dr. Pearson was a pedagogue of the old birchen school, and of any of the children committed to his charge were spoiled, it certainly was not from the sparing of the rod. Many stories of his severities and eccentricities lingered long about the scene of his despotism. He was, however, a good classical scholar, and scoured a competent amount of the rudiments of the humanities, as competency was then esteemed, into his pupils. After eight years passed under this stern discipline, Mr. Quincy entered Harvard College in 1786, being then fourteen years of age. At Cambridge he distinguished himself by his diligence and good conduct, and took his degree in 1790 with the highest honors of his year.

Upon graduating, he took up his permanent residence in Boston with his mother, and began the study of the law with the Hon. William Tudor. In 1793, being then barely twenty-one, he was admitted to the bar, and began the practice of the law. Though he had given due attention to his legal studies, and was properly diligent in business, his practice was never large. He had the reputation, a good deal exaggerated, of being a young man of good estate and large expectations, and clients were then, as now, inclined to give their business, other things being equal, to men whose fees were their daily bread. But, beside this, his own thoughts were turned rather to public than professional life, by the example of his father and the expectations of his contemporaries. We have heard that he used to regret this circumstance, and blame himself for not having confined himself to the practice of his profession more closely. But it is not probable, from the turn of his mind and character, that he would have attained the highest eminence at the bar; or, if he had, that his life would have been as beneficial to his country, or as happy to himself, as it was made by his unobstinate and useful public career. The world might have gained a pains-taking and thoroughly honest lawyer, but it would have lost a public man who spent the chief of a long life in the discharge of important offices, without even the suspicion of using them for his personal and selfish interest.

The period when Mr. Quincy was fitting himself for active life, and when he first entered upon it, was one of great agitation of opinions and collision of passions. The adoption of the Constitution of the United States, and the hopes and fears attendant upon an event so unprecedented in history, produced a corresponding fermentation of opinions and passions, increased and made more intense by the contagion of the French Revolution, which soon crystallized into the parties of the Federalists and Democrats—or Republicans, as they called themselves at first. These were natural parties, having their origin in the constitution of human nature. It could not be but that different minds, equally honorable and patriotic, should look upon so singular a political condition as the recognition of the people as the source of power with very different eyes. The sanguine and hopeful, in the fulness of their faith in the virtue of the people, had no doubts of the success of the experiment, and looked with jealousy on the interferences of the Federal Government with the action of the States. The more satiric and cautious, on the other hand, especially among the educated and wealthier classes, had less confidence in popular wisdom and self-control, and feared the attacks upon the rights of property, especially, would be made by the ignorant and the poor, under the load of artful demagogues. Such desired a strong Federal Government, which should control the supposed tendency of the masses in this direction. It is observable how little the lurking mischiefs of slavery were suspected in those first days of the Constitution. The poor laborer at their own doors, and not the rich slave-master a thousand miles off, was the object of dread and suspicion to our thoughtful and anxious fathers. Mr. Quincy lived long enough to see these earlier imaginary dangers exchanged for the more real ones of later days, and to see also the party at the North calling itself Democratic, and claiming identity with the Republicans of Washington's days, abandoning their honest jealousy for State Rights, and becoming the most impudent unscrupulous advocates of Federal Centralization in the interests of the slave power.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT. Saturday, July 23d, 1864.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

HON. JOSIAH QUINCY. In our researches for a suitable testimonial to the memory of the deceased, our attention was drawn to an article on the same subject, which recently appeared in the New York Tribune. It is full, comprehensive; going back to the earliest times; tracing the lineal descent, from their English ancestry, of the Quincy family on this Continent; the birth of the subject of this memoir; the student, scholar, statesman, and sage; with incidents of moment in the history of the country, with which his eventful life was connected. We know of no way in which we could serve our readers more acceptably. We therefore shall publish the article entire. The first part appears in our columns to-day.

PROMOTION. We are pleased to notice among the commissions issued last week from the Adjutant General's Office, one to Orderly Sergeant, George A. Barker, of this town, a member of Company D, 38th Mass. Infantry. Sergeant Barker has never been absent from his company during the twenty-three months it has been in the service, and has participated in the many engagements and marches in which the 5th corps has taken a part during the present campaign, having received only a slight wound before Petersburg.

THE DOGS! Many of the poor dogs in this town, during the past week, have had their tails cut off close to their ears, by the constables. We pity the canine race, but we presume the law must be enforced; and we would advise those persons having dogs liable to be destroyed to procure licenses immediately.

NO DRAFT IN QUINCY. Let every person liable to the draft, and in fact, every voter in town, attend the meeting this evening at the Town Hall. There is no need of a draft in Quincy, and there will be none if we do our duty this evening. Our quota can be filled; all it wants is money, which can be had. Let every man be on hand promptly, and take an active part in the good work.

EXEMPTS. There was quite a gathering at the Town Hall in this place, yesterday forenoon of those wishing to be examined before the Board of Enrolment. Quite a number got exempted for loss of teeth, over age, &c. We were unable to procure the list, or we would present to our readers the names of the lucky individuals.

PHYSICIANS' FEES. The medical faculty in this town have advanced their fees from fifty to one hundred per cent., in order to meet the increased expenses of living. For a single visit the price now is two dollars; for visits in regular attendance, one dollar and fifty cents; visits during the night, from two to three dollars; vaccination at one's residence, two dollars—and other operations in proportion.

HORSE RAILROAD. We understand the stockholders of the Metropolitan railroad Company, are sick of the Dorchester Avenue road, and propose to sell or let it to the Quincy Company, in consequence of the unfriendly action of the people and selectmen of Dorchester, who patronize and favor the Quincy cars. If the Quincy Company can control the whole travel and put up their fares, they can afford to pay the Metropolitan Company a good price, who can not now make anything themselves, or get any toll out of the Quincy Company, except by legal process, which will cost probably half of what they will get through Commissioners. It cost them $1,500 to get only $2,300 out of the Broadway Company.—Saturday Evening Express.

NOTICE. We would call attention to the notice of a meeting of the stockholders of the Old Colony and Newport Railway Company, to be held at their Station house in Boston, on Thursday next, as advertised in their card, which appears in another column. Prompt attendance is expected by the Company.

THE CROPS. The Chicago Bulletin has a telegraphic summary of the condition of the crops in Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan and Iowa. The reports from the southern part of Illinois are very cheering. All crops promise well except in fruit. From the other States, however, the aspect is threatening; a protracted drought is having a sad effect upon all kinds of cereals and even the grass is drying up. Wisconsin and Iowa especially are suffering, not having been visited by rain for seven or eight weeks.

BENNETT & Co.'s "One Price Clothing Store, 14 and 15 Dock Square, Boston." Here may be found garments of every description, manufactured from the best materials, in the most fashionable style, and on the most reasonable terms. The facilities of this firm enable them to meet promptly every demand in their line, and to give ample satisfaction to all who may honor them with a visit. See card in another column.

For the Patriot. Real Estate in North Quincy.

There has been considerable activity in real estate movements in this part of the town; six dwelling houses have been sold within a few months, the purchasers occupying them for their own use. One individual has sold three, and is engaged in erecting two more. In addition to this, several house lots have been sold. There is no reason why this part of the town should not continue to grow, and a large amount of property be added to the taxable valuation, if the town would do its part to induce people to settle there.

Good house lots cannot be obtained on the other side of the river, in Port Norfolk, or on the main street in Neponset, less than from ten to twenty-five cents per foot. Two lots on Walnut street, leading from the Depot to Neponset House were sold for the latter price—cash. On the Quincy side, good lots can be purchased from one and a half to three cents per foot, on land pleasantly situated; easy to grade—where we can get dry cellars and good water; and being near the Atlantic Station on the old Colony road, which, together with the good accommodations of the Quincy Horse Railway Company, make it a very desirable place of residence.

But the town roads are not what they should be. A few years ago, (when in the hands of the Corporation) the causeways over the marshes were narrowed by setting a new fence inside of the old one. The track for the Horse cars is laid near the fence on the east side of the road, so that the travelled road, on this great thoroughfare between the track and the fence on the west side is less than twenty-two feet; just room enough for a horse car, a load of hay, and a small boy with a wheelbarrow. Over these narrow, muddy causeways, without side-walks, inconvenient, if not dangerous, for women and children, the inhabitants have to pass when they go to market, to meeting, to stores, and post office, and part of the children when they go to school.

A stranger entering town from Dorchester, would imagine he had lost his way, and (instead of being on the great thoroughfare bearing the dignified name of Quincy Avenue, and leading to a thriving and populous town,) had taken the road to World's End, and was drawing near that famous locality.

On the Dorchester side, three houses and several other buildings were moved back, and the Avenue widened to sixty-four feet, including side-walks on both sides of the way. The material used for widening and grading the road, was purchased and carted from the town of Quincy. It is not always good policy for towns any more than individuals, to practice economy to such an extent as to make them appear mean in the eyes of their customers or the public at large. After the rebellion is put down, and the road to freedom is established, I hope we shall have a good avenue to Quincy. A TAX PAYER.

For the Patriot. Whispers of Peace.

The return of peace! With what joy will it be hailed! If the news just received is reliable, it may come in our day—perhaps this year.

The telegraph informs us that Horace Greeley and James F. Jaques have arranged a treaty with George N. Sanders and C. C. Clay, which is to be submitted at once to the governments at Washington and Richmond. It is said it cannot fail to be satisfactory to both sides; and thus the destruction of life, which has amounted to about one and a half million on the part of the North, and perhaps half a million on the part of the South will be staid.

All hearts bound with intense happiness at the thought, and all tongues will unite in singing that old anthem:

"Glorious to God in the highest,— Peace on earth—and good will to men."

ON A RISE. The Concord (N. H.) publishers have issued a circular, announcing that a general meeting of the newspaper publishers and job printers of New Hampshire is proposed to be held in that city on Friday, the 22d inst., to consider the expediency of a general advance in prices.

SUFFOLK GOLD MINING Co. We are informed that arrangements are being made for the purchase and erection of such machinery, as shall be deemed requisite for the proper development of this valuable property. The proved richness of the mines, leave no reason to doubt the permanent success of the Company, if properly managed. The property presents, it is said, the same indications, and offers as valuable returns as any mining estate in Colorado. Experimental openings or shafts have been made in all these mines, showing strong and rich gold-bearing lodes, true fissure veins and well-defined wall rock. Indeed, the property is said to be sufficiently developed to indicate the character of the mines, which are undoubtedly among the richest in the Territory. Other parties owning and working claims in the same lodes adjoining and lying near to the claims of this property, are obtaining profitable results.—Boston Com. Bulletin.

Deep Bottom, Virginia. JULY 11th, 1864.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

Every thing quiet around us, since my last. We have not seen any fighting, yet we have had the privilege of using the shovel, and also the axe. We have now a formidable line of works around us, and would be happy to meet the johnnies on our own ground, at any time they see fit to come. July 6th, one hundred men were detailed from our Regiment to go down the river about three miles and gather some corn that was stored in General Allen's barn. He (Gen. Allen) has command of the defences of Richmond. We went down and was not troubled by the rebels, although their pickets were in plain sight, and could see every thing that we were doing. We captured about fifteen hundred bushels of corn, besides destroying a vast amount of forage stored in another barn.

There has been now and then a shot fired at our "videttes" from some posts of the rebel lines, but we did not return them, thus giving them to understand that we do not intend to descend to fire upon one man that is simply on the watch to preserve his camp. We send out small reconnoitering parties every day, but we don't find much of a force very near us—which gives us to understand that they are working on the same principle that we are—and that is the "defensive."

The weather is very warm and very dry. We have not had any rain for the past three weeks. The health of our troops is excellent, only a few being sick.

Most every day we hear more or less heavy firing in the direction of Petersburg; and ere long we shall hear glorious news from Grant. He is working on the old Vicksburg plan, and will assure us of perfect success eventually. It is a hard place, and takes time to move; but, fall it must and shall at the proper time, is the belief of his whole army.

We have a pleasant situation for camp, being on the banks of the James River, which renders us facilities for bathing and washing our clothes. We also have splendid spring water close at hand for cooking and drinking. The Quincy boys are in good health and fine spirits, and ready for anything.

Respectfully yours, VETERAN. P. S. Our noble Captain, Edward C. Richardson, has been promoted Major of our Regiment. His Company regrets his loss. He was formerly a Quincy boy.

Army of the Potomac. CAMP NEAR PETERSBURG, (VA.) JULY 21st, 1864.

Miss Addie E. Packard: I received your communication of the 2d instant and hasten to reply. It will always be a pleasure to me to do all that lies in my power for the friends of those of my men that enlisted from Quincy. Their bravery in action, endurance on the march, and general demeanor as soldiers, has endeared them to me; and while it grieves me to be compelled to write that your brother is a prisoner, it is a satisfaction to know that it is no worse. Being of a good constitution, and being in good health at the time of his capture, I have no doubt but that Henry will be able to stand up, under the hardships he may have to undergo while in Dixie. I think he will soon be paroled. Should that be the case, he will obtain a furlough and be with you soon.

On the morning of June 22d, we were ordered to advance and build rifle-pits. To me, it appeared a very dangerous position, as we were in plain view of a fort of the enemies' whose guns bore directly on us. We had hardly completed our breastworks, when the enemy opened fire on us from one of their big guns, and we were glad to take shelter under the breastworks we had so hastily constructed. About 4 P. M., we saw the enemy approaching from the front in line of battle. As they emerged from the wood in which they had been concealed, we poured in volley after volley of musketry, and they fell back. We kept up a brisk fire on them, and they found it too hot work to attempt to take our works from the front. At the point of the line at which my company was stationed, our works formed a right angle; our Regiment being on the right, and Company M the right Company of the Regiment. Looking at the left, I saw company after company falling back in confusion. For a moment I did not understand what it meant, but was soon satisfied; the rebel flag displayed inside our line, and the command from the "johnnies" assured me that we had been flanked by the enemy. It now only remained whether to attempt to escape or surrender. I chose the former; with about fifteen men I reached a place of safety. Sergeant Burrell was killed instantly a few feet from the rifle pits. The balance of my Company in the action, was killed, wounded or taken prisoners. Lieutenants Brown and Osgood, with twenty-eight enlisted men were captured—Henry included. I have now given you all the particulars in relation to the capture of your brother, that lies in my power.

I am respectfully, your obedient servant, E. A. CHANDLER, Captain Co. M, 1st Mass. Heavy Artillery.

THE HIGH PRICES. The prices of domestic products according to a table furnished by the New York Commercial Advertiser, have kept forty per cent ahead of the advance in the price of gold, and have advanced more in the last three years in this country than they did in Great Britain during over twenty years of the long period of wars ending in 1815. This is purely the result of speculation, and must end in a crash among the speculators. Speculation on the scale it is now conducted tends to decrease consumption and increase production, and thus ultimately produce a fall in prices.

STAMP YOUR RECEIPTS. The new revenue law, Section 170, enacts—"Receipts for the payment of any sum of money, or for the payment of any debt due, exceeding twenty dollars, not being for the satisfaction of any mortgage, or judgement, or decree of any court, and the receipt for the delivery of any property—two cents."—Salem Register. The new revenue law, above referred to, does not take effect until the first of August.

AMOS A. MEARS,
of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, had on the Eighth day of February, A. D., 1864, at 8 o'clock A. M., that being the time when the same was attached on mesne process, to recover the following described mortgaged Real Estate, to wit:
A certain lot of Land with a Dwelling-house, and other outbuildings thereon standing, situate in Stoughton, in said County of Norfolk, containing one quarter of an acre, and bounded Northerly on land of Benj. F. Drake; Southerly on land of Nathaniel Morton; Southerly on land of Fisher Gray, and Northerly on the Street, being the same premises which Henry Allen conveyed to James Mearns, by Deed, dated the 21st day of November, 1859, and entered with Norfolk Deeds, Lib. 199, Fol. 115, or however otherwise bounded.

U. S. 10-40 BONDS.

These Bonds are issued under the Act of Congress of March 3d, 1861, which provides that all Bonds issued under this Act shall be EXEMPT FROM TAXATION by or under any state or municipal authority. Subscriptions to these Bonds are received in United States notes or notes of National Banks. They are TO BE REDEEMED IN COIN, at the pleasure of the Government, at any period not less than ten nor more than forty years from their date, and until their redemption FIVE PER CENT. INTEREST WILL BE PAID IN COIN, on Bonds of not over one hundred dollars annually and on all other Bonds semi-annually. The interest is payable on the first days of March and September in each year.
Subscribers will receive either Registered or Coupon Bonds, as they may prefer. Registered Bonds are recorded on the books of the U. S. Treasury, and can be transferred only on the owner's order. Coupon Bonds are payable to bearer, and are more convenient for commercial uses.
Subscribers to this loan will have the option of having their Bonds draw interest from March 1st, by paying the accrued interest in coin—or in United States notes, or the notes of National Banks, adding fifty per cent. for premium; or receive their drawing interest front the date of subscription and deposit. As these Bonds are Exempt from Municipal or State Taxation, their value is increased from one to three per cent. per annum, according to the rate of tax levies in various parts of the country.

At the present rate of premium on gold they pay
Over Eight per cent. Interest, in currency, and are of equal convenience as a permanent or temporary investment.
It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as the various descriptions of U. S. Bonds. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties or stock companies or separate communities only is pledged for payment, while for the debts of the United States the whole property of the country is held to secure the payment of both principal and interest in coin.
These Bonds may be subscribed for in sums from $50 up to any magnitude, on these terms, and are thus made equally available to the small lender and the largest capitalist. They can be converted into money at any moment, and the holder will have the benefit of the interest.
It may be useful to state in this connection that the total Funded Debt of the United States on which interest is payable in gold, on the 31 day of March, 1864, was $768,965,000. The interest on this debt for the coming fiscal year will be $45,937,126, while the customs revenue in gold for the current fiscal year, ending June 30th, 1864, has been so far at the rate of over $100,000,000 per annum.
It will be seen that even the present gold revenues of the Government are largely in excess of the wants of the Treasury for the payment of gold interest, while the recent increase of the tariff will doubtless raise the annual receipts from customs on the same amount of importations, to $150,000,000 per annum.
Instructions to the National Banks acting as loan agents were not issued from the United States Treasury until March 26, but in the first three weeks of April the subscriptions averaged more than TEN MILLIONS A WEEK.
Subscriptions will be received by the First National Bank of Boston, Mass.
Second National Bank of Boston, Mass.
National Bank of the Republic, Boston, Mass.
First National Bank of Amesbury, Mass.
First National Bank of Barre, Mass.
First National Bank of Fall River, Mass.

First National Bank of New Bedford, Mass.
First National Bank of Newburyport, Mass.
First National Bank of Springfield, Mass.
Second National Bank of Springfield, Mass.

First National Bank of Worcester, Mass.

AND BY ALL NATIONAL BANKS which are depositaries of Public money, and all Respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country, (acting as agents of the National Depositary Banks,) will furnish further information on application and Afford every Facility to Subscribers.

Poetry.

Hymn to the Night.

I heard the trailing garments of the Night
Sweep through her marble halls!
I saw her subtle skirts all fringed with light
From the celestial walls!

I felt her presence, by its spell of might,
Stoop o'er me from above;
The calm, majestic presence of the Night,
As of the one I love.

I heard the sounds of sorrow and delight,
The manifold, soft chimes,
That fill the haunted chambers of the Night,
Like some old poet's rhymes.

From the cool cisterns of the midnight air
My spirit drank repose;
The fountain of perpetual peace flows there,
From those cool cisterns flows.

O holy Night! from thee I learn to hear
What man has borne before!
Thou layest thy finger on the lips of Care,
And they complain no more.

Peace! Peace! Orestes like I breathe this prayer
Descend with broad winged flight,
The welcome, the thrice prayed for, the most fair,
The best beloved Night.

There are Two Ways to Live on Earth.

Two ways to judge—to act—to view;—
For all things here have double birth,
A right and wrong—a false and true!

Give me the home where kindness dwells
To make that sweet which seemeth small;
Where every lip in fondness speaks—
And every mind hath care for all!

Whose inmates live in glad exchange
Of pleasures, free from vain expense;
Whose thoughts beyond their means ne'er range
Nor wise denials give offence!

Who in a neighbor's fortune find
No wish—no impulse—to complain,
Who feel not—never felt—the mind
To envy yet another's gain!

Who dream not of the mocking tide
Ambition's foiled endeavor meets;—
The bitter pang of wounded pride;
Nor fallen Power, that shuns the streets.

Though Fate deny its glitt'ring store,
Love's wealth is still the wealth to choose;
For all that Gold can purchase more
Are gauds—it is no loss to lose!

Some beings, whoso'er they go;
Find naught to please—or to exalt;
Their constant study but to show
Perpetual moods of finding fault.

While others, in the ceaseless round
Of daily wants, and daily care,
Can yet call flowers from common ground,
And twice enjoy the joy they share!

Oh, happy they who happy make!
Who blessing—still themselves are blest!
Who something spare for others' sake—
And strive—in all things—for the best!

Gives.

If the poor man pass thy door,
Give him of thy bounteous store,
Give him food, and give him gold,
Give him shelter from the cold;
Aid him his lone life to live,
For 'tis angel-like to give.

Though world riches thou hast not,
Give to him of poorer lot;
Think thee of the widow's mite,
In the holy Master's sight,
It was more a thousand fold,
Than the rich man's hoard of gold.

Give, it is the better part,
Give to him—the poor in heart;
Give of love in large degree,
Give of hope and sympathy;
Cheer to them who sigh forlorn,
Light to them whose lamp is gone.

Give the gray-haired wanderer room,
Lead him gently to the tomb;
Let him not in friendship's clime
Float adown the tide of time;
Hear the mother's lonely call,
She, the nearest one of all.

And the lost, abandoned one,
In thy pathway do not shun;
Of thy kindness she hath need,
Bind with balm the bruised head;
Give, the gifts above all price
Shall be thine in Paradise.

Anecdotes.

Mrs. D— desired Dr. Johnson to give his opinion of a new work she had just written, adding that if it would not do, she begged him to tell her, for she had other irons in the fire, and in case of its not being likely to succeed, she could bring out something else. Then, said the Doctor, after having turned over a few leaves, I advise you to put it where your other irons are.

We have read about Young America several times in the papers, but we find an illustration of it in a boy about three years old, who, by the way, is a regular "shaver" in his talk. One day we were trying to learn him his alphabet, and asked him what B stood for?

George, was his prompt answer.
No, we replied, it stands for boy.
Well, ain't George a boy? he asked triumphantly.

NEW LAW

Relation to Dogs!

THE Following Law in relation to Dogs, passed by the last Legislature, has just been received by the Town Clerk:

CHAPTER 299.

SEC. 1.—Every owner or keeper of a dog shall, annually, on or before the thirtieth day of April, cause it to be registered, numbered, described, and licensed, for one year from the first day of the ensuing May, in the office of the Clerk of the city or town wherein he resides, and shall cause it to wear around its neck a collar distinctly marked with its owner's name and the registered number, and shall pay for such license two dollars for a male dog and five for a female dog.

SEC. 2.—Any person becoming the owner or keeper of a dog not duly licensed, on or after the first day of May, shall cause said dog to be registered, numbered, described, and licensed, and the first day of the ensuing May, in the manner, and subject to the terms and duties, prescribed in this act.

SEC. 3.—Whoever keeps a dog contrary to the provisions of this act, shall forfeit fifteen dollars to be recovered by complaint.

SEC. 4.—The Assessors of the cities and towns shall, annually, take a list of all dogs owned or kept in their respective cities and towns, on the first day of May, with their owners' or keepers' names, and return the same to the city or town Clerk on or before the tenth day of July. Any owner or keeper of a dog who shall refuse to give just and true answers to the Assessors relative to the ownership thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars.

SEC. 5.—The Mayor of cities and the Chairmen of Selectmen of towns shall, annually, within ten days from the first of July, issue a warrant to one or more police officers or constables, directing them to proceed forthwith to kill or cause to be killed all dogs within their respective cities or towns not licensed and collared according to the provisions of this act, and any person may, and every police officer shall, kill or cause to be killed, all such dogs wherever and whenever found.

SEC. 6.—The Mayor of cities and the Chairmen of Selectmen of towns shall, as specified in the preceding section, forthwith certify the fact, under oath, to the District Attorney of their respective districts, whose duty it shall be to prosecute all such officers as fail to comply with this requirement.

SEC. 7.—Any town, city or county officer refusing or neglecting to perform the duties herein imposed upon him, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars.

SEC. 8.—This act shall take effect in thirty days from its passage; but any licenses heretofore duly granted under existing laws shall be valid for the term for which they were granted. (Approved May 14th, 1864.)

CAUTION

TO FEMALES IN DELICATE HEALTH.

DR. DOW, Physician and Surgeon, No. 7

Edw. Street, Boston, is consulted daily
for all diseases incident to the female system.

Polypus Uteri or Falling of the Womb, Fluor
Albus, Suppression, and other Menstrual derange-
ments, are all treated on new pathological principles, and speedily relieved in a very few days. So invariably certain is the new mode of treatment, that most obstinate complaints yield under it, and the afflicted person soon enjoys a perfect health.

Dr. Dow has no doubt had greater experience
in the cure of diseases of women than any other physician in Boston.

Boarding accommodations for patients who may wish to stay in Boston a few days under his

The Christian's Hope.

Beyond these chilling winds and gloomy skies,
Beyond death's cloudy portal,

There is a land where beauty never dies
And love becomes immortal.

A land whose light is never dimmed by shade,
Whose fields are ever vernal;

Where nothing beautiful can ever fade,
And blooms for aye, eternal.

We may not know how sweet its balmy air,
How bright and fair its flowers;

We may not know the songs that echo there,
Through those enchanted bowers.

The city's shining towers we may not see,
With our dim, earthly vision;

For death, the silent wanderer, keeps the key
That opens these gates elysian.

But sometimes when adown the western sky
The fiery sunset lingers,

Its golden rays swing inward noiselessly
Unlocked by unseen fingers.

And while they stand a moment half ajar,
Gleams from the inner glory

Streams brightly through the azure vault afar,
And half reveal the story.

Oh! land unknown! Oh, land of love divine!
Father all-wise, eternal,

Guide these wandering, way-worn feet of mine,
Into those pastures vernal.

July.

To-day, the meek-eyed cattle on the hills
Lie grouped together in some grateful shade;

Or slowly wander down the grassy glade,
To stand content, knee-deep, in glassy rills.

The wandering bee, in far-secluded bowers,
Hums its low cheerful anthem, free from care;

Great brilliant butterflies, fragile as fair,
Float gracefully above the gorgeous flowers.

The sun pours down a flood of golden heat
Upon the busy world; so hot and bright,

That the tired traveller, longing for the night,
Seeks some cool shelter from the dusty street.

The cricket chirps forth its shrill refrain;
The grass and all green things are sear and dry.

The parched earth thirsts for water and men sigh
For cooling showers. All nature waits for rain.

Scrope.

A certain judge having been called on, at a public meeting, for a song, regretted it was not in his power to gratify the company. A man who was present observed, he was much surprised at the refusal as it was notorious that numbers had been transported by his voice.

THE INSTRUCTION OF SORROW. Has it never occurred to us, when surrounded by sorrows that they may be sent to us only for instruction as we darken the cage of birds,

when we wish to teach them to sing?

You cannot dream yourself into a character,

you must hammer and forge yourself one.

Little three-year-old Mary was playing very cozily with the kitten—carrying it by the tail. Her mother told her that she would hurt pussy. "Why, no I won't," said she; "I am carrying it by the handle!"

Smith asked Jones "what the high price of butter was owing to." "A considerable part of it is owing to my grocer," said Jones,

"for it is two months since I have paid him."

How many persons make a wreck of talent,

signing for an opportunity to do like others more than their circumstances warrant. They disdain the low rounds of the ladder which most surely lead to the high.

THE ONE HUNDRED DAYS MEN. It is stated that the War Department has decided to exempt from draft such of the one hundred days men as may be actually in service when the draft takes place.

Canker and Cancer Syrup,
Has been to lay the Axe to the Root of the Great Blighting
UPAS-TREE OF HUMANITY,
WHOSE FRUITS ARE DEATH!

THE CANKER AND CANCER SYRUP has the most extraordinary cleansing action on the BLOOD, which it PURIFIES AT ITS SOURCE, and though it penetrates every organ of the Body, repairing injured Tissues, arresting the Progress of Decay, and stimulating to healthy action the Digestive, Nutritive and Circulating Organs. As a result in the BLOOD DISEASES have their ORIGIN in the BLOOD, its fountain should be

CLEANSED AT ITS SOURCE!
This cure now is infallibly secured by HOWARD'S SYRUP, which has

Redeemed Thousands of Victims

FROM PREMATURE GRAVES!

THE SYRUP is the most efficacious Remedy known for that dreadful Scourge of our Race, CANCER in its many forms, however advanced, completely banishing the TORMENTING KNIFE. The worst cases, given over by Physicians, have yielded to it.

CANCER, it cures in its worst forms in young and old.

SCROFULA, hereditary, or recent, it completely eradicates, leaving the system without trace.

SALT RHEUM in its many aspects, cannot be removed by the knife; the Syrup dissolves them permanently.

ERYSIPELAS of the most kind soon loses its virulent character. The Syrup is an infallible remedy.

SALT RHEUM in its many aspects, cannot be removed by the knife; the Syrup dissolves them permanently.

ERYSIPELAS of the most kind soon loses its virulent character. The Syrup is an infallible remedy.

THE SYRUP is the most efficacious Remedy known for that dreadful Scourge of our Race, CANCER in its many forms, however advanced, completely banishing the TORMENTING KNIFE. The worst cases, given over by Physicians, have yielded to it.

CANCER, it cures in its worst forms in young and old.

SCROFULA, hereditary, or recent, it completely eradicates, leaving the system without trace.

SALT RHEUM in its many aspects, cannot be removed by the knife; the Syrup dissolves them permanently.

Lines
ON THE DEATH OF GEORGE W. TURNER, WHO WAS KILLED IN BATTLE
BEFORE RICHMOND.

Weep not for him for he's at rest;
No more to him will sorrow come;
Weep not for him, for he is blest,
Beyond the limits of the tomb.

Dry up the fountain of your tears,
He's happy now with saints above;
And when death summons you to go,
May you meet there in realms of love.

He for his country nobly fought
And wounded, bleeding, fainting fell;
But now he reigns in heaven with God,
'Tis he who doth all things well.

He was the eldest and first born;
A father's pride, a mother's care,
But bravely fighting he did fall,
And with his comrades death did share.

The battle rages, there he lies
All cold and senseless on the ground,
But far above the stars and stripes,
In brave defiance still abound.

Then cheer your hearts, despair no more,
For proudly, nobly did he fall;
In leaving all he held so dear,
And listening to his country's call.

Under that flag he proudly fought,
Beneath that flag he bravely fell;
Murmur no more for God's in heaven,
And he still doth all things well.

The Crowded Street.

Let me move slowly through the street,
Filled with an ever shifting train,
Amid the sound of steps that beat
The murmuring walks like Autumn rain.

How fast the fitting figures come!
The mild, the fierce, the stony face—
Some bright with thoughtless smiles, and some Where secret tears have left their trace.

They pass to toil, to strife, to rest;
To halls in which the feast is spread;
To chambers where the funeral guest
In silence sits beside the dead.

And some to happy homes repair,
Where children, pressing cheek to cheek,
With mute caresses shall declare
The tenderness they cannot speak.

And some who walk in calmness here,
Shall shudder as they reach the door,
Where one who made their dwelling dear,
Its flower, its light, is seen no more.

Youth, with pale cheek and tender frame,
And dreams of greatness in thine eye,
Go thou to build an early name,
Or early in the task to die?

Keen son of trade, with eager brow!
Who is now fluttering in thy snare?
Thy golden fortunes, tower they now,
Or melt the glittering spires in air?

Who of this crowd to-night shall tread
The dance till daylight gleam again?
Who sorrow or the untimely dead
Who writhe in throes of mortal pain?

Some, famine-struck shall think how long
The cold dark house—how slow the light;
And some, who flout amid the throng,
Shall hide in dens of shame to-night.

Each, where his task of pleasure call,
They pass and heed each other not,
There's one who heeds, who holds them all
In his large love and boundless thought.

These struggling tides of life that seem
In wayward, aimless course to tend,
Are eddies of the mighty stream
That rolls to its appointed end.

Anecdotes.

A physician having finished the amputation of a leg of one of his patients, a near relative of the latter took him aside and said anxiously to him:

Doctor, do you think your patient will recover?
Recover! there has never been the least shadow of a hope for him.
Then what was the use of making him suffer?

Why, my dear fellow, could you brutally say to a sick man he is dying? He must be amused a little!

It is impossible, said one politician to another, to say where your party ends, and the opposition party begins.

Well, sir, replied the other, if you were riding a jackass, it would be impossible to say where the man ended and the donkey began.

The apothecaries of some of our neighboring cities are advertising a new perfume called "Kiss-me-quick." Only imagine a pretty girl walking up to the counter, and briefly saying to the clerk, "Kiss-me quick!" Don't you think he would?

What makes you have the bar in the center? why don't you have it on the side, out of the way?

Bar-keeper: Well, we would; but, you see, it won't go to have so many passengers on one side of the boat.

Pat, what is the name of that splendid little vessel in the stratum?
Joe, says Pat.
An be jabbers an why don't you tell me, then?
It is needless to say what followed.

NUMBER XXXII

NEW LAW

Relation to Dogs!

THE Following Law in relation to Dogs, passed by the last Legislature, has just been received by the Town Clerk:

CHAPTER 299.

SEC. 1.—Every owner or keeper of a dog shall, annually, on or before the first day of April, cause it to be registered, numbered, described, and licensed, for one year from the first day of the ensuing May, in the office of the Clerk of the city or town wherein he resides, and shall cause it to wear around its neck a collar distinctly marked with its owner's name and the registered number, and shall pay for each license two dollars for a male dog and five for a female dog.

SEC. 2.—Any person becoming the owner or keeper of a dog not duly licensed, on or after the first day of May, shall cause said dog to be registered, numbered, described, and licensed, until the first day of the ensuing May, in the manner, and subject to the terms and duties, prescribed in this act.

SEC. 3.—Whoever keeps a dog contrary to the provisions of this act, shall forfeit fifteen dollars to be recovered by complaint.

SEC. 4.—The Assessors of the cities and towns shall, annually, take a list of all dogs owned or kept in their respective cities and towns, on the first day of May, with their owners' or keepers' names, and return the same to the city or town Clerk on or before the tenth day of July. Any owner or keeper of a dog who shall refuse to give just and true answers to the Assessors relative to the ownership thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than five dollars.

SEC. 5.—Mayors of cities and the Chairmen of Selectmen of towns shall, annually, within ten days from the first of July, issue a warrant to one or more police officers or constables, directing them to proceed forthwith to kill or cause to be killed all dogs within their respective cities or towns not licensed and collared according to the provisions of this act, and any person may, and every police officer shall, kill or cause to be killed, all such dogs whenever and wherever found.

SEC. 6.—The Mayor of cities and the Chairmen of Selectmen of towns shall, after testing their warrant to police officers or constables, directing them to proceed forthwith to kill or cause to be killed all dogs within their respective cities or towns not licensed and collared according to the provisions of this act, and any person may, and every police officer shall, kill or cause to be killed, all such dogs whenever and wherever found.

SEC. 7.—Any town, city or county officer refusing or neglecting to perform the duties herein imposed upon him, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars.

SEC. 8.—This act shall take effect on thirty days from its passage; but any licenses heretofore duly granted under existing laws shall be valid for the term for which they were granted.

(Approved May 14th, 1864.)

To the Wavering.

BY FRANCIS D. GAGE.

Be bold, be firm, be strong, be true,
And dare to stand alone;
Strive for the right, whatever ye do,
Though helpers there be none.

Nay, bend not to the swelling surge
Of popular sneer and wrong;
'Twill bear thee on to ruin's verge,
With current wild and strong.

Stand for the right, though falsehood rail,
And proud lips coldly sneer—
A poisoned arrow cannot wound
A conscience pure and clear.

Stand for the right, and with clean hands
Exalt the truth on high Thou'lt find warm, sympathizing hearts
Among the passers by.

Men who have seen, and thought, and felt,
Yet could not, singly, dare
The battle's brunt, but by thy side
Will every danger share.

Stand for the right! proclaim it loud!
Thou'lt find an answering tone
In honest hearts; and thou'lt no more
Be doomed to stand alone.

Useful Hints.

If you want a husband or wife,
If you want to sell dry goods,
If you want to sell boots and shoes,
If you want to sell hats and caps,
If you want to hire or let a house,
If you want to obtain a situation,
If you want to obtain help,
If you want to obtain board or boarders,
If you want people to find your store,
If you want to realize rapid sales,
If you want your name before the people,
If you want to sell goods of any kind,
In short, if you want to make money,
USE PRINTER'S INK FREELY.

Scraps.

HARD GINGER BREAD. One pint of molasses; 1-2 pint sweet milk; 1 tablespoonful saleratus; a piece of butter the size of a hen's egg; 1 tablespoonful ginger.—Bake in a quick oven.

At a private party an "extra" maid of Erin was engaged by the hostess to assist the "regular" in passing around the cake and ice creams. The "extra-hand," to whom this sort of thing was quite new, got rather excited, and bustled to and fro with considerable more energy than grace. When about retiring after going the round of one room, she suddenly stopped, and pointing to a portion of the company in another room, innocently inquired of the "regular" housemaid, loud enough for the whole company to hear:—"How ye fed them over there?" She disappeared down stairs amid laughter so loud it must have troubled her sleep for a fortnight.

The following is considered rather a good specimen of an advertisement:—If the gentleman who keeps a shoe shop with a red head will return the umbrella which he borrowed of a young lady with an ivory handle, he will hear of something to his advantage.

Why is the letter G like an individual who has left an evening party? Because it makes one gone.

We asked a pretty girl the other day to give us a kiss, but she couldn't afford it. She said she would lend us one, provided we would return it. We borrowed the article and returned it promptly.

Tongues are apt to become unruly, for, as we can't see them, it is impossible to keep a watch on them.

The most charitable of animals—the skunk—he gives everybody he meets a scent.

It is a popular delusion to think that powder on a lady's face has the same effect as in the barrel of a musket—assists her to go off.

He who has good health is young; he is rich who owes nothing; and he is happy who takes a good newspaper.

There is something human and life-like in the following car dialogue between a man and his wife: "My dear, are you comfortable in that corner?" "Quite, thank you, dear." "Sure there's plenty of room for your feet?" "Quite sure, love." "And no cold air from the window by your ear?" "Quite certain." "Then, my dear, I'll change places with you."

When you feel physically "out of sorts," leave off eating and instead of seeking something "to take," seek something "to do."

The faculties of the mind are enlarged and elevated and strengthened by use. The finest steel wears away in time, under the hands of the artist, but mind is indestructible and defies the laws that govern material substances. It is inexhaustible; the more you draw from its fountain, the deeper and purer are its waters.

A man writes: "We have two school rooms sufficiently large to accommodate three hundred scholars one above another."

Conversation is a republic that perishes the moment one sets himself up as a dictator.

You had better learn wisdom and prudence by the mishaps of your neighbors, than wait to learn them from your own.

Miscellaneous.

Mary Clare.

BY MRS. HAPPLE D. GRANT.

"Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby, is not wise."

Fashionables will rave with delight over the last "opera," frequenters of theatres will run mad after the "new star," and all worldly minds will evince an eagerness in their unmeaning pursuits, which might well put to shame the tameness of good men on great subjects.

Gaining ground upon us! What is it? Dr. Jewett answers it in one word—Intemperance! What causes the shrinking and fear displayed on the countenances of innocent children, who fly past you half clad and woefully wretched?

Father drinks! who wonders? Oyster saloons, restaurants and dens for the traffic of men's souls meet you on every hand; even now, when the law professes better things than this; and yet there are those to-day who would repeat by rote the only hope of a drunkard's wife.

Mary Clare had longed with an aching heart for old Hardman's tavern doors to be closed. Ten years before a happy bride; now she could only claim that title which is burdened with sorrow—a drunkard's wife.

They were not a low, uninspiring family; far from it; when they began their married life it was with hopes and aims higher—perhaps, than even yours. Shelves were filled with choice books, were the chief ornaments of that home. Where did they go? for rum. Now you could find in John Clare's wretched abode, only misery. It proved too much for Mrs. Clare, and so she died, leaving a namesake, lovely as she once was, to fight alone with woe.

But little Mary, our heroine, after all was composed of stouter material than her poor mother. To her no soft silvery lining ever smiled above her path; for years she could remember only whirlpools, hurricanes, then a dead calm; twice her father, after which is to come. Truel her father, after which is to come. Truel her father, after which is to come.

Indescribable, promised his Mary to give up drink. How could he? There was Hardman's sign, swinging and glaring in his face every day. The glass windows with their purple and red colorings, threw out towards the unwary feet rays of light, which, woven into nets, caught the unsuspecting or not caring ones; and so it was over and over again, "The spider and the fly." Poor Mary Clare, with worn dress and broken shoes, had passed over that door sill for her father, again and again, while he was pouring into the tavern keeper's draw all his hard earned sixpences.

But the news came, by and by, (this was years ago) that a prohibitory law was to be passed. How all the old Hardman within its sound trembled; and how many little Marys wept for joy. B— was alive with the news; would it pass? not if the iron heel of rum-sellers could crush out of existence that law.

Who would fill their pockets then, with gold and silver coin, while they eagerly grasped even the last cent, and laid up for themselves riches on earth?

But it came—the crash. No one knew as yet the result. Night closed in, covering the earth with her dark mantle, inviting man to rest. But one little form, almost womanly, though so very slight, crept away from her uninviting home, and stole up to the red and purple lights, looking out so warm and clear into the darkness. Somehow, the drinking did not thrive as usual. For once, those congregated in Hardman's tavern were thinking.

John Clare stepped out suddenly into the street, the doors with unusual force swinging after him; a hand, small and tender, rested on his arm. "Father?"

What are you doing here, Mary? have I not told you never to follow my footsteps? say, what are you doing here?

Father, I was praying. Praying to God who is so good, that the law might pass, and you and I be happy. Father, will that ever be for us! and will old Hardman have to close his doors?

What of it, Mary? The man was sober now—what then?

Oh! Mother in heaven would smile upon us with joy.

Do you think so, Mary?

Ah! more than that, you would be saved! The man clasped his child's hand within his own, hurrying on without a word; they were soon home. Home! How its vacant dreariness sent a chill to John Clare's heart, and the old days with their beauty and happiness crept up into his soul. His child almost forsaken, yet clinging to him as the coral to the water-lashed reef, stood before him like the matchless pearl, engulphed, but not hardened by the surge of sorrow's waters; and so looking far back into the past, and forward towards the future; the wretched man could bear no more, and smiting his breast in agony he wept aloud.

This night with its solemn blackness, was the green spot in Mary's life; an oasis at last in her desert.

Morning broke clear and beautiful as if to smile away the dark hours but just numbered with eternity's great store. What a glorious day it was. Peel after peel chimed out from giddy heights, dropping their music down like dew drops soft and clear into the very hearts of good people. This was the beginning for B—, and if there were a certain number who moved away to more congenial atmosphere, be assured Mary Clare did not trouble herself to wish them "God speed."

What could John Clare do now but try. For such as him, noble men had sacrificed much, that the law for right, should prevail.

With the desire, came encouragement; and so not John Clare alone, but many more were saved!

Mary Clare has a home she calls her own now. A man of zeal, earnest in the cause of temperance, saw her, heard the story of her old sufferings, and believing her most worthy, made her his wife. Dame Grundy sneered, (you know she has a wonderful memory, especially if it is to another's disadvantage); but Mary smiles, tells the story to some poor drunken one; perseveres and conquers rum! She is a star in the cause.

Alas! that woman who might put forth her hand to stay the rushing current, looks on unmoved. O, that the hearts of all might beat as one, to save the tide of death and hurt it back upon those who are pushing it onward. "Gaining ground." May woman raise her voice and say, "not here." Mighty are our foes. Come up "To the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty."

WINE IS A MOCKER, STRONG DRINK IS RAGING; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.—Prov. 20—1.

Poetry.

The Unseen Battle-field.

BY OLIVER WENDALL HOLMES.

There is an unseen battle-field
In every human breast,
Where two opposing forces meet,
And where they seldom rest.
That field is veiled from mortal sight,
'Tis only seen by One,
Who knows alone where victory lies,
When each day's work is done.
One army clings strong and fierce,
Their Chief of demon form;
His brow is like the thunder cloud,
His voice the bursting storm.
His captains, Pride, and Lust, and Hate,
Whole troops watch night and day,
Swift to detect the weakest point,
And thirsting for the fray.
Contenting with this mighty force,
Is but a little band;
Yet there with an unquailing front,
These warriors firmly stand.
Their leader is of God-like form,
Of countenance serene,
And glowing on his naked breast,
A naked cross is seen.
His captains, Faith, and Hope, and Love,
Point to that wondrous sign,
And gazing on it, all receive Strength from a source divine.
They feel it speaks a glorious truth,
A truth as great as sure—
That to the victors, they must learn
To love, to confide, to endure.
That faith sublime, in wildest strife,
Imparts a deadly calm—
For every deadly blow a shield,
For every wound a balm.
And when they win the battle-field,
Past toil is great as sure;
The plain where carnage once had reigned Becomes a hallowed spot—
A spot where flowers of joy and peace
Spring from the fertile sod,
And breathe the perfume of their praise
On every breeze—to God.

Man Lieth Down, and Risetht Not.

He lieth down—a heavy sleep
Hath closed those weary eyes;
He lieth down, and never more
From that low couch shall rise.
Rush on, strive on ye busy crowd,
About his peaceful bed;
No more he'll share your anxious care,
With weary aching head.
Smile heaven above and earth around
The valley where he lies
No more upon his loveliness
He'll gaze with beaming eyes.
Sigh summer wind, his soul no more Shall feel thy soothing strain;
Sing little bird upon the bough—
Thou sing'st for him in vain.
Ye stormy winds blow loud and high,
Ye rattling torrents pour,
Ye gleaming lightnings thickly fly,
Ye thunders deeply roar.
What are your wildest sounds to him,
Upon the silent shore?
He lieth down and riseth not Till the heavens be no more.

Anecdotes.

Two Irishmen were travelling to Portland, Maine, a short time since, when they stopped to examine a guidebook.
Twelve miles to Portland, exclaimed one.
Six miles apart, just said the other.
And they trudged on, apparently much gratified at their sudden proximity to the forest city.

An Englishman and a Yankee were disputing, when the former sneeringly remarked:
Fortunately the Americans could go no farther than the Pacific shore.
The Yankee scratched his prolific brain for an instant, and thus replied:
Why, good gracious! they are already leveling the Rocky Mountains, and carting the dirt out West. I had a letter last week from my cousin, who is living two hundred miles west of the Pacific shore, on made land!

A gipsy woman promised to show two young ladies their husbands' faces in a pail of water. They looked and exclaimed:
Why, we only see our own faces.
Well, said the gipsy, those faces will be your husbands' when you are married.

Pa, is Pennsylvania the father of all the other States.
Certainly not, my child. Why did you ask that question?
Because I see that the newspapers call it Pa.

A lady neighbor and acquaintance—the dotting mother of a waggish lad—having bottled a lot of nice preserves, labelled them: Put up by Mrs D— (her name).
Johnnie, her promising boy, having discovered the "goodies," soon ate up the contents of the bottle, and then wrote on the bottom of the label: Put down by Johnnie D—.

Sambo, you fool, what makes you steal after that rabbit when your gun has no load on it?
Hush! hush! dar; de rabbit don't know dat.

The Singer SEWING MACHINES.

OUR LETTER A Family Sewing Machine

Is fast gaining a world wide reputation.
It is beyond doubt the
BEST AND CHEAPEST

And Most Beautiful of all Family Sewing Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful appliances for Hemming, Binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering, Quilting, Braiding, Embroidering, Cording, and so forth. No other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable, and most durable, and most certain in action at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch which is the best stitch known. Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity, can see at a glance, how to use the Letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work. While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and chaste manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family sewing as our Manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

Foiled.

Scholar, with brain overladen
With the wisdom of the schools;
Teacher, on man and maiden
Spending your rigors and rules;

Fetch me the fruit of your gleanings
On fields where the grasshoppers leap;
Find me the infinite meanings
The wary anemones keep.

With your scholarship translate me
The cypher of mystic Junee,
And the secrets that await me
In the still midsummer noons.

By thy innermost divining
The hidden mystery show
Of the morning-glory's twining,
And how the violets grow.

Read me the riddles that cover
Hillsides, valleys and mead,
That breathe from the heart of the clover,
And bend in the bending reed.

So dumb, with your sagacious round?
So silent among your books?
Can I baffle and confound you
With the babble of the brooks?

With the whisper of the birches,
The pathos of the pine,
With the urgent wind that searches
Through the alder and the vine?

And you vaunt the skill to lead me
Out of this wildering maze,
When you are too dull to read me
The riddle of summer days?

Straps.

A curious legend exists relating to the discovery of printing. One evening of the fifteenth century Faust was journeying towards a town of Germany. Just before him rode a traveller on horseback. The shoes of his horse left on the even soft ground distinct and regular impressions, repeated with exactness at each step. Faust observed this. The next day printing was invented. This origin of the great invention, though but a legend, is not more improbable than that of the loadstone, said to have been discovered by a shepherd, alarmed at finding a stone adhering to his iron pointed crook. It is less strange that the first hint of this mighty engine should have been taken from so rude a source, than that no spark of intelligence should have ever kindled in the mind of a single one of the many Roman knights who boze about their printing presses to the form of seals.

Society is a strong solution of books: it draws the virtue out of what is best worth reading.

Can a man who has been fined by the magistrate again and again, be considered a refined man?

What invitation would be dangerous and disloyal to a soldier? One asking him to desert.

The latest fashion in Washington, of asking a party what they will take to drink, is "Please nominate your poison, gentlemen."

One day last autumn, two friends were travelling together, when one of them, to avoid going round a mole-hole, made a spring, but fell on the other side. Not being hurt, he rose up, looked at his friend and said, with the utmost complacency: "That was a fall and spring together!"

A cheerful heart paints the world as it finds it like a sunny landscape; the morbid mind depicts it like a sterile wilderness pallid with thick vapors, and dark as the "Shadow of Death." It is the mirror, in short, on which it is caught, which lends to the face of nature the aspect of its own turbulence or tranquility.

Man is a glorious poem; each life a canto, each day a line. The melody plays feebly at first upon the trembling chords of his little heart, but with time gains power and beauty as it sweeps onward, until at last the first notes die away, far above the world, amid the melodies of heaven.

Mr. Engineer, is there any danger?" "Of what, madam?" "Of the steam-bustin?" "No madam; the only things that bust on this locomotive, are the boiler and engineer."

Servility and civility are as opposite as the poles. One is despicable, while the other is the highest degree desirable. A politeness, full of frankness and good nature, is the glory of every young man.

Mr. Smith," said the counsel, "you say you once officiated in a pulpit—do you mean that you preached?" "No sir; I trimmed the lights for the man who did." "Ah, the court understood you differently: they supposed that the discourse came from you." "No sir; I only threw a light on it."

A POWERFUL WEAPON.—The pen, in the hand that knows how to use it, is one of the most powerful weapons known. As the tongue of the absent, how charming! When self-respect gives it a new vigor, how pleasing! When virtue guides it, how beautiful! When honor directs it, how respected! When wit sharpens it, how fatal! When scorn yields it how contemptible! 'Tis the weapon of the soul.

A traveller, relating his adventures, told the company that he and his servant made fifty wild Arabs run, which, starting them, he observed that there was no great merit in that, "for," said he, "we ran, and they ran after us."

Miscellaneous.

Popping the Question.

We have heard many cases, of popping the question under very singular circumstances; the eccentric, the abrupt, the business-like, the silly, and a hundred other styles. Of the eccentric, we would cite the case of a well-known merchant, who, one day, dining at a friend's house, sat next to a lady who possessed rare charms of conversation. The merchant did not possess this faculty in a very rare degree, but he could do that which is next best—he could appreciate, an appreciation which he endeavored to show by the following mode of action:
Do you like toast, Miss B—?
Yes, responded the lady slightly surprised at the question.
Buttered toast?
Yes.
That is strange; so do I. Let us get married.

There cannot be much doubt but that the lady was taken a little aback, a fact that did not prevent the marriage from coming off in a month afterwards, nor the accession of the lady to one of the finest establishments in the city.

As a specimen of the abrupt, we shall cite the case of a gentleman who had retired from business at the age of forty, and built him a beautiful house; determined to enjoy life to the utmost. One day a friend was dining with him, and said, half-jokingly:
You have every thing here that the heart can desire, but a wife.

That's true. I must think of it, said he, and then retired into silence for a few minutes, at the end of which time he rose, begged to be excused for a short time and left the room. He seized his hat and went instantly to a neighbor's and was shown into the parlor with the information that neither the master nor the mistress were at home. He told the servant that he wanted neither, and requested that the housekeeper be sent to him. She came, and the gentleman thus addressed her:

Sarah, I have known you for many years, and have just been told that I was a wife. You are the only woman that I know, that I should be willing to trust my happiness with, and if you agree, we will be instantly married. What is your answer?

Sarah knew the man that addressed her, and knew that his offer was serious and as well weighed as though considered for a year; and she answered him in the same spirit—
I agree.

Will you be ready in an hour?
I will.

I shall return for you at that time.
Which he did; the gentleman who had suggested the idea accompanying him to the clergyman's. Many years have passed since then, and neither party has seen any cause to regret the abrupt proposal and acceptance.

Of the business style, we can cite a case related to us, which we know for a true one. A young man who had succeeded to the ill-kept and badly cultivated, though really valuable farm of a deceased uncle saw at a glance that two things were absolutely necessary to enable him to succeed; the first being a wife to take charge of the woman's department; and the second, a few thousand dollars to stock it with. He could not help thinking to himself that, possibly, these two great aids to his happiness and prosperity might be found together, and yet without attempting to put his matrimonial and financial ideas into practice he allowed them to haunt him continually.

With this upon his mind, our farmer started on a horseback journey to a distant part of the country, and upon his return made an acquaintance upon the road, in the person of an old gentleman who was jogging the same way. The companions dined together at a wayside inn, and fraternized pleasantly, during which the young man opened his heart to the elder, telling him all his plans and aspirations—when the old gentleman addressed the younger:

I rather like you, my friend, and your honest way of telling your story, and if you will come and see me I shall be glad. I have three daughters, all as good girls as ever lived. Now, perhaps one may be the very one you are looking for; if so, I will do the best toward making the balance of the matter agreeable. Ride over and see me to-morrow, take dinner and stay in the afternoon, which will give you a fair chance to see them and judge.

The young man instantly agreed to the proposal, making only one condition, that the young ladies should not be informed of his errand. This was agreed to, and they separated.

The next day, at the time appointed the young man dismounted at the door of the house of his new made friend, and was heartily welcomed. The hour before dinner was consumed in looking over the farm; the young man in admiring its keeping, and the old one in approving of the sensible and practical remarks of the younger, when the meal was announced, and the young ladies and their mother were introduced. They were all, as the old gentleman had said, fine girls, but the younger, rosy-cheeked, blue-eyed, and laughing-faced, charmed the young farmer especially. The dinner over, they once more walked out for a chat.

Well, how do you like my daughters?
They are all nice girls, very nice, said the young man, thoughtfully.

And which of them do you like best? was the question.

The youngest, Kate, she is charming, and if I am to be your son-in-law, you must give me Kate!

This will never do, to take the youngest and by all odds the prettiest, said the old gentleman seriously.

I must have her or none, was the response, spoken decidedly.

How much money did you say you wanted?
Five thousand dollars will put my farm in excellent order, and make it worth twenty thousand to-morrow. I must have five thousand dollars.

I'll give you that sum with either of the other girls, said the old man positively; but I will give you three thousand with Kate.

Then I may as well go home. Five thousand I must have—I have set my mind upon it.

I have just as strongly determined to do only what I have said, was the old gentleman's reply; so I suppose the matter is at an end. However, we will be good friends, and you must sometimes run over and see me.

This ended the conference, and they parted. The young man mounted his horse, and rode down the road, but just as he was about opening the gate, stooping in his saddle, the laughing Kate sprang through the shrubbery to save him the trouble.

Can't you accept my father's terms?
Yes, by George, I will, if you say so, was the instantaneous response.

Then come over to-morrow morning before ten o'clock and tell him so, and the girl vanished like a fairy among the leaves.

The young man rode slowly home, but he was on hand next morning, according to bidding, and married the fair Kate in two months after.

Josiah Quincy.
[FROM THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.]

The relations between the United States and England, from the accession of Mr. Jefferson, had been such as to tend almost inevitably to war. The sympathy of the administration party with Bonaparte, and the shaping of its policy so as to help him and cripple England, under the pretence of impartiality, was too obvious not to excite the resentment of that country—a resentment largely mingled with contempt, in view of the helpless condition of the United States, resulting from the niggardly economy which was a favorite principle of Mr. Jefferson. On the other hand, the attack on the Chesapeake, in 1807, had done much to exasperate the minds of all parties toward Great Britain, not diminished by the advantages which the blunders of the administration in the subsequent negotiations gave to Mr. Canning in the conduct of his share of it. The Federalists, and Mr. Quincy as their most forward spokesman, especially, urged the necessity of putting the navy and the coast in a state fit for action and defence. But the slaveholding power, followed by the Democracy, ever its supple tool, detested the very name of the navy, and while pursuing a course directly tending to war, refused to make any adequate preparation for it. It is not likely that the Democratic majority really believed that war would ever really come. In their exaggerated notions of the importance of the trade of the country to England, they thought that a final resort to arms would be avoided. In January, 1809, Mr. Quincy said, emphatically, I am sick to loathing of this eternal clamor of war. I have been a close observer of what has been said and done by the majority, and I am convinced that no insult, however gross, could have forced it into a declaration of war. To use a coarse, but forcible expression, they could not be kicked into a war. But while he thus contemptuously scouted at the idea of any deliberate purpose of the administration to engage in a war with England, when they had but one frigate and five sloops in commission, and with all revenue from commerce annihilated, he warned them that the tendency of all such measures is to bring on the very event meant to be avoided. The event proved that he had divined justly the necessary direction given to events by such conduct.

One of the devices for exciting popular opinion against England was the imputation to Mr. Francis J. Jackson, the English minister, of a deliberate insult to the Government in stating in an official communication that they had been aware that Mr. Erskine, his predecessor, had no authority to make what is known as the Erskine Arrangement, disavowed by the Home Government at the time it was made. Resolutions of censure were offered in the House, upon which Mr. Quincy took occasion to defend Mr. Jackson from the charge of an offensive intimation, which he had strongly disclaimed, by a logical analysis of his words. We presume that at this day no impartial reader of history could question the completeness of this defence. But the spirit of the party was too strong for reasoning, and the Government discontinued transacting business with Mr. Jackson, and demanded his recall, which was accorded. He, however, considered Mr. Quincy's speech so satisfactory a defence of himself that he had an edition printed for distribution in England as the best presentation of his case.

While the passions of the majority and the policy of the Government were preparing the way for the war with England, which soon followed, another question came up for decision by Congress and the country, with which Mr. Quincy's name is inseparably connected. We refer to the act for enabling the Orleans Territory to erect itself into a State. At the time of the purchase of Louisiana, in 1804, Mr. Jefferson had hesitated at completing it without the authorization of an amendment to the Constitution. His strict construction principles were directly contravened by the proposed acquisition of territory outside of the original thirteen States. But he was persuaded to yield his scruples in view of the apparent advantages of the scheme, and the purchase was, in fact, a coup d'etat, which altered all the previous relations of the different sections of the country. The principle was then established, which governed the history of the country for fifty years, that "strict construction" means that the Constitution is to be strictly construed to concede every thing that the slaveholding portion of the country demanded. In January, 1811, the Enabling act was introduced into Congress. Mr. Quincy resisted its passage in the most resolute and impassioned manner. He utterly denied the right of Congress to erect States out of the territory not within the boundaries of the original thirteen States, and denounced it as a fatal breach of the original compact of the Constitution. It shifted the balance of power in favor of the slave States, and produced a change in political relations such as the framers of the Constitution never contemplated, and such as were fatal to the objects it proposed to secure. It was in his speech of the 14th of January, on this subject, that he made his famous assertion, that it was "His deliberate opinion that, if this bill passes, the bonds of this Union are virtually dissolved; that the States that compose it are free from their moral obligations to maintain it—and that, as it will be the right of all, so it will be the duty of some to prepare definitely for a separation—amicably if they can, violently if they must." This, it is said, was the first assertion of the right of Secession on the floor of Congress. But it was a very different doctrine of Secession from that preached in later times. The right of resistance to an admitted violation of the fundamental compact is to be very clearly distinguished from that claimed to break up the Government on questions of imports or on the election of a President not to the mind of the minority. Mr. Quincy's secession was a vindication of the rights of freedom against the unconstitutional aggressions of slavery; that of Jefferson Davis, the vindication of the rights of slavery against the constitutional restrictions of freedom. He declared that he had thus strongly denounced this measure to preserve and guard the Constitution, and not to destroy it—not for agitation, but for warning—not from hostility to the Union, but from an earnest wish to preserve it. He affirmed that the true cause of error was not the declaration he had made, but the deed proposed. He warned the majority of the consequences of their lost for territory, which, he prophesied, literally, enough, "would not stop short of California and the Columbia River." He concluded his speech with these words: "I oppose this bill from the deep conviction that it contains a principle incompatible with the liberties and safety of any country. I have no concealment of my opinions. The bill if it passes, is a death-blow to the Constitution. It may afterward linger; but lingering, its fate will, at no distant period be consummated." Whether he spoke in a spirit of true prophecy, let the history of the succeeding fifty years answer, in the long supremacy given to the slave power, chiefly through the operation of the principle of that bill, and in the convulsion which followed the first successful resistance to its absolute sway and unlimited extension. He himself adhered to the opinion thus expressed, that the moral obligation of the old States to remain in the Union was released by that action, to the day of his death.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, JULY 25, 1864.
To the People of the United States.

By an act of Congress, approved June 30, 1864, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to issue an amount, not exceeding two hundred millions of dollars in Treasury notes, bearing interest at a rate not exceeding seven and three-tenths per centum, redeemable after three years from date, and to exchange the same for lawful money. The Secretary is further authorized to convert the same into bonds, bearing interest at a rate not exceeding six per centum, payable in coin. In pursuance of the authority thus conferred, I now offer to the people of the United States Treasury notes as described in my advertisement, dated July 25, 1864.

The circumstances under which this loan is asked for, and your aid invoked, though differing widely from the existing state of affairs three years ago, are such as to afford equal encouragement and security. Time, while proving that the struggle for national unity was to exceed in duration and severity our worst anticipations, has tested the national strength, and developed the national resources, to an extent alike unexpected and remarkable, exciting equal astonishment at home and abroad. Three years of war have ordered you with a debt which, but three years since, would have seemed beyond your ability to meet. Yet the accumulated wealth and productive energies of the nation have proved to be so vast that it has been borne with comparative ease, and a peaceful future would hardly feel its weight. As a price paid for national existence, and the preservation of free institutions, it does not deserve a moment's consideration.

Thus far the war has been supported and carried on, as it only could have been, by a people resolved, at whatever cost of blood and treasure, to transmit, unimpaired, to posterity, the system of free government bequeathed to them by the great men who framed it. This deliberate and patriotic resolve has developed a power surpassing even to themselves. It has shown that in less than a century a nation has arisen, unsurpassed in vigor, and exhaustless in resources, able to conduct through a series of years, war on its most gigantic scale, and finding itself, when near its close, almost unimpaired in all the material elements of power. It has, at the present moment, great armies in the field, facing an enemy apparently approaching a period of utter exhaustion, but still struggling with a force the greater and more desperate as it sees, and because it feels, the near approach of a final and total consummation. Such, in my deliberate judgment, is the present condition of the great contest for civil liberty in which you are now engaged.

Up to the present moment you have readily and cheerfully afforded the means necessary to support your government in this protracted struggle. It is your war. You proclaimed it, and you have sustained it against traitors everywhere, with a patriotic devotion unsurpassed in the world's history.

The securities offered are such as should command your ready confidence. Much effort has been made to shake public faith in our national credit, both at home and abroad. As yet we have asked no foreign aid. Calm and self-reliant, our own means have thus far proved adequate to our wants. They are yet ample to meet those of the present and future. It still remains for a patriotic people to furnish the needful supply. The brave men who are fighting our battles by land and sea must be fed and clothed; millions of war of all kinds must be furnished, or the war must end in defeat and disgrace. This is not the time for any lover of his country to inquire as to the state of the money market, or ask whether he can invest his surplus capital as to yield him a larger return. No return, and no profit, can be desired, if a great and patriotic people in such a manner as to be found only in controlling the necessity which begets the evil. Hitherto we have felt the need of more extensive and vigorous taxation. Severe comment has been made upon what seemed to many an undue timidity and tardiness of action on the part of Congress, in this regard. I deem it but just to say that very great misapprehension has existed, and perhaps still exists, upon this point. Legislators, like all others, have much to learn in a new condition of affairs. An entirely new system was to be devised, and that system must necessarily be the growth of time and experience. It is not strange that first efforts should have proved imperfect and inadequate. To lay heavy burdens on a great and patriotic people in such a manner as to be equal, and as to occasion the least amount of suffering or annoyance, requires time and caution, and vast labor; and, with all these, experience is needed to test the value of the system, and correct its errors. Such has been the work which Congress was called upon to perform. I am happy to say that daily results are proving the Internal Revenue Act to exceed in efficiency the most sanguine expectations of its authors. In the month of June, 1863, it yielded about four and one-half millions of dollars, while the corresponding month of this year, returned about fifteen millions, under the same law. Under the new law, which went into operation on the first day of the present

U. S. 7-30 LOAN.

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15, 1861, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three tenths per cent. per annum—principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing Bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, at the Government may elect. They will be issued in denominations of $50, $100, $500, $1,000, and $5,000, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges as soon after the receipt of the original Certificates of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one-quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES OF THIS LOAN. It is a NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the greatest security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in United States Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it cannot pay in anything better, for its own assets are either in government securities or in notes or bonds payable in government paper.

It is especially convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collateral for discounts.

Convertible into a Six per cent. $50 Gold Bond. In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent. per annum, for the current rate for $50 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. United States stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate, is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its exemption from State or Municipal taxation. But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent. per annum, according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to holders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities, only, is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order. When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposits, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

Subscriptions will be received by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositories, and by the First National Bank of Worcester, Mass. and by all National Banks which are depositories of Public money, and all Respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and afford every facility to Subscribers. Quincy, Aug. 16.

Public Reception.

THERE will be a public reception every day for a short time longer, at the Photograph Salon, near the Hancock House, where the host will be happy to distribute to the visitors like presents of themselves in any form they choose—Photographs or Autotypes.

Life-size crayon pictures drawn from daguerreotypes or other pictures, for $3 to $5. Call and examine. O. P. BASTON. Quincy, Aug. 6.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

By His Excellency, the Governor.

A Proclamation Concerning the Payment of Bounties to Volunteers

With the advice and consent of the Council, by virtue of the provisions of the one hundred and thirtieth Chapter of the Acts of eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and in the exercise of the power of suspension therein granted, and also by virtue of the power granted to the Governor by the two hundred and ninety-second Chapter of the Acts of eighteen hundred and sixty-four, I, JOHN A. ANDREW, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, do hereby make proclamation as follows, viz:—

FIRST. Each Volunteer who shall enlist into the military service of the United States, as a part of the quota of this Commonwealth, for the term of three years or the war, shall be entitled to receive from the Treasury of the Commonwealth, at his election, a bounty of three hundred and twenty-five dollars; or, instead thereof, if he shall so elect, a bounty of fifty dollars, and twenty dollars monthly so long as he shall remain in said service. If honorably discharged, for disability, after six months' actual service, then said sum of twenty dollars monthly shall be paid to him for six months thereafter; and if such volunteer shall die in the service said sum shall be paid to his widow; or, if he shall leave no widow, to his lawful heirs for six months after his decease;—said monthly payment to such volunteer, his widow and heirs, not to exceed the term of three years in the whole, and to be payable at the office of the Treasurer of the Commonwealth.

SECOND. Each volunteer who shall enlist, for the term of two years only or the war, shall be entitled to receive a bounty of $200, or to receive the aforesaid bounty of fifty dollars and the monthly payment of twenty dollars, at his own election. If honorably discharged for disability, after six months' actual service, then said sum of twenty dollars monthly shall be paid to him for six months thereafter; and if such volunteer shall die in the service, said sum shall be paid to his widow; or, if he shall leave no widow, to his lawful heirs, for six months after his decease; said monthly payment to such volunteer, his widow and heirs, not to exceed the term of two years in the whole, and to be payable at the office of the Treasurer of the Commonwealth.

THIRD. Each volunteer who shall enlist, for the term of one year only or the war, shall be entitled to receive a bounty of $100, or else the like twenty dollars monthly payment, (but no other bounty) from the Treasury of the Commonwealth, at his own election. If honorably discharged for disability, after six months' actual service, then said sum of twenty dollars monthly shall be paid to him for six months thereafter; and if such volunteer shall die in the service, said sum shall be paid to his widow; or, if he shall leave no widow, to his lawful heirs, for six months after his decease; said monthly payment to such volunteer, his widow and heirs, not to exceed the term of one year in the whole, and to be payable at the office of the Treasurer of the Commonwealth.

FOURTH. Every private and non-commissioned officer who shall be mustered into the service of the United States as a part of the Massachusetts Militia shall receive the sum of twenty dollars monthly so long as he shall remain in said service, which shall be in full discharge of all claim upon the Commonwealth for pay, bounty, and State aid.

GIVEN at the Council Chamber this twenty-third day of July, in the year of our Lord Eighteen Hundred and Sixty-four, and of the Independence of the United States of America the Eighty-ninth.

JOHN A. ANDREW. By His Excellency the Governor. OLIVER WARNER, Secretary of the Commonwealth.

WASHINGTON M. FRENCH, Deputy Sheriff, OFFICE IN TOWN HOUSE, Over Office of J. Q. Adams, Esq. Quincy, May 21.

THE CAMPAIGN COURIER

WILL be issued immediately after the Session of the Chicago Convention, and will contain a full report of the doings of that body. The succeeding numbers will be published regularly thereafter on a large sheet, and will be entirely devoted to candid and manly discussions of the vital questions in the Presidential Campaign.

The terms of the CAMPAIGN COURIER will be—One Copy, thirteen numbers, $0.50 Five Copies, " " to one address, $2.25 Ten Copies, " " " " 4.00 Twenty Copies, " " " " 7.00

These TERMS will be strictly adhered to, and PAYMENT will be required, in all cases, IN ADVANCE. The publishers call upon the Conservative men, everywhere—in New England particularly—for their aid to give this Campaign document a circulation that shall carry it to every village and hamlet in New England, to the end that the thousands in the land who, for three years past, have been deluded and deceived by false cries and false intelligence as to the state of the country, may truly see what the "situation" is, and so be wiser to give their votes against an Administration that has brought the country to the verge of ruin.

Letters and orders should be addressed to GEORGE LUNT & CO., No. 34 Congress Street, Boston, Mass. Aug. 6 4w

Hope for the Sufferers!

LET NONE DESPAIR, FOR DAILY and almost HOURLY cases are Reported, in which the effect of THE GREAT

Humor Remedy, HOWARD'S VEGETABLE Canker and Cancer Syrup, Has been to lay the Axe to the Root of the Great Blighting

UPA-TREE OF HUMANITY, WHOSE FRUITS ARE DEATH!

The CANKER and CANCER SYRUP has the most extraordinary cleansing action on the BLOOD, which PURIFIES AT ITS SOURCE; and though it penetrates every organ of the Body, repairing injured Tissues, arresting the Progress of Decay, and stimulating to healthy action the Digestive, Nutritive and Circulating Organs. As nearly all DISEASES have their ORIGIN in the BLOOD its fountain should be CLEANSED AT ITS SOURCE! This can now be infallibly secured by HOWARD'S SYRUP, which has

Redeemed Thousands of Victims FROM PREMATURE GRAVES!

THE SYRUP is the most efficacious Remedy known for that dreadful scourge of our Race, CANCER in its many forms, however advanced—completely banishing the TORTURING KNIFE. The worst cases, given over by Physicians, have yielded to it.

CANCER, it cures in its worst forms in young and old. SCROFULA, hereditary, or recent, it completely eradicates, leaving the system without taint. The worst cases, given over by Physicians, have yielded to it.

SALT RHEUM in its many aspects cannot withstand its virtues, as thousands testify. ERYSIPELAS of the worst kind soon loses its virulent character. The Syrup is an untiring remedy.

TUMORS need not be removed by the knife; the Syrup disperses them permanently. WHITE SWELLINGS, if acted on by the Syrup from the blood. Many limbs have been saved by it.

ITCHING, however old or malignant, are healed by it when all other remedies have failed. STOPPING RUNNING SORES. KING'S EVIL in the Syrup a Specific. NEURALGIA, however distressing, has been cured by it when all other remedies have failed.

JAUNDICE is cured by the action of the Syrup on the Liver and Bile Ducts, and DYSPEPSIA, caused by vitiated or indigestible food, is removed.

FEMALE WEAKNESSES—it removes with ease and certainty, and taken regularly, it produces the most perfect regulation of the system. RICKETS, a Child's disease, it completely eradicates, and saves years of misery, even preventing consumption. In short it is the only safe and certain remedy known for THE CURE OF EVERY KIND OF HUMOR! and is so permeating that mothers nursing may keep their own and their infants' blood pure by its use. All suffering from Nervous Complaints, Impotency, Premature Decay, and General Debility will find it gives them RENEWED HEALTH and VIGOR.

FOR SKIN DISEASES—it is especially suited, as it cures all eruptions of the skin, Pimples, &c., and imparts the Brilliance of Health to the Complexion.

Where irritation of the Lungs and Cough attend the diseases named, the expectant and soothing effect of the Syrup causes relief and repose, and strengthens the system.

No case of failure of the SYRUP has ever been known where its use has been persevered in. It must be used to the end, and not as a scientific theories. We prefer to lay a plain story of facts before the sufferers who seek relief, therefore we now offer this Simple Vegetable Compound which cures all and certainly cures. PRICE, $1 per Bottle—or $5 for Six Bottles.

Poetry.

Missing.

Not among the suffering wounded,
Not among the peaceful dead;
Not among the prisoners. "Missing,"
That was all the message said.

Yet his mother read it over,
Until through her painful tears
Faded the dear name she had called him
For these two-and-twenty years.

Round her all is peace and plenty;
Bright and clean the yellow floor,
While the morning-glories cluster
All around the kitchen door.

Soberly the sleek old house-cat
Drowns in his patch of sun;
Neatly shines the oaken dresser;
All the morning's work is done.

Through the window comes the fragrance
Of a sunny harvest morn,
Fragrant songs from distant meadows,
And the rustling of the corn.

And the rich breath of the garden—
Where the golden melons lie;
Where the blushing plums are turning
All their red cheeks to the sky.

Sitting there within the sunshine—
Leaning in her easy chair;
With soft lines upon her forehead
And the silver in her hair—

Blind to sunshine—dead to fragrance—
On that royal harvest morn;
Thinking, while her heart is weeping,
Of her noble browed first born.

How he left her in the Spring-time,
With his young heart full of flame,
With his clear and ringing footsteps,
With his life and supple frame.

How with tears his eyes were brimming,
As he kissed a last, "Goodbye,"
Yet she heard him whistling gayly
As he went across the rye.

MISSING. Why should he be missing?
He would fight until he fell;
And if wounded, killed, or prisoner,
Some one there would be to tell.

MISSING. Still a hope to cheer her!
Safe, triumphant he may come,
With the victor army shouting,
With the clamor of the drum.

So through all the days of Autumn—
In the eve and in the morn—
She will hear his quickening footsteps
In the rustling of the corn.

Or she will hush the household,
While her heart goes leaping high,
Thinking that she hears him whistling
In the pathway through the rye.

Far away, through all the Autumn,
In a lonely, lonely glade,
In the dreary desolation
That the Battle Storm has made—

With the rust upon his musket—
In the eve and in the morn—
In the rank gloom of the fern leaves;
Lies her noble-browed first born.

I Call No Other Friend.

I call no other friend with me,
But sadly walk alone
Those old familiar ways were Together oft have gone;
And watch the sun sink in the west,
The glittering stars appear—
The tinted clouds in bright hues dress,
At winking time of year.

I call no other friend with me—
For who in this wide earth,
Can tune my heart to songs of glee,
And give its former mirth?

None! None! who do not jar the thoughts,
So rude they touch the string
Which binds me to familiar spots,
Where I my sadness bring.

ANECDOTES.

Will you give me them pennies now? said a big newboy to a little one, after giving him a severe thumping.

No, I won't.
Then I'll give you another pounding.
Pound away. Me and Dr. Franklin agree.
Dr. Franklin says, take care of the pennies, and the pounds will take care of themselves.

Two persons of estiric turn met a neighbor, and said, "Friend, we have been disputing whether you are most kind or fool."

The man took each of the queries by the arm so that he was in the middle. "Truth," said he, "I believe I am between both."

Well, Tom," said a grocer to his apprentice,
"you have been apprenticed now three months, and have seen the several departments of our trade. I wish to give you a choice of occupation." "Thank'ee, sir," said the apprentice, "I will part of the business do you like best?" "Shipwreck! Where?"

There's a bark that's lost forever," his companion growled, and passed on.

The Singer

SEWING MACHINES.

OUR LETTER A

Family Sewing Machine

Is fast gaining a world-wide reputation.

It is beyond doubt the

BEST AND CHEAPEST

And Most Beautiful of all Family Sewing
Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful
appliances for Hemming, Binding, Felling,
Tucking, Gathering, Gauging, Braiding,
Embroidering, Cording, and so forth. No
other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable,
and most durable, and most certain in action
at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch which is the best stitch known.
Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity,
can see at a glance, how to use the Letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine
when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work. While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest
woods, are finished in the simplest and chas-
est manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb
manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family
sewing as our Manufacturing machines are
for manufacturing purposes.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

Send for a PAMPHLET.

CAUTION

TO FEMALES IN DELICATE HEALTH.

DR. DOW, Physician and Surgeon, No. 7
Edicott Street, Boston, is consulted daily
for all diseases incident to the female system.
Prolapsus Uteri or Falling of the Womb, Pains
Albus, Suppression, and other Menstrual derangements, are all treated on new pathological principles, and speedily relieved in a very few days. So invariably certain is the new mode of treatment, that most obstinate complaints yield under it, and the afflicted patient soon rejoices in perfect health.

Dr. Dow has no doubt had greater experience
in the cure of diseases of women than any other physician in Boston.

Boarding accommodations for patients who may wish to stay in Boston a few days under his treatment.

Dr. Dow, since 1815, having confined his whole attention to an office practice for the cure
of Private Diseases and Female Complaints, acknowledges no superior in the United States.

Shall I See My Boy Again?

Must die so soon, and never meet

The foe upon the field,

Nor teach the traitor's heart the truth

That freemen cannot yield?

Must die and never hear again

The ringing battle-cry,

And while my comrades gird their on,

Must lay my armor by?

Must die so soon? ah far away

By blue Ohio's shore,

A little group waits patiently

'Till this sad war is o'er;

A little face is often pressed

Against the window pane,—

Oh, chaplain, only tell me this:

Shall I see my boy again?

Must never pass close to my heart

The rings of shining hair,

Or listen to my bright-eyed child

Whisper his evening prayer?

Shall never hear his bounding step

Across the cottage floor?

It were not hard to die, chaplain,

Could I see my boy once more.

When morning broke with solemn tread,

On old Potomac's banks,

His comrades laid the soldier down—

Discharged from the ranks;

But many a day o'er western hills,

By blue Ohio's shore,

A little boy will patient wait,

When this sad war is o'er.

JESUS. The name of Jesus is not only light, but also food; it is likewise oil, without which all the food of the soul is dry; it is salt, unseasoned by which, whatever is presented to us is insipid; it is honey in the mouth, melody in the ear, joy in the heart, meditation to the soul; and there are no charms in any discourse in which his name is not heard.

We find in a list of centenarians in England that two-thirds of the whole number are women, attributable to their quietude and temperate habits. Very few bachelors or old maids live to be an hundred years old, and a centenarian is rarely, if ever, a rich man.

Lope de Vega, in describing an afflicted shepherdess weeping by the sea-side, says that the sea joyfully advanced to gather her tears, and that, after having enclosed them in shells, converted them into pearls.

The moment a man is satisfied with himself everybody else is dissatisfied with him.

Desire to be able to command and use the knowledge you possess, rather than indulge in a vain wish to know everything.

A thousand things are well forgot, for peace and quietness sake.

The soul helps the body and sometimes uplifts it. It is the only bird which sustains its cage.

Habit makes slaves of us all, and is an imperious, unrelenting tyrant.

Knowledge and timber shouldn't be much used till they are seasoned.

It is easy to look down on others; to look down on ourselves is the difficulty.

Who would not be in Florence? There a breakfast of ten or coffee and bread and but-

"Why," said Joe, "all the time I wore them boots I had to take two men along with me with hammers, one on each side, to nail on the soles every time I lifted my feet." The storekeeper made no more efforts to sell boots to Joe.

GRANITE BRIDGE CORPORATION. At a meeting of its Stockholders on Monday last, Messrs. William B. Duggan and John J. Glover of Quincy; Hon. Samuel Babcock, and Jesse Banton, Esq., of Milton, and Messrs. Micah Humphrey, Lewis F. Pierce, and James Pope, of Dorchester, were elected Directors. The meeting was harmonious on the subject of adopting prompt measures to free the Bridge and Turnpike from tolls; and a sub-committee of the Directors, consisting of Messrs. Duggan, Babcock and Glover was appointed with full powers to confer with the County Commissioners for the freedom of the bridge to the travelling public. This is the only toll-gate remaining in the County of Norfolk. We trust a liberal community will interest themselves at once in the freedom of this Corporation.

DORCHESTER. The patriotic citizens of this pleasant town have been very liberal in their recent subscriptions for the purchase of substitutes for their quota. Among the noble contributors are William E. Coffin and Daniel Denny each $1000—Henry G. Nazro, George W. E. Wood and Alexander Deal each $750—Nathan Carroth $500—Robert Johnson, Rev. Mr. Means, James T. Lincoln, R. B. Everett and others whose names are not before us, each $100. The subscription for smaller sums is very numerous and on the daily increase.

WAKE UP! We would call the attention of those liable to the draft in this town, to the notice in another column. Let every one interested be on hand next Monday evening. Let the hall be crowded. Our quota must be filled.

IMPROVE THE CHANCE. It will be noticed by an advertisement in another column that the stock and fixtures of the millinery establishment belonging to Mrs. Kenison, in this town, are for sale. This offers a rare opportunity for any one acquainted with the business to get an old and valuable stand, together with the good will of one who has enjoyed a large share of public patronage.

WELL DONE. We had the pleasure of examining one day the present week a nice piece of work performed by a small but smart boy of this town—Thomas E. Farnald, son of N. B. Farnald. The lad has for some months been in the habit of repairing cane-seat chairs and recently a costly article which had become somewhat the worse for wear was brought to his father's store to be re-seated with a request that it might be done in the best manner.

Mr. Farnald accordingly purchased some very fine, extra cane, and set the "little machine" to work, and when the chair was done, the cane was so nicely woven, it looked more like magic, than the work of human hands.

BURGERS. These gentry are about. One evening this week, an attempt was made to effect an entrance into the dwelling house of Dr. Wm. S. Patter, on School street, through a back window, by removing a pane of glass. They were frustrated in their purpose by a timely discovery. If they should repeat the visit the Doctor is now prepared to give them a warm reception.

WASHINGTON M. FRENCH, Esq. The friends of this gentleman will be gratified to learn that he has so far recovered from his late indisposition as to be able to leave the house.

HARD TO BEAT. During the years 1858, '59 and '60, Mr. Thomas H. Renton of Groveland, in this State, worked shoemaking (losing but one day in the three years), making ten pair of women's calf shoes each day, and 9330 pair in the three years. From February 28, 1862, to June 1, 1864, he worked at the bench without losing a single working day, making ten pair of women's channel nailed shoes per day, or 8000 pair in the two years and three months. For steady, consecutive labor, we think this is hard to beat.

SOLDIERS' LETTERS. In order that letters addressed to them may be received promptly, the address must be plainly written, stating distinctly what arm of the service he is serving with, whether engineers, infantry, (regular or volunteer) artillery or cavalry, and what State his regiment is from, and what company. Unless plainly and correctly directed, the letter is sent from one head-quarters to another, and finally finds its way to the Dead Letter Office, or is entirely lost or destroyed.

Boston Correspondence.

The city is quiet and business in many branches is inactive; events not unusual with Bostonians in August, for it is the dull season of the year for enterprise, amusements or recreation. No small portion of the population is temporarily absent to different parts of New England to enjoy the more salubrious atmosphere of the mountain breezes or those of the seashore. More particularly is it desirable to go into the country now, when the thermometer often reaches ninety degrees at noonday in the cool shades of our street corners. The extraordinary dry weather is producing sad havoc among the farmers, and if no rain falls until autumn, vegetables will reach a point of prohibition in price to a large proportion of the community, and the beasts of the field will have to go into winter quarters in "dog-days." The rise in the prices of the daily newspapers is rather unpalatable to the public, and for some time will abridge their circulation. But it is plain this is a necessity, as the cost of paper, ink, labor, and all that enters into the expense of a newspaper has gone up about three fold. It can hardly be expected that the country papers will remain long stationary at their present prices. Their tariff will have to be increased if their patrons wish country editors "to live and let live." Newspapers are the daily vehicles of intelligence; an intellectual food of perusal we cannot dispense with. A liberal patronage of the public press is one of the duties of the American citizen.

We have European intelligence to August 1st. The Parliament of Great Britain adjourned on the 29th ultimo. The Queen's speech (and a good queen she is) was read by commission. It regrets the continuance of hostilities in this country—that England would gladly see a reconciliation here effected; a continuance of English neutrality is promised of course. The supplies of cotton are mentioned with satisfaction. The whole tone of little Vic's speech is hopeful and magnanimous. Peace is likely soon to take place between Denmark and Germany, and the apprehended war among sundry Powers in the interior of Europe is likely to end in nothing. It appears England is about to recognize the Imperial government of Mexico under Maximilian. The United States as a matter of policy will undoubtedly follow suit.

The war news of the week is favorable to the Union cause. Uncle Sam will come out of his troubles right side up yet in spite of croakers and secret enemies to the cause of loyalty. Now is the time for every man to show his colors. If for the Union say so. If for Jeff Davis, go and help him fight his battles against freedom. There are but two parties now, the union loving men, and those against the Union. The way is clear; we must conquer by force of arms an ignominious peace, and we honor our brave soldiers in the field, who show their loyalty by their works; fighting to maintain our liberties and the Constitution at the daily hazard of their lives.

THE SACRIFICES OF THE WAR. Hon. Henry Wilson said at a recent war meeting in Boston, that more than two hundred and twenty thousand men had fallen in battle or sank by disease into soldiers' graves; while the wounded, maimed and broken in health were all around, reminding the nation of the fearful cost of its present struggle for existence.

THE WAR WILL NOT BE OF LONG DURATION. The Union Officers recently released from Charleston say that the temper of the rebel authorities, the feeling of the Southern people, and the necessities of the rebel government, indicate to them that the war, if the North is firm, will not be of long duration. They state that the sentiment for peace is extending; that Union feeling still exists everywhere, and quite as much in Charleston as elsewhere, and not the less on account of the shelling that city has received, the officers assert from facts within their own knowledge. They have, notwithstanding the guards, had a good opportunity of judging of the matter of which they speak.

WHAT BECOMES OF ALL THE CENTS?—There was coined at the U. S. Mint in Philadelphia during the month of July, 5,360,000 cents and 2,270,000 two cent pieces. When it is remembered that the coinage at the mint has averaged about half a million per month for the last two years, and knowing as we do that there are not quarter enough in circulation for change of even the small fractional paper currency, the question may well be put; "What becomes of all the cents?"

ABOLISHED. The old distinction between Admirals of the white, of the red, and of the blue, has been abolished. Hereafter there will only be Admirals, Vice Admirals and Rear Admirals. The white ensign will be exclusively appropriated to the navy, the blue to the naval reserve (all ships commanded by a naval reserve officer, and in part manned by naval reserve men, being entitled to carry it,) and the red to the merchant service.

TO CORRESPONDENTS. We have several communications on hand which we are obliged to lay over for another week.

For the Patriot.

From the 100 Days' Men.

The following letter, received yesterday from one of the 60th regiment though hastily written, may be interesting to some readers:

CAMP CARRINGTON, Indianapolis, August 14th.

On Wednesday, the 10th inst., orders came to be ready to start at 7 o'clock next morning; reveille was sounded at 4 1/2 o'clock, Thursday morning—we formed line at 7, and started, with four days rations and ammunition, and marched across Baltimore to the Northern Central Railroad depot—got on board and off we started—our first stopping place was at York, a rather pretty place of some importance. We stopped at several small places, before we arrived at Harrisburg which we reached about dark; here we branched off to the Pennsylvania Railroad, and rode on—stopping occasionally, till we reached Altoona, where we staid two hours—here the houses were freely opened to us, and in one place a barrel of tobacco labelled "free for soldiers." Every where we stopped, we rushed out and the people gave us whatever they had to eat—bread and butter, milk, coffee, pies, cake, &c., oftentimes giving us all they had in their houses. All this was in Pennsylvania, you don't catch the Maryland people doing anything of the kind. We saw several fields of tobacco in this part of our route.

After we left Altoona we took three engines and crossed the Allegheny mountains; up steep grades, and winding round the mountains; then down, down, through tunnels—one a quarter, another three quarters of a mile, in length; then on through the coal region—and on, till we reached Pittsburg, about 4 o'clock, Friday afternoon, where we were entertained at a Soldier's Home; we then marched across a suspension bridge into Allegheny; halted on a fine green two hours; were treated to a loaf of ice. Here we took the cars and rode all night through the State of Ohio; stopping at several places, and every where being treated the same as in Pennsylvania. We reached Crestline on Saturday afternoon, where we stopped some time, and finally, reached Indianapolis on this (Sunday) morning, about 9 o'clock. Our duty here will probably be to guard a rebel camp of prisoners somewhere in this neighborhood.

Since we left home we have travelled across Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Long Island Sound, New Jersey, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and a part of Indiana; and here we are, nearly twelve hundred miles from Quincy. The country isn't half settled; you think yourself in a wilderness till within a mile of this place—the capital of a great State. By the way, the loaves of bread out here, are two feet long, a foot or more wide, and a foot thick; and every where we stopped you could see the men rushing out of the houses with huge slices of bread with butter or jelly on them, and eating as though their lives depended upon the operation; as, indeed, to a certain extent they did.

The diarrhea and dysentery are somewhat prevalent, and seem to take hold of the stout ones first; huge men go down to the sink and have to crawl back on their hands and knees. We left four of our men in the hospital, at Baltimore—Emerson, Dick Thomas, Frank Barnes, and William H. Willett.

For the Patriot.

When and How to Find Fault.

Find fault—when you must find fault—in private, if possible, and some time after the offence, rather than at the time. The blamed are less inclined to resist when they are blamed without witness. Both parties are calmer, and the accused person may be struck with the forbearance of the accuser, who has seen the fault, and waited a private and proper time for mentioning it. Never be harsh or unjust with your children or servants. Firmness, with gentleness of demeanor, and a regard for the feelings of others, constitute that authority, which is always respected and valued. If you have any cause to complain of a servant, never speak hastily; wait, at all events, until you have had time to reflect on the nature of the offence; and if you must then reprove, it will not be under the influence of anger.

COUNT L. B. SCHWABE. From the Feltonville Standard of June 25th, we learn that Count Schwabe, the gentleman who took so much interest in our Quincy soldiers a year since, is still devoting himself to the same cause. Ever since he left here, he has constantly been sending money and supplies, and reading matter to all the different divisions in the army; and from letters received from our Quincy boys, we learn that they have not been forgotten by the generous donor. Since the late fearful battles, the wounded of the 18th and 56th Regiments have been large sharers of the supplies which from his own purse and the contributions he has received from the citizens of Marlboro and Feltonville has forwarded to Miss Dawes at Washington.

A MUSH AND MILK FESTIVAL was held a few days since at Dubuque, Iowa, by a church aid society. The entertainment was varied by music, tableaux, &c.

Summary of Intelligence.

The Exports from Boston for the week ending July 24, were $632,553, against $172,209.80 for the corresponding week in 1863.

Our soldiers have found a way to get rid of vermin. They seek an ant hill, inhabited by myriads of ants, and place the uniform over it. The tiny chaps immediately commence to search, and each ant seizes a louse and takes him away for his winter commissary supplies.

A late French writer says that the Bostonians are much like his own countrymen, polite courteous and lovers of frogs, and that they have a pond in the middle of a public garden, which is kept for the purpose of supplying the city with these animals!

The North Carolina Times recently advertised for girls to set type, and in response received four applications. The first was an old maid of some forty summers, the second and third were young, while the fourth was decidedly "dark." Not one of the four could read.

There is a boy in Kent county, residing near Charlottesville, Va., in the eighth year of his age, who weighs 111 pounds. He is said to be very handsome, finely proportioned, and the very personification of health.

Woodchucks frequent the doorways of the people in some localities in Berkshire, and was seen upon a front piazza of a house in Pittsfield recently. A gunner killed nine in a single afternoon, one of which weighed twenty-four pounds. They are very numerous this year.

Seven respectable and influential weekly journals have ceased publication in the State of New York within the past six weeks—the consequences of the high prices of paper and labor. More will soon follow.

On the 29th of July, Parliament was prorogued. The Queen's speech was read by commission. It deeply laments the continuance of the civil war in America; promises continued strict neutrality; but would rejoice to see a friendly reconciliation; expresses satisfaction at the influx of cotton from all quarters of the world and consequent mitigation of the distress in the cotton manufactures.

As an instance of how busy a general may be during a battle, it has been adduced before the military commission on the Petersburg disaster that Gen. Meade sent no less than sixty-four dispatches to Gen. Burnside during the morning of the attack.

At a recent railroad dinner, in compliment to the legal fraternity, the toast was given: "An honest lawyer, the noblest work of God;" but an old farmer in the back part of the hall rather spoiled the effect by adding, in a loud voice, "And about the scariest."

There is to be an alteration in the English silver coinage. It is intended by the government to recall, during the coming fall, the whole of the silver coins now circulating throughout the United Kingdom, and replace them by an entirely new coinage.

A Massachusetts cent of 1788 was dug up a few days since in a turnip patch at Dartmouth.

Quincy, Aug. 20.

U. S. 7-30 LOAN.

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon
Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug.
15, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three tenths per cent. per annum—principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing Bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect. They will be issued in denominations of $50, $100, $500, $1,000, and $5,000, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges as soon after the receipt of the original Certificate of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one-quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES OF THIS LOAN.

It is a NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and THE BEST SECURITY. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in United States Notes, considering that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it cannot pay in anything better, for its own assets are either in government securities or in notes or bonds payable in government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

Convertible into a Six per cent. $5 20 Gold Bond.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent. per annum, for the current rate for 5 20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. United States stocks was about twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate, is not less than ten per cent. per annum.
It is exempted from State Municipal taxation.

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent. per annum, according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as those issued by the government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities, only, is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order. When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED BY THE Treasury of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositories, and by the First National Bank of Dorchester, Mass. and by all National Banks which are depositories of Public money, and all

Respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and

Quincy, Aug. 6.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

By His Excellency, the Governor.

A Proclamation Concerning the Payment of Bounties to Volunteers

With the advice and consent of the Council, by virtue of the provisions of the one hundred and thirtieth Chapter of the Acts of eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and in the exercise of the power of suspension therein granted, and also by virtue of the power granted to the Governor by the two hundred and ninety-second chapter of the Acts of eighteen hundred and sixty-four, I, JOHN A. ANDREW, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, do hereby make proclamation as follows, viz:—

FIRST. Each Volunteer who shall enlist into the military service of the United States, as a part of the quota of this Commonwealth, for the term of three years or the war, shall be entitled to receive from the Treasury of the Commonwealth, at his election, a bounty of three hundred and twenty-five dollars; or, instead thereof, if he shall so elect, a bounty of fifty dollars, and twenty dollars monthly so long as he shall remain in said service. If honorably discharged for disability, after six months' actual service, then said sum of twenty dollars monthly shall be paid to him for six months thereafter; and if such volunteer shall die in the service, said sum shall be paid to his widow; or, if he shall leave no widow, to his lawful heirs for six months after his decease;—said monthly payment to such volunteer, his widow and heirs, not to exceed the term of three years in the whole, and to be payable at the office of the Treasurer of the Commonwealth.

SECOND. Each volunteer who shall enlist, for the term of two years only or the war, shall be entitled to receive a bounty of $800, or to receive the aforesaid bounty of fifty dollars and the monthly payment of twenty dollars, at his own election. If honorably discharged for disability, after six months' actual service, then said sum of twenty dollars monthly shall be paid to him for six months thereafter; and if such volunteer shall die in the service, said sum shall be paid to his widow; or, if he shall leave no widow, to his lawful heirs, for six months after his decease;
said monthly payment to such volunteer, his widow and heirs, not to exceed the term of two years in the whole, and to be payable at the office of the Treasurer of the Commonwealth.

THIRD. Each volunteer who shall enlist, for the term of one year only or the war, shall be entitled to receive a bounty of $100, or else the like twenty dollars monthly payment, (but no other bounty) from the Treasury of the Commonwealth, at his own election. If honorably discharged for disability, after six months' actual service, then said sum of twenty dollars monthly shall be paid to him for six months thereafter; and if such volunteer shall die in the service, said sum shall be paid to his widow; or, if he shall leave no widow, to his lawful heirs, for six months after his decease;
said monthly payment to such volunteer, his widow and heirs, not to exceed the term of one year in the whole, and to be payable at the office of the Treasurer of the Commonwealth.

FOURTH. Every private and non-commissioned officer who shall be mustered into the service of the United States as a part of the Massachusetts Militia shall receive the sum of twenty dollars monthly so long as he shall remain in said service, which shall be in full discharge of all claim upon the Commonwealth for pay, bounty, and State aid.

Given at the Council Chamber this twenty-third day of July, in the year of our Lord Eighteen Hundred and Sixty-four, and of the Independence of the United States of America the Eighty-ninth.

JOHN A. ANDREW.

By His Excellency the Governor,

OLIVER WARNER,

Secretary of the Commonwealth.

THE CAMPAIGN COURIER

WILL be issued immediately after the Session of the Chicago Convention, and will contain a full report of the doings of that body.

The succeeding numbers will be published regularly thereafter on a large sheet, and will be entirely devoted to candid and manly discussions of the vital questions in the Presidential Campaign.

The terms of the CAMPAIGN COURIER will be—

One Copy, thirteen numbers, $0 50
Five Copies, " " to one address, 2 25
Ten Copies, " " " " " " 4 00
Twenty Copies, " " " " " " 7 00

These TERMS will be strictly adhered to,
and PAYMENT will be required, in all cases,
IN ADVANCE.

The publishers call upon the Conservative men, everywhere—in New England particularly—for their aid to give this Campaign document a circulation that shall carry it to every village and hamlet in New England, to the end that the thousands in the land who for three years past, have been deluded and deceived by false cries and false intelligence as to the state of the country, may truly see that the "situation" is, and so be won to give their votes against an Administration that has brought the country to the verge of ruin.

Poetry.

Rain on the Roof.

When the humid showers gather
Over all the starry spheres,
And the melancholy darkness
Gently weeps in rainy tears,
'Tis a joy to press the pillow
Of a cottage chamber bed,
And to listen to the patter
Of the soft rain overhead.

Every tinkle on the shingles
Has an echo in the heart;
And a thousand dreary fancies
Into being start;
And a thousand recollections Weave their bright hues into woe,
As I listen to the patter
Of the soft rain on the roof.

There in fancy comes my mother,
As she used to, years ago,
To survey the infant sleeper
Ere she left them till the dawn.
I can see her bending o'er me,
As I listen to the strain
Which is played upon the shingles,
By the patter of the rain.

Then my little seraph sister;
With her wings and waving hair,
And her bright eyed cherub brother,
A serene angelic pair,
Glide round my wakeful pillow
With their praise or mild reproof,
As I listen to the murmur
Of the soft rain on the roof.

And another comes to fill me
With her eyes, delicious blue,
I forget as gazing on her,
That her heart was all untrue;
I remember that I loved her
As I love her now again,
And my heart's quick pulses vibrate
To the patter of the rain.

There is naught in arts bravuras
That can work with such a spell,
In the spirit's pure deep fountains,
Whence the holy passions swell,
As that melody of nature—
That subdued, subduing strain,
Which is played upon the shingles
By the patter of the rain.

The Ring My Mother Wore.

The earth has many treasures rare,
In gems and golden ore;
My heart hath one more precious far—
The ring my mother wore.
I saw it first, when I, a child,
Was playing by her side;
She told me then, 'twas father's gift
When she became his bride.

I saw it oft in sorrow's hours
Which marked the after years,
When shining on the soft, white hand
That wiped away my tears.
And, oh, I saw it once again,
When, on her dying bed,
She lifted up her hands in prayer,
And laid it on my head.

Beside that bed, where fell my tears,
The ring to me was given;
She placed it on my hand, and said,
'We'll meet again in heaven!'
I kissed the cheek I oft had pressed,
From which the rose had fled;
And, bowing with grief, stood motherless,
Alone, beside the bed.

Among the blessed in realms above,
Where sorrows are unknown,
O may I meet my mother dear,
No more to weep alone.
Her dying words of love and faith
I'll cherish evermore
Within the heart which holds so dear
The ring my mother wore.

Anecdotes.

A clergyman had just united in marriage a couple whose Christian names were Benjamin and Ann.
How did they appear during the ceremony?
They appeared both animated and benefited, was the ready reply.

A correspondent tells of a soldier wounded by a shell from Fort Wagner. He was going to the rear with a mutilated arm.
Wounded by a shell? He was asked.
Yes, he coolly answered, I was right under the damned thing when the bottom dropped out.

A lawyer, in cross-examining a witness, asked him, among other questions, where he was on a particular day, to which he replied: In company with two friends.
Friends? exclaimed the lawyer, two thieves, I suppose you mean.
They may be so, replied the witness, for they are both lawyers!

Where did you get that hat, Jerry?
Borrowed it.
Borrowed it?
Y-o-o-s borrowed it of a fellow asleep in the Park. Pete Meyers borrowed his coat, Pat Gaffaney his boots; I borrowed his hat. Do you think I'd steal? No; I'd scorn the action.

Mr. Brown, why do you wear that bad hat?
Because, my dear sir, Mrs. B. vows she will not go out of the house with me until I get a new one.

The Singer
SEWING MACHINES.

OUR LETTER A

Family Sewing Machine

Is fast gaining a world wide reputation.

It is beyond doubt the

BEST AND CHEAPEST

And Most Beautiful of all Family Sewing Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful appliances for Hemming, Binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering, Gussing, Braiding, Embroidering, Cording, and so forth. No other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable, and most durable, and most certain in action at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch which is the best stitch known. Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity, can see at a glance, how to use the Letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in elegant and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work. While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and cheapest manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family sewing as our Manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

The Little Coffin.

'Twas a tiny rosewood thing,

Ebon bound, and glittering

With its stars of silver white,

Silver table, blank and bright,

Downy pillow, satin lined,

That I, loitering, chanced to find

'Mid the dust, and scent, and gloom

Of the undertaker's room,

Waiting, empty—Ah! for whom?

Ah! what love watched cradle bed

Keeps to-night the nestling head,

On what soft and pillowing breast

Is the cherub form at rest,

That ere long with darkened eye,

Sleeping to no lullaby.

Whitely robed, and still and cold,

Pale flowers slipping from its hold,

Shall this dainty couch enfold?

Ah! what bitter tears shall stain

All this satin sheet like rain,

And what towering hopes be hid

'Neath this tiny coffin lid!

Scarcely large enough to bear

Little words that must be there,

Little words cut deep and true,

Bleeding mother's hearts anew—

Sweet, put name, and "AGED TWO!"

Oh! can sorrow's hovering plume

Round our pathway cast a gloom,

Chill and darksome at the shade

By an infant's coffin made!

From our arms an angel flies,

And our startled, dazzled eyes,

Weeping round its vacant place

Cannot rise its path to trace

Cannot see its path to face!

Miscellaneous.

The Old Man of Forty.

Only one more week, and then we shall reach home! said Kitty Howell as she threw herself down upon the sofa in the little tavern.

Tired of travel, Kitty said her father looking up from his newspaper.

I'm tired of railroad cars and taverns, at any rate.

I was thinking to stay here a few weeks.

Here? Kitty sat bolt upright in the excess of her astonishment.

Not in the tavern. You like stories; come here and I will tell you one.

Tossing aside her bonnet and cloak, Kitty complied with the request; and while her father softly stroked and petted her long curls, he said:

When I was in college, Kitty, I had a room-mate to whom I was warmly attached.

He was a shy, silent young man, very stud was left in our own hands, we could not keep it. The world is a false keeper. The d-1 is a churlish keeper. The body is a brittle and inconstant keeper. God only is the sure keeper.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, August 27th, 1864.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

WAR MEETING. A very large meeting was held in the Town Hall on Monday evening last. It was called to order by Col. Adams, and organized by the choice of H. Parsons, Esq., Chairman and George W. Prescott, Secretary. After a neat and appropriate speech made by the chairman the recruiting officer made a very favorable report in regard to obtaining the quota of Quincy.

It appears by his report, that our quota, by recent decrease, is 100

We have in the navy,	43
The Governor will furnish	25
Six have furnished substitutes,	6
Ten have been purchased,	10
Three more engaged,	3

Leaving a balance wanted of 13

We learned yesterday that four more had been purchased during the week, which will leave but nine wanting.

There is nearly money enough in the hands of the Recruiting Officer to purchase the number now wanted. Probably not over five hundred dollars will be needed provided those who have subscribed pay.

A GOOD MOVE. It will be noticed in another column, that the stores in this town will be closed at eight o'clock during the Fall and Winter months. This movement of closing the stores at an early hour, appears to be very general this season, which we think is, as it should be, for we see no good reason why they should be kept open after that hour, and there are many good reasons why they should be closed. Merchants, as well as farmers and mechanics, should have the privilege of enjoying some part of the evening with their families, and the clerks need some recreation after being confined from early morn to eight p. m. behind the counter.

FREEDMEN. We would call the attention of our citizens to the notice of a lecture to be given at the Town Hall, on Sabbath evening next, by George Newcomb, Esq., General Superintendent of Public Instruction in the Department of the South. Mr. Newcomb, a native of this place, is an easy and pleasant speaker, and having spent some months in the South is well prepared to give a very able and interesting lecture.

ACCIDENT. We are sorry to learn that George F. Wilson, son of G. Frederick Wilson, of this town, accidentally fell from a beam, in Col. Peckard's barn on Monday last, and injured his head quite severely, so much so that his recovery has been considered a matter of doubt, but the latest accounts from him appear more favorable.

SAD AFFAIR. We understand that a girl about seventeen years of age and a stranger to Quincy, was accidentally drowned while bathing on Tuesday evening last, in the creek a short distance southerly from the residence of Mr. Samuel Thomas at North Quincy.

CALIFORNIA MAILS. The Indian troubles in the West have compelled the Overland Mail Company to withdraw the coaches from their route, and until further notice, no mails are to be despatched overland to Utah, Colorado and California. The next mail for California will go by the steamer Golden Rule, which will sail from New York on Saturday next, August 27th, and thereafter, until the overland coaches can resume their trips. The mails will be sent out on the 3d, 13th, and 23d of the month, except when the date falls on Sunday, and then the Post Office will receive mail matter up to 10 1-2 o'clock on the following Monday morning.

THE DRAFT.

It is to be expected that the meeting at the Town Hall this evening will be attended by every enrolled man in town, as experience has proved that only those who are enrolled take any interest in the subject. Before the war broke out, and in the beginning of the struggle, it was easy enough to procure speakers, and an audience for a war meeting; but now, when something more tangible than talk is required, the burden is left to fall on those who are least able to bear it. If the rich citizens of Quincy took the same interest in saving the credit of the town from a draft, that they take in seeing the town properly represented, there need never be a man forced to leave his home. But as a general rule they are too pure Patriots to place the town under many obligations to them, lest their fellow citizens fall into the sin of man-worship. It is the best way and cheapest, and will of course be properly appreciated. In the meantime it is for those who may be victims, to improve the few days remaining to their best advantage.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, Aug. 25, 1864.

As named in my last, business continues dull in Boston—transactions limited—great ease as to demand of loans; there is no change in rates. The stock market in New York and Boston is quite inactive, and the prices of most descriptions of speculative securities are depressed by the increased desire to sell. The gold market is quite uninteresting; its present worth 257.

In speaking of the currency, the Boston Evening Journal asks, "What becomes of all the cents?" There were coined at the United States Mint during the month of July last, 5,860,000 cents, and 2,270,000 two cent pieces. When it is remembered that the cent coinage at the Mint has averaged about a half million per month for the last two years, and knowing that there are not quarter enough for circulation for change, or even the small fractional paper currency, it may be well asked where do all the cents go. They are selling here by sharp operators at twelve per cent premium. Now the "only remedy," (says the Journal) "seems to be to stop paying the premium, and instead of buying cents, let every person using them deposit with James Pollock, Esq., Director of the United States Mint, Philadelphia, greenbacks, in sums not less than twenty-five dollars, and the cents will be sent free of all charges in the course of a few weeks. If this plan is generally adopted, cents must soon become abundant."

War news of the week rather unreliable, Lee is reported in the Shenandoah Valley, with forty thousand men. Their purpose is to secure the plunder captured by Early in Maryland, which they fear will be taken by the advance of Sheridan; also, to attack Washington, and invade the North. Let them come, we are prepared for them. We have highly favorable news from General Sherman before Atlanta. He will probably soon remove his headquarters within the bounds of this warlike city. Unbounded confidence continues with the friends of the Union in General Grant; if slow, he is sure, and will yet win the race.

Notwithstanding the near approach of the Presidential election, there is very little interest manifested on the subject. The proceedings of the Chicago Convention next week will be watched with interest by the American people. Then, after the Presidential nomination is made, the elements of opposition to Mr. Lincoln will become more clearly developed. For the first time in the history of this nation, we are to show our unalloyed. We will soon be called upon at the ballot box to select not so much the man who shall be the next Chief Magistrate, but whether we have much longer a country to be governed and spoiled. Such is the great question at issue.

For the Patriot.
Deep Bottom. (Va.)

August 4th, 1864.

July 24th. Everything quiet along our lines this morning. Lieut. Colonel Hooper of our Regiment, "Field Officer of the day," went outside of the picket line this morning reconnoitering and advanced about four hundred yards when he was surprised by the rebel Videttes and taken prisoner. He was beloved by the Regiment, and his loss will be felt very heavily. Nothing more of interest through the day. In the evening five companies ordered to lay in the Redan. Company G, was one. It commenced raining about dark, and continued so through the night. We were completely wet through.

July 25th. Raining. Returned to camp at 5 a. m. Two deserters came in to-day but no news from them. Go on picket to-night. It cleared off about noon. Unusually quiet through the night.

July 26th. About 11 a. m., the 11th Maine and 10th Connecticut of our Brigade were ordered across the Four Mile Creek to reinforce a brigade of the 10th Corps, that were doing picket duty there. Their pickets having lost the ground that the 11th Maine had gained for them the day before. The 11th relieved their pickets immediately after getting there and commenced skirmishing with the enemy. The gunboats opened and were very effective in firing. Our Regiment, (24th) lost quite a number through the day, but at night had gained their old position and held the enemy at bay. The 10th Connecticut were in reserve. We were relieved from picket at 5 o'clock, and returned to quarters. Rumors in camp that Sheridan is here, and intends crossing in the night with his cavalry, and make a break through the rebel lines. Shortly after dark General Hancock and Staff arrived at the headquarters of General Foster's, and we are all well aware that a large move is in contemplation. Sure enough, about 10 1-2 p. m., the 2d Corps crosses the lower Pontoon on to the Bluff, also, some of the cavalry; all the rest of the night is employed in crossing troops.

July 27th. About 5 o'clock a Brigade of the 2d Corps crept on to the rebel battery, while the 10th Connecticut kept the enemy employed in front, for the 10th had relieved the 11th Maine through the night. The enemy pressed the 10th pretty hard, and they suddenly gave way; the enemy following them up, when suddenly the Brigade rose up and made a charge, taking the enemy by surprise, and driving them in disorder in every direction; capturing about forty prisoners and four pieces of artillery, marked, "Captured from the Yankees at Drury's Bluff." They were 20th Parrott's, and proved to be the pieces that were captured from Captain Belcher's Battery on the day we retreated from the Bluff. The order came for us to fall in and support two pieces of the 1st Connecticut Light Battery. Advanced to the outposts of our picket-line, and half of our Regiment ordered to advance as skirmishers, and to push the enemy slowly back. They did so and kept up a constant fire. The two pieces got in position and opened on the enemy's rifle pit—but received no answer; firing continued all day. About 4 o'clock, p. m., orders came to cease firing and return to quarters, as we had accomplished all that was desired. The artillery retired. Our Regiment, (24th) ordered to stop on picket. It was very quiet—not a shot being fired. Shortly after dark a shot was heard from one of Company I's posts. It proved that one of the 1st Maryland Dismounted Cavalry men had been wounded in the skirmish through the day, and left outside, when the picket-line fell back to its old position. He soon made himself known and was properly cared for; another was found the next morning. Quiet the rest of the night. No news from the reconnoitering party. We had two men wounded in the skirmish; Sergeant Jolly, Co. H, foot—Corporal Minnham, Co. A, shoulder.

July 28th. Pleasant. The enemy's sharpshooters have diversified themselves by occasionally firing at our Videttes, but receiving no answer, they soon ceased. The Johnnie's band played some splendid music last evening, which we enjoyed very much. Everything quiet through the forenoon. About 1 o'clock the order came for our pickets to advance and make all the racket we could, and keep up a brisk firing. We had ascertained that there was no force of amount in our front; we done so, and were assisted by the gunboats, and two pieces of the 1st United States Artillery. The firing continued about three and a half hours, when we were ordered to retire to our posts. Only a few shots were fired by the enemy. We were relieved from picket at 5 o'clock. Ordered to sleep with our equipments on. The 2d Corps fell back during the night, and the rear-guard crossed just at daylight.

July 29th. Quiet. The Pontoon was taken up, and everything seemed still and quiet, with the exception of the heavy dull roar of artillery, which can be heard in the direction of Petersburg. Large numbers of rebel troops could be seen in the distance, moving towards Petersburg, and our gunboats fired a few shots at them—the result is unknown.

July 30th. Everything quiet through the day with the exception of an exchange of shots, now and then by the pickets. Fell in at dark and went out and worked all night throwing up rifle pits and building a small Redan.

July 31st. Returned to camp at 5 o'clock, a. m. Got breakfast and turned in for a snooze. At ten a. m., orders came suddenly for us to fall in and march to the Redan, as it was reported that the rebels were advancing from three different points. The gunboats opened and soon dispersed them. Everything became quiet, and we returned to camp at 12 m. It was extremely hot, and quite a number of our boys felt it very much, especially with the headache. Went on picket at five; considerable picket firing for about an hour; no one hurt. Remained quiet through the night.

August 1st. Everything quiet; only a very few shots exchanged to-day. Relieved from picket at 5 p. m.

August 2d. Quiet. Pleasant and extremely warm. Four p. m., the enemy advanced on the right of our line of picket and engaged them for about two hours. Our pickets held their position, and the enemy retired. The 10th Connecticut were on picket at the time, and had four men wounded; one mortally. Quiet through the night.

August 3d. Pleasant. Quiet along the lines. Quite a rarity for dinner—consisting of tomatoes from the Sanitary Commission, some salt beef and hard bread. Quite a little shower this evening. Regiment again on picket. The line was relieved. Peace and quietness reigns throughout.

August 4th. Pleasant. No news of importance; showery through the day; Regiment relieved at 5 p. m. Very cool this evening. No news from Petersburg. Orders for fatigue at half past three to-morrow morning.

August 5th. Pleasant. The boys went out this morning and commenced chopping. Worked till 11 a. m.—returned to camp. Out at 3 and work till 6 p. m. Everything quiet along our line. Quincy boys all well. Quite an excitement this afternoon caused by a portion of our camp getting on fire by the carelessness of some of the men burning cartridges. Some of the boys lost everything. All quiet now. More anon.

Twenty-one sharks, from 3 to 4 feet in length, were recently caught at one time in a seine at the mouth of Connecticut River.

The Seven Thirties—What are they?

We trust that a large portion of our readers have pondered the appeal of Mr. Fessenden, our new Secretary of the Treasury. The purpose of it is that the People of the United States, acting as a body through their agent, the Government, wish individuals to lend them two hundred millions of dollars for three years, at seven and three-tenths per cent. annual interest, payable every six months. For this they offer Treasury Notes—that is, in reality, notes drawn and endorsed by every man in the country. The loan is wanted for a great national purpose, to effect which every man, unless he be a traitor at heart if not in act, is solemnly pledged.

The Appeal is addressed not merely to a few great capitalists, but also to the many whose aggregate means constitute the mass of the wealth of the land. The notes upon which this loan is asked are from $50 upward. Every man who has fifty dollars can take part in this loan. Apart from patriotism and the duty which all owe to their country, no investment is so desirable as this.

It is secure. Every dollar of every man's property is pledged for the punctual payment of the interest, and of the debt when due. The security is increasing in value. For some years before the war we were earning 1000 millions a year more than we spent. During the three years of the war, owing to the high prices and constant demand for labor, we have earned more than ever before. No man who could or would work has been idle; and, except for the war, we have spent less than before. The total valuation of the property of the United States, according to the census of 1860, was $16,159,000,000, of which $10,957,448,956 was in the Loyal States. This valuation, according to the usual rule of assessment, was not more than two-thirds of the actual cash value of the property. The increase of property in the Loyal States during the last ten years was over 125 per cent., or an average of 12 1-2 per cent. per annum. In three years of the war of the United States have certainly earned 3000 millions more than we have spent apart from the war. The cost of the war may be set down at 2000 millions. Debating this from our net earnings, the people who are security for this loan are 1000 millions richer to-day than they were when the war broke out.

No other investment can be so easily convertible. The man who has a Treasury note for $50, or $100, or $1000, can turn it into money more readily, and upon better terms, than if it were invested upon bond and mortgage, or in railroad stocks.

The interest offered is higher than can be realized from any other safe and convertible investment. It is, moreover, readily collectable when due. To each note are affixed five "coupons," or interest tickets, due at the expiration of each successive half-year. The holder of a note has simply to cut off one of these coupons, present it at the nearest bank or Government Agency, and receive his interest; the note itself need not be presented at all. Or a coupon thus payable will everywhere be equivalent, when due, to money.

Thus while this loan presents great advantages to large capitalists, it offers special inducements to those who wish to make a safe and profitable investment of small savings. It is in every way the best Savings Bank for every institution of this kind must somehow invest its deposits profitably in order to pay interest and expenses. They will invest largely in this loan, as the best investment. But from the gross interest which they receive they must deduct largely for the expenses of the Bank. Their usual rate of interest allowed to depositors is 5 per cent. upon sums over $500. The person who invests directly with Government will receive almost 50 per cent. more. Thus the man who deposits $1000 in a private Savings Bank receives 50 dollars a year interest; if he deposits the same sum in this National Savings Bank he receives 73 dollars. For those who wish to find a safe, convenient, and profitable means of investing the surplus earnings which they have reserved for their old age or for the benefit of their children, there is nothing which presents so many advantages as this National Loan.

It is convertible into a six per cent. gold-bearing bond. At the expiration of three years a holder of the notes of the 7-30 loan has the option of accepting payment in full or of funding his notes in a six per cent. gold interest bond, the principal payable in not less than five nor more than twenty years from its date as the Government may elect. For six months past, these bonds have ranged at an average premium of about eight per cent. in the New York market, and have sold at 109 to-day (Aug. 12th), thus making the real rate of interest over ten per cent.; and besides, to make the inducement even greater, Congress by special act exempts its Treasury notes from state and municipal taxation. Could Shylock ask more? Was patriotism ever so liberally rewarded?—Harper's Magazine.

The Providence Journal cuts down its exchange and its free list, and begs that those who have heretofore come on the latter, won't think that they now must subscribe, because at the present price of white paper a subscription is not a favor.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER. The subscription paper which circulated at the Point, to obtain signers to the first draft fund was accidentally forgotten, when the rest was handed to us for publication; we, therefore, publish the names to-day.

It gives us pleasure to notice the name of one patriotic lady upon the paper from this district; which, we believe, is the only instance that has occurred in this town, and is worthy of note.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

Judson Avery of Jefferson Me. harvested about twenty-five tons of hay this season, in eighteen days, without the aid of a mowing machine, and with no other assistance than that of his daughters, 14 and 18 years old.

The cultivators of tobacco in the Connecticut river valley are gathering their crops, the quality being equal to any previous years, and the quantity far more abundant.

The rebels appear now to be as anxious to exchange prisoners as they were obstinate on that point a few weeks ago. The fact is they are afraid the federal prisoners will be captured if they are not exchanged.

The rebels claim to have captured 19 battle flags in the recent battle before Petersburg, among which were the regimental colors of the 57th and 58th Mass. regiments.

The Adjutant-General has issued a circular allowing 100 days' men to re-enlist for one, two or three years. If 700 men for such re-enlist the regimental organization will be maintained.

The clerks in the Treasury Department at Washington are about to organize a regiment out of the companies already formed by them. It will be called the "greenback regiment."

Government has now about 1000 rebel commissioned officers and 50,000 non-commissioned officers and privates, on hand.

The bill for the establishment of a decimal system of weights and measures, in England, has passed to a second reading in the House of Lords.

It is said there are now forty thousand rebels in arms in Texas, although the number a year and a half ago was not over ten thousand.

The Fall River & New York Steamboat Company is building a new side wheel steamer of 2000 tons, similar to the Metropolis, which is expected to be put on the line next spring. A new freight propeller is being built near Boston.

U. S. 7-30 LOAN.

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three tenths per cent. per annum—principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing Bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect. They will be issued in denominations of $50, $100, $500, $1,000, and $5,000, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges as soon after the receipt of the original Certificate of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one-quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES OF THIS LOAN.

It is a NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the BEST SECURITY. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in United States Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it cannot pay in anything better, for its own assets are either in government securities or in notes or bonds payable in government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

Convertible into a Six per cent. $5 20 Gold Bond.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent. per annum, for the current rate for 5 20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. United States stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate, is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its exemption from State Municipal taxation.

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent. per annum, according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as those issued by the government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities, only is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order. When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

Subscriptions will be received by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositories, and by the

throughout the country will give further information and Afford every Facility to Subscribers.

Poetry.

It is Morning.

It is morning, and the sunshine
Slowly through my shutter creeps,
Mounts the wall with shining footsteps,
On the gladdened ceiling sleeps.

With its blessed brightness o'er me,
All forgetful of my care,
Watch I on the wall its glimmer,
But my thoughts are other where.

I am thinking of the sunshine
All unclouded fails to-day
On the homes of those who love me,
Those who love me far away.

And I seem to see it glancing O'er a well remembered roof,
And with golden fingers weaving
On the wall its wavy roof.

And I watch its gladdening glimmers,
From my old accustomed seat,
With green branches rustling round me,
And their breath upon my cheek.

Cured in their blissful presence,
Morning merges into day;
Hushed the hum of stranger voices;
Stranger faces fade away.

Happy memories that have slumbered
Many a day, from slumber start;
Bring to life forgotten pleasure,
Steal the sorrow from my heart.

But the vision fades slowly,
Steal the forms beloved away,
And I look to find but shadows
Where the blessed sunlight lay.

For the angry clouds are driving Drearily across the sky,
And descending heavy—folded;
On the frowning hill-tops lie.

And the shadow of the tempest
Darkly o'er my heart is thrown,
And the deadening thought comes o'er me
I am all alone—alone.

Where is Beauty

Ah, where is beauty? asks the child
With beaming eye and radiant face,
I seek it thro' the grove and wild,
And in each vale and flow'ry place.

'Tis here—'tis here, on this wild rose,
Or there upon that insect's wing—
Ah, no—when caught its splendor goes
And 'neath each leaf there lies a sting.

Ah where is beauty? cries the maid,
Whose blushing cheeks are mantling deep,
Whose brow soft clasp'ring ringlets shade,
And sparkling eyes beneath them peep.

'Tis here, within, I feel its power;
Is not this world with beauty rife?
Ah no! to fade is but the flower
Of all that's bright and full of life.

Ah, where is beauty? cries Old Age,
With dull dim eye and tottering pace,
Who seems to be on life's last stage,
With whiten'd hair and wrinkled face.

Ah, once I saw it, now 'tis gone—
A dream it was, so sweet and bright;
My hopes are dead, my joys are done,
And beauty long since took its flight.

Anecdotes.

Some Irishmen thinking they would show a specimen of Irish wit, got one to ask a real Irish Yankee store-keeper for "a yard of pork," whereupon the Yankee deliberately cut off three pigs' feet, and handed them to the Irishman. "Pat not at first understanding the joke, asked:

"And sure, and is that what you would be after calling a yard of pork?"

"Why," says the Yankee, "yes—three feet make a yard!"

Husband.—Well, my love, I've sold Carlo.
Wife.—(who abhors dogs)—Now, Charles that's kind in you; the dirty brute, you ought to have done it long ago.

Husband.—Yes, my love; got fifty dollars —good trade, all in pigs—five, at ten dollars a piece.

In a Scotch church, a man having put a crown piece into the plate, instead of a penny; at its white and specious face, he asked to have it, and was refused. In once, in for ever.

Aweel, aweel, grunted he, I'll get credit for it in heaven.

Na, na, said Jeames, the doorkeeper. Ye'll get credit only for the penny.

A dandy being told that he would soon have to wear a wig, as he was getting gray, exclaimed indignantly:
No, sir, I'll dye first.

An old, rough clergyman once took for his text that passage of the Psalms, "I said, in my haste, all men are liars." Looking up, apparently as if he saw the Psalmist standing immediately before him, he said:

You said that in your haste, David, did you? Well; if you had been here, you might have said it after mature reflection.

It's quite too bad of you, Darby, to say that your wife is worse than the d—l.

An' please yer Reverence, I'll prove it by the Holy Scriptures—I can, be the powers.
Did not yer Reverence yesterday, in yer sermon, tell us that if we resist the d—l he'll flout us? Now, if I resist my wife, she flouts at me.

The Singer
SEWING MACHINES.OUR LETTER A
Family Sewing Machine

Is fast gaining a world-wide reputation.
It is beyond doubt the

BEST AND CHEAPEST
And Most Beautiful of all Family Sewing
Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful
appliances for Hemming, Binding, Felling,
Tucking, Gathering, Quilting, Braiding,
Embroidering, Cording, and so forth. No
other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable,
and most durable, and most certain in action
at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch which is the best stitch known.
Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity,
can see at a glance, how to use the Letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Sewing Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine
when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work. While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and chastest manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb
manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family
sewing as our Manufacturing machines are
for manufacturing purposes.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

Send for a PAMPHLET.

CAUTION
TO FEMALES IN DELICATE HEALTH.

DR. DOW, Physician and Surgeon, No. 7
Edicott Street, Boston, is consulted daily
for all diseases incident to the female system.
Prolapsus Uteri or Falling of the Womb, Fluor
Albus, Suppression, and other Menstrual derange-
ments, are all treated on new pathological principles, and speedily relieved in a very few days. So invariably certain is the new mode of treatment, that most obstinate complaints yield under it, and the afflicted person soon experiences perfect health.

Dr. Dow has no doubt had greater experience
in the cure of diseases of women than any other physician in Boston.

Boarding accommodations for patients who may wish to stay in Boston a few days under his treatment.

Dr. Dow, since 1845, having confined his whole attention to an office practice for the cure
of Private Diseases and Female Complaints, acknowledges no superior in the United States.

The Other World.

It lies around us like a cloud,
A world we do not see!
Yet the sweet closing of an eye
May bring us there to be.

Its gentle breezes fan our cheek;
Amid our worldly cares,
Its gentle voices whisper love,
And mingle with our prayers.

Sweet hearts around us throb and beat,
Sweet helping hands are stirred,
And palpitate the veil between
With breathings almost heard.

The silence—awful, sweet, and calm,
They have no power to break;
For mortal words are not for them
To utter or partake.

So thin, so soft, so sweet they glide,
So near to press they seem—
They seem to lull us to our rest,
And melt into our dream.

And in the hush of rest they bring,
"Tis easy now to see,
How lovely and how sweet a pass
The hour of death may be.

To close the eye, and close the ear,
Wrapped in a trance of bliss,
And gently laid in loving arms,
To swoon to that—from this!

Scarce knowing if we wake or sleep,
Scarce asking where we are;
To feel all evil sink away,
All sorrow and all care.

Sweet souls around us, watch us still,
Press nearer to our side;
Into our thoughts, into our prayers,
With gentle helping's glide.

Let death between us be as naught—
A dried and vanished stream;
Your joy be the reality,
Our suffering life the dream.

Wealth, we are told, is power; talent is power; and knowledge is power. But there is a mightier force in the world than either of these—a power which wealth is not rich enough to purchase, nor genius subtle enough to refute, nor knowledge wise enough to over-reach, nor authority imposing enough to silence. They all tremble in its presence. It is truth—the really most potent element of social or individual life.

A Good Idea. The young lady pupils of the Buffalo schools are to receive prizes for the "best leaves of bread." There is a good deal of common sense in that. Good leaves of bread are quite as worthy of prizes as good essays in Latin, and the girl who can't make the former, however much of an adept she may be in the latter accomplishment, is poorly fitted to fill her proper place in the world.

Miscellaneous.

The Wife's Story.

Mother, you are cruel!

I have some things to tell you, daughter, this afternoon; when I have told you them you will not think me unkind. At three o'clock come into the library with your sewing. I shall be there and disengaged.

Mary met her mother as requested, and Mrs. Mason began:—"I was once young, as you are, my child, and like you imagined my own judgment superior to that of my parents; so at the age of sixteen, and much against their wishes, I married Edward Elton!"

Yes, Mary, I have been twice married. I never told you of this, because the subject was very painful to me. Since my marriage with your father I have been happy—our family circle has been quiet and loving, but my daughter may God preserve you from experiences like those I once passed through! I had not long been acquainted with the man I chose to wed. He was a stranger in the place. Gentleness and polished he impressed me, as he did almost every one very favorably. My parents alone among all my acquaintances, discouraged my acceptance of his suit; my father even forbade it. There was something about the man, he said, which he did not like—he feared he was not a good man.

Too yielding, however, to the entreaties of his pet child, my kind father at last consented, and mother in silence and tears submitted to his decision. We were married at home, and our wedding was gay and festive. A few days after we went to a distant city to live. There was for a moment, a strange ominous feeling at my heart, when my mother held my hand so tightly at our parting, and said, God bless you, darling, so tenderly, but it passed away as I took my husband's hand and entered the carriage.

We had been keeping house but a few months, Mary, when Edward was brought home to me helpless. The men who brought him were very kind and would not tell the young wife of her husband's shame—they said he was ill—very ill. I would have sent for a physician, but they told me one had already been consulted, and that they felt sure he would be better in the morning. I never suspected the nature of his illness; why should I? In a former quiet country life, I had never seen a person much intoxicated, and that he, my noble, my beautiful husband, could have become so, did not cross my mind. I had indeed, seen him take wine, but this was customary then, and occasioned no alarm. All night I watched by my husband's bedside, and feared that he would die, but he only slept, a deep heavy sleep, and in the morning awoke with a headache. He was fretful all day, but I thought him nervous and endured his complainings patiently. I did not understand the wise look of my neighbors when I told them my husband had been so strangely ill. I do not think he was again intoxicated for more than a year. He was ashamed that he had betrayed his weakness, and when he found that I did not understand it, but supposed he had a fit of apoplexy, he resolved that I should never know the truth. He struggled nobly with temptation, and all for love of me. I was proud and happy in his affection, and wrote home triumphantly that Edward was all I could desire.

Our first child was born. She was a beautiful babe, with her father's broad forehead and dark eyes, and my pretty brown ringlets. How I loved that babe! Edward idolized her, and would call her Hetty after me. When Hetty was about eight months old, an exciting political campaign was closed with the usual election. My husband went to the polls.

His favorite Presidential candidate was successful. He drank freely in honor of the occasion, and treated others. The particulars I learned some time afterward.

Toward evening I was sitting by the window, holding my beautiful Hetty. She had been unusually playful, and perhaps it was only fancy—but I thought she had been trying to say pa-pa I was delighted, and pressed her to my bosom with all a mother's fondness of her first born.

I saw my husband open the gate. He leaned against the post as if tired. Soon he came up the walk. His step was not as firm as it usually was, and my heart began to beat violently. As he came near the door his body swayed to and fro and he fell, striking his head upon the door stone. I sprang to my feet and screamed, for I thought that he was killed. But he did not seem badly injured, for he rose and staggered into the house. Then, my child the dreadful conviction came home to my heart that I was the wife of a drunkard! I seemed in a moment to drink in one drop the concentration of a life of misery. Thinking of it now, I can only remember it as a fearful nightmare, from which I only woke at the sight of my precious child dashed upon the hearth. My husband, my loving, my noble husband was transformed into a fiend. I snatched my infant from the floor unconscious, and pale, and fled from the house. My Hetty never smiled on me again. She never tried to say pa-pa again. She was an idiot, and through three long years I cared for my poor, dear baby, that never ceased to be an infant, whose beauty and intellectual brightness were gone forever.

Mrs. Mason paused; for the remembrance and relation of the dreadful realities of those years of trial overcame her. Mary, too, was weeping. When she could she proceeded with her story.

From that time Edward was a different man from what he had been. The flood-gates of a long-repressed passion seemed to have been re-opened, and on its mad waters he was swept toward ruin. I think remorse for the deed he wrought caused him to drink more freely than he would have done.

We had another child—a dark haired boy but his birth-wailing was very feeble, and in a few hours I blessed God that he would never become a drunkard, and when we laid baby Hetty by his side in the still graveyard, I longed to lie with them and be at rest. But when we turned away, and Edward spoke to me tenderly for the first time in years, it lifted up my heart so that I felt strength to live again. I hoped that it would last—that he would give up his cups. I had learned to pray at the couch of my sick child, and I spent hours on my knees in the dead of night for my poor Edward. I loved him—in all his degradation and sinfulness I had never ceased to love him. I think he tried earnestly to reform. I have seen him weep like a child over his weakness and shame, and the next day perhaps he would yield to drink again. We were in rags for our property was gone; and although I did the best I could by taking in sewing and going out to wash, I could hardly make enough to provide our food, and my husband only earned a few shillings now and then to purchase that which brought us no comfort. Oh, how bitter my heart was toward the rumseller who sold him the poison.

At length came the last tragedy. I had been very ill and was just recovering; when he was seized with delirium tremens. The nervous excitement which his terrible sickness wrought in me, threw me into a relapse, and I came up from the very borders of the grave only to learn that Edward had passed within its portals.

Mrs. Mason's story was complete; but she said:

Last night, as your father and I were returning from our visit, we saw James Stanley enter a saloon. We heard his rattle just and his loud call for that which brought to your mother's young life such misery as I have told you of. Is mother cruel, darling, that she would protect her daughter from the fate of the drunkard's wife?

I will never marry James Stanley, never, exclaimed Mary, energetically; affectionately embracing her mother she whispered—

For your sake I will hate the poison cup forever, and give my life to the noble cause of temperance.

And the mother said God bless you, Mary!

Josiah Quincy.

After his retirement from Congress, Mr. Quincy expended the energies of his active temperament upon a variety of objects of public interest and advantage. He was one of the first promoters of the Massachusetts Agricultural Society and of the Massachusetts General Hospital, of both of which corporations he was for a long time a trustee. He was also an active member of the Overseers of Harvard College from the first reorganization of that body in 1810. In agriculture, especially, he took an ardent and active interest. His ancestral estate at Quincy had been the residence of his family for more than half the year, ever since his marriage, but his public avocations had not permitted him to take its management into his own hands.

On retiring from Congress, however, he entered upon scientific farming with characteristic enthusiasm. His experiments, though not eminently successful as to the lucra of gain, were of great value to the farming interests of his neighborhood and of the State. One of his favorite schemes was the introduction of hawthorn hedges to replace the old-fashioned rail fence of New England, and at one time he could point to his whole farm fenced only with this verdurous wall. But he was obliged to modify his ideas, as it was found that the Vermont and New Hampshire cattle made little account of an obstacle which offered itself in the shape of green leaves and twigs. The thorns they seemed to consider as a mere appetizing spice thrown in. But though a failure it was an instructive one, and settled the question of hedges as a substitute for the fence. His example in the matter of root culture, the succession of crops, the introduction of improved implements, and, latterly, in the sowing, or stall-feeding, of milk cows, were of more direct benefit to New England farming. He also erected extensive salt works on one side, from which he derived profitable returns as long as the manufacture was protected. His year, at this period of his life, was about equally divided between town and country. During the summer his house was filled with company. He delighted in exercising hospitality, and scarcely a week passed without a formal dinner party, besides the constant succession of afternoon visitors from town. Almost every visitor to Boston from Europe and from other parts of the United States took Quincy in the round of their excursions. The neighborhood of President John Adams undoubtedly increased the number of these pleasant visitors, as it was in itself a constant source of interest and pleasure; but Mr. Quincy's personal celebrity, and the pleasantness of his home and domestic circle, were of themselves sufficient to attract a numerous company. He had collected a library, large for that day, and considerable even for this—classical, French, and English, which he kept at Quincy, and in which he spent the chief of his time, when not engaged in business, in directing his farming operations or entertaining his guests. They were pleasant years of his life, to which he always recurred with satisfaction.

He remained an active member of the State Senate for seven years, until 1820. The principle of rotation in office had not then been discovered, it being then believed that offices were designed for the benefit of the people and not of the holders thereof; and consequently that the longer a competent man was kept in office the better he was likely to perform it. The Federal managers in Boston, however, had conceived the idea that the thoroughness of Mr. Quincy's Federalism and his plainness of speech had effected his popularity with the party, and in making up their ticket for 1820 they omitted his name. His personal friends were warmly indignant at this unworthy return for his services to his party, and he himself was not insensible to it. But he kept his temper and went to the caucus in Faneuil Hall on the Sunday evening after the nominations were made, and as soon as it was organized, rose in the gallery and addressed the Moderator. His appearance excited a marked sensation, and much interest to know what course he meant to take. After saying that he had seized the first opportunity of addressing a meeting in Faneuil Hall which he had had for many years, he having been always a candidate for office until now, he proceeded to sustain the nomination in a speech of such humor, wit, and bonhomie, that it is remembered to this day as a masterpiece of its kind, and he went out of the Hall the most popular man of the town. He was immediately put at the head of the ticket for Representatives and elected. Upon the election of the Hon. Elijah H. Mills to the Senate, soon after, he was chosen Speaker to fill the vacancy thus created, for which office he was eminently fitted by his long Parliamentary experience, and by his peculiar talent for the despatch of business. Previously to this, however, he was a prominent member of the Constitutional Convention, made necessary by the erection of the District of Maine into a State, against which act Mr. Quincy had recorded his single vote in the Senate of his last session, an independence of action which probably was in a good measure the occasion of his losing his seat in the Senate. He had also been prominent in the public meetings and other methods employed to express the sense of Boston and Massachusetts on the occasion of the Missouri Compromise. In 1821 he was again elected Speaker; but, before his term of office expired, he resigned it to take the post of Judge of the Municipal Court of Boston; a tribunal, the jurisdiction of which was exclusively criminal. During the short time he remained on the Bench he showed not only great discrimination and humanity in the dispensation of criminal justice, but a faculty in mastering and applying legal principles to the cases before him; extraordinary in one who had been so long withdrawn from active professional life. The most remarkable case that came before him was that of Joseph T. Buckingham, editor of The Galaxy, indicted for a libel on the Rev. John N. Maffit, a notorious Methodist minister of that day, and father to the notorious pirate of this. This case excited very general interest among the religious public of that day whose displeasure Mr. Buckingham had incurred by his plainness of speech in regard to some prominent members of it. Mr. Quincy laid down in this case, for the first time, the doctrine that the publication of the truth, from good motives and for a justifiable end, was not libellous, deducing it from the general principles of law, and from the Constitutional guaranty of the freedom of the press. This ruling excited much censure at the time, but it has prevailed universally, and Mr. Quincy's law of libel is that now recognized every where, in this country and in England.

Camp Carrington.

INDIANAPOLIS, (IND.) AUG. 20, 1864.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

Before the departure of the Quincy Company of 100 days' men you requested me to let you know something of our fortunes. Doubtless most of our friends at home have already been apprised of our movements and present situation. It is known to many of you by this time how we lay in camp at Rendeville for two weeks and a half; were then attached to a new Regiment—the 60th; being the right flank company of the same. Journeyed by rail and steamers to Baltimore; remained in the immediate vicinity of that city a few days, and finally were suddenly called to travel West; arriving at Indianapolis last Sunday—and being at once transferred to our present location, a mile out of the last named capital. We trust that we are at rest now for a while. And, indeed, there is every probability that we shall stay here during the remainder of our term of service. Not far from us is a camp containing several thousand rebel prisoners, whom we may be called upon at any time to assist in guarding. And besides this, there are plenty of rebel sympathizers about us, disposed to make trouble at the coming elections, whose plots our mere presence here may frustrate. One of the Copperhead papers is already growling about "The sending of Massachusetts troops to keep watch over Indiana citizens." But we are not Massachusetts soldiers only; we owe a higher allegiance to the United States; and all foes of the Union, whether Southern or Northern, we have enlisted and sworn to oppose.

Our commanding officer, Colonel A. D. Wass, late of the Mass. 19th, praises the Regiment highly. We are very raw, and quite untrained as yet; but some how we have found favor in his eyes. He wishes to have us appear a well-drilled command at the end of our term of service; and if every man will only catch something of his ardor, we shall undoubtedly succeed in satisfying him.

Whatever may be said of the rest of the Company, there is certainly one hard working man among us—our excellent Company Clerk. There is an immense amount of writing to be done; and with Underwood's indefatigable labors, it will not be his fault if any man fails to receive his dues at the proper time.

Barring some excessive profanity and vulgarity, the Camp is comparatively free from vice. Selfishness—that worst of evils, I had almost said—rarely shows itself here; and under many a rough outside, you shall find a warm, generous heart. Pray for us all good friends at home—that this rude camp-life, whose tendency is so demoralizing, may not harm one soul here. Write to us often, not in mournful strains, but words of encouragement and cheer, and sound advice, that every man may have the love of blessed Home so strong within him that he cannot go astray.

Truly yours,
CORPORAL.

The Deacon and the Wasps.

A worthy deacon in a town of Maine was remarkable for the facility with which he quoted Scripture on all occasions. The "Divine word" was ever at his tongue's end, and all the trivial as well as important occurrences of life furnished occasion for quoting the language of the Bible. What was better however, the exemplary man always made his quotations the standard of action. One hot day he was engaged in mowing, with his hired man, who was leading off, the deacon following in toe swath, conning his apt quotations, when the man suddenly sprang from his place, leaving his swath just in time to escape a wasp's nest.

"What is the matter?" hurriedly inquired the deacon.

"Wasps," was the laconic reply.

"Pooh! said the deacon; "the wicked flee when no man pursueth, but the righteous are as bold as a lion,"—and taking the workman's swath, he moved but a step, when a swarm of brisk insects settled about his ears, and he was forced to retreat, with many a painful sting, and in great discomfiture.

"Ah!" shouted the other, with a chuckle—"the prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself, but the simple pass on and are punished."

The good deacon had found his equal in making application of the sacred writings, and thereafter was not known to quote Scripture in a mowing field.

The man who "fell into raptures" with a pretty girl, was taken out with considerable difficulty.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

RETURN OF THE 15TH MASS. REGIMENT. The term of service of this veteran Corps of Three Years' Men having expired, they reached their homes on Friday, August 26th. It was hoped that some suitable demonstration which the occasion seemed to demand, would have been made by our people. It was a simple duty to those, who, first in war, should be first in our affections. When the country is calling to her aid the services of her best citizens, to carry on the stupendous work in which she is engaged, such apathy is highly culpable. It is no way to encourage enlistments. They were mustered out of service, at Readville, yesterday.

Below we give a list of the officers and men attached to this Regiment, belonging to this town:

COMPANY K:
CAPTAIN—B. F. Meservy.
LIEUTENANT—John A. Pratt.
FIRST SERGEANT—Charles H. Jameson.
CORPORAL—Frank M. Marden.
"Hiram P. Nourse.
PRIVATES—Edward Cain,
"Michael Flanagan,
"Duncan McKay,
"Joshua Jones,
"Edward L. Perkins.
COMPANY E:
PRIVATES—James J. Dowd,
"Edwin Brown.

BURGERS AGAIN. Quincy appears to be a point of attraction for these gentry. Since mentioning the case in the South District, we have others to record. On Tuesday evening, the jewelry store of Mr. John O. Holden, on the Square, was broken open, but Mr. H. having his most valuable secured in a safe, the thieves probably thought it unsafe to remain longer, decamped, taking with them only a pistol or so which lay on the counter.

On the same evening, the stable of Mr. William Rhines, grain dealer, near the Old Colony Depot was entered, and a horse, wagon and harness carried off—a complete outfit. It is thought the thieves might belong to the same party who trespassed on Mr. Holden's premises; prospecting on a rich haul from that quarter, naturally concluded they should require some such conveyance to carry off their booty. As it was, they took the horse and wagon to Boston; left them in Market Square, where they remained during the forenoon, when they were removed by a Police officer to the City Hotel, and in that situation were recovered by the owner.

DEATH OF FREDERICK FLETCHER. Young Fletcher was member of Company F, of the 22d Regiment of Mass. Volunteers. His term of service was nearly expired, and he was looking forward, in a few weeks, to a reunion with his friends. He was a tried soldier. Had seen hard service; been in many hard fought battles; was taken prisoner, and on his liberation, without an interval of repose, again joined his Company; in this way, he had nearly completed a three years' campaign, when he was called to a higher duty. He was of a cheerful disposition; resigned to his lot without a murmur—and even in his last sickness, no complaint escaped him—his only desire was to get home once more, to his best earthly friend, believing that under a mother's care, he should soon recover. But it was otherwise ordered; he passed from this to a better world on the 21st instant. His remains were entombed at the New Cemetery on Thursday afternoon last.

A VISITOR. Mr. Loring A. French, late of the United States army, paid us a visit a few days since, prior to his departure for the South. His mission this time is on business. He proceeds first, to Vicksburg, (La.), which he visited some time since in a different capacity—and thence, as much farther down the Mississippi as he may find it for his interest to travel. May success attend him.

VACATION. This happy season of the young is drawing to a close. On Monday next the Dominies will again assume their sway. The school-room, which has been so long silent, will once more resound to the cheerful voices of those who have contributed so largely to our summer pleasures. We shall miss them in our daily walks, but trust the change will be for their good.

A FALL IN MOLASSES. As Mr. John Ring, one of the Expressmen of this town, was attempting to load, yesterday afternoon, a hoghead of molasses at the Railroad Depot upon his wagon, to remove to the store of Elbridge Clapp, Esq., a motion of the team threw the hoghead to the ground, forcing out one of its heads, and spreading the sweets in every direction. Fortunately, "mine host," W. P. F. Meservy, happened to be present, and rendered valuable assistance, by saving from forty to fifty dollars worth of the saccharine liquid, which otherwise would have been a total loss to Mr. Ring, of an hundred or more dollars.

Foreign Correspondence.

London, July 23, 1864.

From the debates which have recently taken place in Parliament, we learn the causes of the present war in Denmark.

The late king of Denmark succeeded by right to the Duchies of Holstein and Schleswig, as well as to the crown of Denmark; and in 1852, the king being advanced in years, and having no offspring, and his nephew, who would have been his immediate successor had he outlived the king, having no offspring either, the Powers of Europe in order to avert contention in regard to the succession, determined that the king of Denmark should have the power of naming his successor, and that his successor should succeed to the Duchy of Holstein; they also determined, that the king of Denmark should not incorporate Schleswig with Denmark, and that Holstein should not be politically united with Schleswig. Nearly all the Powers of Europe, including Denmark, agreed to this treaty of 1852; but the people of the Duchies, who were the most to be effected by the treaty, were not consulted; nor was the treaty submitted to the German Diet; but it received the assent of several of the German Powers.

The whole of Holstein and the southern portion of Schleswig is inhabited by Germans, and they complain of vexatious interference with their liberties by the Danish Government. Such as requiring religious services to be conducted in the Danish language; forbidding the employment of German teachers in families—thrusting upon them Danish officials; seeking to give privileges and advantages to Danish Universities, as against the German University of Kiel. As a consequence of such treatment, they became more and more dissatisfied with Danish rule, and the German States sympathizing with the people of their own language in the Duchies, determined at least to either modify or else to terminate it.

In March, of last year, the late king of Denmark proclaimed a Constitution for Holstein which the German Diet stated to be at variance with the laws of the Confederation; and in November last, a Constitution was passed at Copenhagen for Denmark and Schleswig, which was at variance with the treaty of 1852; in which Denmark agreed not to incorporate Schleswig with Denmark. The present king gave his assent to the Constitution of November, which up to that time, was not in force; thereby violating the treaty by virtue of which he received his crown; the late king having named him as his successor under the authority of the treaty of 1852. In October the Diet passed a resolution that Federal troops should enter Holstein for the purpose of compelling the king of Denmark to revoke the Constitution of March, and before the troops occupied Holstein the Danes had by the advice of England repealed the Constitution of March; but the Germans were not satisfied with this act of the Danes, and having occupied Holstein with troops, they raised the question of who should be the Duke of Holstein. They decided that the king of Denmark had legally succeeded to the Duchy of Holstein, and a declaration in favor of Duke Sogutenburg was made. Then came up the question of the Constitution of Nov. German troops entered Schleswig; were resisted by the Danes, and the contest of arms commenced. In that state of things the Plenipotentiaries of the belligerents and the four neutral Powers—England, France, Prussia and Sweden, met on the 25th day of April to consider the means of re-establishing peace upon a solid and permanent footing. After a good deal of discussion a suspension of hostilities was agreed to, to take place from the 12th of May, and continue one month; when the time was up, it was extended to the 26th of June. The conference proved a failure. The Germans demanded that all of Holstein and such a portion of Schleswig, as would include the great bulk of the German population in that Duchy, should be relinquished by the Danes. The Danes consented to give up Holstein and a portion of Schleswig, but not so large a portion as was demanded. None of the neutral Powers were disposed to interfere in the contest by force of arms, and the unequal struggle commenced again as soon as the conference ended. The result will be that the whole of both Duchies will be given up by the Danes, and the Danes will have to pay the expenses of the war besides.

Yours, x.

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION. The nomination of George B. McClellan, of Pennsylvania, for President, and George H. Pendleton, of Ohio, for Vice President, appears to give general satisfaction to the party, if no body else. They are jubilant over the affair. Guns are being fired; ratification meetings are to be held—and we learn that one is to come off here during the course of next week, of which due notice will be given.

AUGUST 21st. Captain E. A. Spear, bruised by a shell, and is now in the hospital, and doing well, as are all the wounded. There remains for duty in the Regiment, ninety enlisted men, and six officers. In Company D, there is six men of us doing duty; quite a small show for Quincy's quota, of 1802; and there is less than two hundred men in the Brigade—when, on the evening of the 17th, there were rationed drawn for thirteen hundred. Those that are left of us feel very lonesome, and some worn; but are quite satisfied with the victory. The rebels have lost three to our one in killed and wounded; but they took the most prisoners. Our Brigade fought them in front until we were entirely surrounded, and then broke our way through them to the rear; that is how they took so many prisoners. We still hold our colors, although the rebels had them once, but by the bravery of Corporal McFeely, of Woburn, they were recaptured. Yours, &c., CHARLES N. PERKINS.
Sergeant Co. D, 39th Mass. Volunteers.

SHOP-LIFTING. We have heard of a case of shop-lifting in this town, which, as it is an unusual occurrence with us, excited our attention not a little. It appears that an elderly matron, of some forty or fifty summers—we don't feel at liberty to mention names as the matter is in the course of settlement—visited the store of Mr. Elbridge Clapp, on Saturday evening last, and managed, while the attention of those around were otherwise engaged, to secret beneath her dress and carry off, a roll of flannel, which she was offering for sale when discovered.

THE LADY'S FRIEND. This new and excellent monthly is again on our table, filled with its usual interesting and instructive reading matter, fashion and other plates.

HEADQUARTERS.

BOSTON, AUGUST 20th, 1864.

GENERAL ORDER, No. 32.

The Volunteer Militia of Massachusetts, as it existed previous to the beginning of the present war, having been almost entirely broken up by the enlistment of its members, individually and as Companies and Regiments, in the service of the United States, in response to the different calls of the President for troops for three months, nine months, one hundred days, one year and three years; and the laws establishing this Volunteer Militia being no longer in conformity with the system of organization prescribed by the laws of the United States, and it having been found impossible to recruit this militia under the laws as they stood, and the safety and honor of the Commonwealth imperatively demanding a well-organized militia for the common defense; the Legislature of Massachusetts at its last session passed an Act, entitled an Act concerning the Militia, which was approved on the 14th day of May last, and which is the 238th Chapter of the Acts of 1864, establishing a new system, in strict conformity to the Constitution and Laws of the United States and the Constitution of the Commonwealth, and by which all previous Acts concerning the militia were repealed;

As it was known, however, that some of the old organizations still possessed a strong vitality,—as others were capable of being revived and re-constituted, and as there are many glorious associations connected with the names of Companies and Regiments which have won imperishable honor for themselves and for the State,—the Legislature, while abolishing the whole of the ancient system, provided that the Commander-in-Chief might continue in being and retain such Companies and Regiments of the old Volunteer Militia as he should see fit:

By General Orders No. 22 of the 23d Jan., 1864, the different commanding officers were directed to make return to the Adjutant General, on or before the 10th of July, 1864, of the condition of their several commands, stating therein the number of men to be relied on for duty, with any suggestions they might think proper to make relative to the expediency of continuing or disbanded their commands.

From the returns made in response to this Order, and from all other accessible sources of information, the Commander-in-Chief has sought to determine what Companies and Regiments of the Volunteer Militia, and of the Independent Division of Militia, presented proof of present efficiency, or of a power to such recruit themselves as to conform to the requirements of the law, as to warrant him in continuing and retaining them.

And in accordance with the results of such examination, it is hereby ordered that the Companies and Regiments hereinafter enumerated shall be continued and retained, viz.:

CAVALRY.

1. The Company in Boston commanded by Captain Lucius Slade, and heretofore known as Co. A, 1st Battalion Light Dragoons.

2. The Company in Boston commanded by Captain C. T. Stevens, and heretofore known as Co. B, 1st Battalion Light Dragoons.

3. The Company in New Bedford commanded by Captain George H. Shaw, and heretofore known as Co. C, 1st Battalion Light Dragoons, attached to the 2d Brigade, 1st Div. M. V. M.

4. The Company in Charlestown commanded by Captain John F. Gilman, and heretofore known as a company attached to the Independent Division M. V. M.

5. The Company in Roxbury commanded by Captain R. Holmes, formerly known as the Roxbury Horse Guards.

These Companies will be hereafter designated, respectively, in the order above given, as Companies A, B, C, D, E, of Cavalry of the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia; and, until the organization of new companies shall authorize the organization of one or more regiments, will remain unattached.

ARTILLERY.

1. The Company in Boston heretofore known as the 1st Light Battery, and commanded by Captain Lucius Cummings.

2. The Company in Boston commanded by Captain Warren French, at present temporarily attached to the Forty-second Regiment of Infantry.

These Companies will be respectively designated in the order above given—as the First and Second Light Batteries Massachusetts Volunteer Militia.

INFANTRY.

The Third Regiment of Infantry, Lieutenant-Colonel James Barton commanding, will be retained under its present designation.

And the following Companies of said Regiment—

1. The Company commanded by Captain John W. Marble, of Freetown, now enlisted in the United States' service for 100 days.

2. The Company commanded by Captain Thomas F. Griffith, of South Carver.

3. The Company commanded by Captain Joseph O. Neill, of Fall River, at present temporarily attached to the Sixth Regiment.

4. The Company commanded by Captain David H. Dyer, of Fall River, and now in the United States' service for 100 days' duty.

5. The Company commanded by Captain Isaac A. Jennings, of New Bedford, and now enlisted in the United States' service for 100 days.

6. The Company commanded by O. A. Baker, of Rehoboth, now in the United States' service for 100 days.

7. The Company commanded by Jabez M. Lyle, of Fairhaven, now in the United States' service for 100 days.

8. The Company commanded by Thomas J. Borden, of Fall River, known as a company of the Independent Division of Militia.

And said Companies will be for the present designated, in the above order, the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, and Fourteenth Unattached Companies of Infantry, M. V. M.

The above order will not apply to any companies at present in the service of the United States, so as to alter the designation by which such companies may be known in that service, until they shall have been mustered out of service.

Upon the return of the regiments now in the United States service, re-organization of the regiments will be necessary, in order that each regiment, for the purposes of drill and discipline, and to enable it to be readily assembled, may be composed as nearly as possible of companies from the same neighborhood or district.

Books of enlistment will be at once issued by the Adjutant General (in conformity with Sect. 18, Chap. 238, Acts of 1864) to the commanders of all the companies herein before enumerated. All non-commissioned officers and privates of said companies who shall not re-enlist in said companies, in conformity with the provisions of said Act, will be at once discharged, and cease to be members of said companies. And the commanders of said companies shall, within thirty days, return to the Adjutant-General rolls of their respective companies, upon blank forms to be furnished by the Adjutant-General in conformity with the provisions of Sect. 10 of said Act; and all such companies as shall not, within the said space of thirty days, have returned such rolls, or if shall appear by said rolls to be reduced to less than the minimum number of non-commissioned officers and privates by said Act established for a company of its arm, may be forthwith disbanded.

Application for the formation of new companies of the volunteer militia must be made at once to the Adjutant-General, as they will not be granted after the districting of the State for the formation of companies of the active militia under the new statute shall have been commenced.

All organization of the Volunteer Militia other than those herein before enumerated as continued and retained, and excepting the two corps of Cadets which by said Act are expressly recognized and retained, are hereby disbanded; and all officers holding commissions in any such organization, and all General and Staff Officers of Divisions and Brigades, are hereby honorably discharged.

Provided, however, that any regiment or company of the Volunteer Militia, not herein before enumerated, which shall present to the Adjutant-General, within ten days, satisfactory proof of its existence, and power to recruit itself to the minimum strength required by said Act for an organization of its arm, and shall account for its neglect to make returns to the General Order No. 22 of this year, may be reinstated and continued.

The Commander-in-Chief avails himself of this occasion to tender his thanks to the Major-Generals, Brigadier-Generals, and the various Field, Staff, and Company officers, who are by the operation of law discharged as aforesaid, for their past fidelity and efficiency in the service; and he entertains the hope that the reorganization of the militia will re-ceive their constant and efficient co-operation.

By order of His Excellency JOHN A. ANDREWS, Governor and Commander-in-Chief.

WILLIAM SCHOLER,

Adjutant-General.

Poetry.

There Comes a Time.

There comes a time when we grow old,
And like a sunset down the sea,
Slope gradual, and the night wind cold
Comes whispering sad and chillingly;
And looks are gray,
As winter's day,
And eyes of saddest blue behold
The leaves all weary drift away,
And lips of faded coral say,
There comes a time when we grow old.

There comes a time when joyous hearts,
Which leaped as leaps the laughing main,
Are dead to all save memory,
As prisoner in his dungeon chain;
And dawn of day
Hath passed away.

The moon hush into darkness rolled,
And by the embers wand and gray,
I hear a voice in whisper say,
There comes a time when we grow old.

There comes a time when manhood's prime
Is shrouded in the midst of years;
And beauty, fading like a dream,
Hath passed away in silent tears;
But oh! the spark
And then how dark!

That kindled youth to hues of gold,
Still burns with clear and steady ray;
And fond affections, lingering, say,
There comes a time when we grow old.

Then comes a time when laughing spring
And golden summer ceased to be;
And we put on the autumn robe,
And tread the last declivity;
But now the slope
With rosy hope,
Beyond the sunset we behold,
Another dawn with fainter light;
While watchers whisper thro' the night,
There is a time when we grow old.

I Love Thee

I love thee; oft those simple words
Are whispered low to me,
But never sound so sweet as when I hear them breathed by thee.

From other lips they coldly come
And wake no answering tone
Within my heart, but lightly fall
Upon my ear alone.

But, like the murmuring waterfall,
In cadence sweet and low,
The sound comes welling from thy lips
Up from the depths below.

I watch the blushes on thy cheek,
Pale as the lilies' hue,
Then back again they quickly come
Like roses bathed in dew.

I sit beside thy radiant form,
Thine arms are round me thrown;
And in thy soul lit eyes read
That thou art all mine own.

Upon thy breast I lay my head
Close to thy throbbing heart,
And feel the seething hand of death,
Alone our souls can part.

The Just Man

They are not just because they do no wrong,
But he who will not wrong me when he may—
He is truly just. I praise not them
Who in their petty dealings pilfer not—
But he whose conscience spurs a secret fraud
When he might plunder and defy surprise:
His be the praise, who, looking down with scorn
On the false judgment of the partial herd,
Consults his own clear heart and boldly dares
To be, not to be thought, an honest man.

Anecdotes.

A wag entered a store in London, some years ago, which had for a sign "The Two Baboons," and addressing himself to the proprietor, he said:

I wish to see your partner.
I have no partner, sir.
I beg your pardon, and hope you will excuse the mistake.
Oh, there is no harm done; but what made you think there were two of us?
Your sign—The Two Baboons.

An old Jew, who sold exclusively for cash, said that he did it for the benefit of his neighbors. He did not wish to see them deep in debt to him, "ven dey ish got no monish to pay mit."

A man carrying a cradle was stopped by an old woman and thus accosted:
"So, sir, you have got some of the fruits of matrimony."
"Softly, softly, old lady, said he, you mistake, this is merely the fruit basket."

A Scotch paper tells the story of a dairy farmer, who, after the burial of his wife, drove a hard bargain with the grave digger, who, bringing his hand down on the shovel, exclaimed:
"Down wi' another shillin', or up she comes!"

I don't think you can find a single Irish character in all the works of Shakespeare. Yes, you can, for I can cite two—Miss O'Phelia and Corry O'Leary.

A down-east girl being bantered one day by some of her female friends in regard to her lover, who had the misfortune to have but one leg, she replied to them very smartly, "Pooh, I wouldn't have a man with two legs; they're too common!"

Hope for the Sufferers!

LET NONE DESPAIR,
For DAILY and almost HOURLY cases are Reported, in which the effect of
THE GREAT

Humor Remedy,
HOWARD'S
VEGETABLE
Canker and Cancer Syrup,

Has been to lay the Axe to the Roots of the Great Blighting
Great Blighting

UPAS-TREE OF HUMANITY,
WHOSE FRUITS ARE DEATH!

THE CANKER AND CANCER SYRUP has the most extraordinary cleansing action on the BLOOD, which it PURIFIES AT ITS SOURCE, and though it penetrates every organ of the Body, repairing injured Tissues, arresting the Progress of Decay, and stimulating to healthy action the Digestive, Nutritive and Circulating Organs. As nearly all DISEASES have their ORIGIN in the BLOOD, its fountain should be

CLEANSED AT ITS SOURCE!
This sine qua non is infallibly secured by HOWARD'S SYRUP, which has Redeemed Thousands of Victims
FROM PREMATURE GRAVES!

THE SYRUP is the most efficacious Remedy known for that dreadful Scourge of our Race, CANCER in its many forms, however obstinate—completely banishing the TORTURING KNIFE. The worst cases, given over by Physicians, have yielded to it.

CANKER, is cured in its worst forms in young and old.
SCROFULA, hereditary, or recent, it completely eradicates, leaving the system without taint.

SALT RHEUM in its many aspects cannot withstand its virtues, as thousands testify.
Erysipelas of the worst kind soon loses its virulent character. The Syrup is an untailing remedy.

TUMORS need not be removed by the knife; the Syrup disperses them permanently.
WHITE SWELLINGS are acted on by the Syrup through the Blood. Many limbs have been saved by it.

ULCERS, however old or malignant, are healed by the Syrup without the usual danger of stopping Running Sores.

SCURFY EYELIDS in the Syrup a Specific.
NEURALGIA, however distressing, has been cured by it when all other remedies have failed.

JAUNDICE is cured by the action of the Syrup on the Liver and Bile Ducts, and DYSPEPSIA caused by vitiated or inefficient Bile is removed.

FEMALE WEAKNESSES—it removes with ease and certainty, and taken regularly, it promotes the healthy periodical secretion.

RICKETS, a Child's disease, it completely eradicates, and saves years of misery, even preventing consumption. In short it is the only safe and certain remedy known for THE CURE OF

EVERY KIND OF HUMOR!
and is so potent that mothers nursing may keep their own and their infants' blood pure by its use. All suffering from Nervous Complaints, Incipient Consumption, Palpitations and General Debility will find it give them RENEWED HEALTH and VIGOR.

FOR SKIN DISEASES—it is especially suited, as it soon eradicates all Blisters, Pimples, &c., and imparts the Brilliance of Health to the Complexion.

* * * Where irritation of the Lungs and Coughs attend the diseases named, the expectant and soothing effect of the Syrup ensures relief and repose, and strengthens the system.

No one can doubt that the Syrup has ever been known where its use has been prescribed in. It might be easy to enter into learned scientific theories. We prefer to lay a plain story of facts before the sufferers who seek relief, therefore we now offer this Simple Vegetable Compound which cannot harm and certainly cures.

Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work. While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and chaste manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family sewing as our Manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

For the Patriot.

To Arms!

BY F. M. ADLINGTON—WEYMOUTH.

To arms! your Country calls, to arms!
Ye careless laggards to your posts;
Along your borders vanishing swarms,
The desp'rate savage traitor hosts.

You may not love the boding sound
Of armies mass'ring for the fray,
You may not love the battle ground,
Where man his brother man will slay.

But when your Country calls for aid,
To shield her from a heartless foe;
Then fearless grasp the conqu'ring blade,
And lay her fierce assailants low.

When Freedom, Justice, Honor call,
Arise ye children of the free,
From humble cot and palace hall,
Come forth to guard your liberty.

Then onward like the rushing blast,
Be death or victory your cry,
And if that hour should be your last,
In Freedom's cause 'tis well to die.

How noble looks the laurel'd grave
That's water'd by a Nation's tears,
How cherish'd lives the conquer'ing brave,
Whose deeds to all his name endears.

The faithless knaves who duty shun,
Or meanly aid the traitor band,
When Freedom's battle field is won,
Will find no home on Freedom's land.

But scorn and shame we'll be their lot,
Where'er their Country's banner waves;
Their crime will never be forgot,
'Twill cast a stigma o'er their graves.

Straps.

An old lady was engaged in making pumpkin pies; she had got her pumpkins all prepared, when by an untoward accident, the table was overturned and the pumpkin went on to the floor. The table in overturning over-set the soap pail, and the soap went on to the floor. The old lady being of a saving disposition, concluded to save the pumpkin and clean up also; so she takes a p one handful, looks at it—'That's pumpkin'—puts it in the pumpkin dish; takes up another—'That's slops'—puts it in the soap pail. So she goes on picking up alternately pumpkin and slops, till finally she gets a handful mixed. She looks at it and says: 'That is some pumpkin, and mostly slops,' and hence the phrase.

Love grows best among troubles, as trees are best transplanted in cloudy weather.

Jailors are proverbial for keeping bad company.

He that would know what life is, must have its trials as well as its joys.

Be careful of your table talk. Do all your biting at your table in biting your food.
Don't be biting in your remarks.

A little Swedish girl, while walking with her father on a starry night, absorbed in contemplation of the skies, being asked of what she was thinking, replied: "I was thinking if the wrong side of heaven is so glorious, what must the right side be?"

Was the person strangled who hung on a doubt?

Much is said about people sleeping in church, but the thing never happened where there was a wide awake preacher.

WOMAN—the morning star of infancy, the day star of manhood, the evening star of old age.

There is room for many things in this large world of God's, but none for vacuums!

The rebel government talks of paying the soldiers liberally after the war. Its liberality reminds us of the poor fellow's will; "I have nothing—I owe everybody—the rest I give to the poor."

Punch says that a Yankee baby will crawl out of its cradle, take a survey of it, invent an improvement, and apply for a patent before he is six months old.

A gentleman being asked by his friend what o'clock it was, replied, "Little or nothing." How so? asked the inquirer. "Why," said the wit, "it is not quite one; and that which is less than one must be little or nothing."

It nearly always happens that he who uses artifice to cover himself in one place, uncovers himself in another.

New Publications.

SONGS FOR SOCIAL AND PUBLIC WOR-SHIP: Henry Hays. This is a handsome volume, of about three hundred pages, in excellent type, paper and binding. It is edited by Rev. Dr. Kirk, and contains both the old favorites and a fine selection of new hymns and music, adapted to the worship of the family, Sunday School and Conference room.

Such gems as "Sweet Hour of Prayer,"
"Eventide," better known as "Vesper Hymn," "Shining Shore," "Will you go?" and "Bethany," are invaluable. There are eight pages of chants and a hundred hymns added without music. We think the book is well termed "a condensed and sifted tune book," and as such, meets a want universally felt in the community.

OUR GENERALS. Card pictures of our civil and military men, also copies of statutory and landscapes, are selling at unprecedentedly low prices at Wards, 125 Washington st. Boston.

Miscellaneous.

Fate of Mark Thornton.

Sunset along the broad bright shore of the Atlantic—sunset over the wooded cliffs that frowned above the shining waves—sunset making its goldensignals among the trailing woodbine and emerald green ivy that covered the tiny western lattice of Cliff Cottage! Sunset gorgeous in its purple vapors and streaming pennons of amber light, Rachel Bourne instinctively shaded her eyes with one fair hand, and marveled at the brilliant sky picture although she had dwelt among these picturesque solitudes all her lifetime.

She was a lovely creature, with soft wandering eyes of liquid hazel, like a gazelle, and silky black hair waving in short curling rings around her forehead, while her round fresh cheek was flushed with soft color, like the fringed petals of a May pink.

Ah, no wonder that Rachel Bourne had been a capricious, wilful little coquette from her childhood up, playing with strong men's hearts as if they had been mere toys to amuse herself for an hour and then to be cast away.

She was not alone in that rose twined porch that June sunset. Mark Thornton was leaning over the bench on which she sat—a tall handsome young man, dark complexion, with regular features and eyes as midnight.
Just at this moment, there was a deep agony color on his olive cheek, and his teeth were set closely together, as if to suppress the uprising of some powerful emotion.

Rachel, said he passionately, we've had enough of this idle folly; I know that to you, breaking a man's heart may seem but the amusement of a month; but I had hoped that you were learning to love me a little. Have I hoped in vain?

Rachel Bourne lifted her pretty, mischievous eyes to his face with a playful defiance in their light; but Mark Thornton was not to be put off thus; no, he was too deeply, too vitaly in earnest.

Answer me Rachel, now or never. I have loved you as a man never loved woman before, but I have too much pride to allow myself to be longer trifled with.

Do you love me Rachel?

How can I tell you? pouted Rachel veiling her eyes behind her long soft lashes and trying petulently to draw her hand from Mark's iron grasp. Let go my hand I see some one coming.

Some of your most devoted slaves said Thornton, satirically, as he relinquished the soft and shrinking, little fingers. Young Elisgrove and Frank Sinclair. Well, I shall not remain to see how skillfully you weave your fancies around their captive hearts.

O, Rachel Bourne, false to the noble instincts of your nature, the time may perchance come when you will repent having driven one who loved you passing well to desperation.

The color blushed out of Rachel's cheek as she saw him disappear down the rocky and precipitous path, which led along the verge of the cliffs to the valley below.

Oh, why didn't I tell him the truth? she murmured. Why did I not own how dear he was to me? How foolish I am, she added dashing away two bright drops, as if he wouldn't be back to-morrow; and besides, it won't do to let a man know just how precious he is to us women. To-morrow will do just as well—but oh, how I wish to-morrow were here!

Dead! Mark Thornton dead? Pooh! I will not believe it.

I tell you I saw it with my own eyes. He fell from the cliffs just where Eagle Rock leans over the sea—fell with a dull, dead splash, that made my blood run cold! Why, man, that must be at least fifty feet above the sea.

Why did you not hasten to his rescue?

Are you crazy, Paul Morrison? with the tide running out like a torrent, and me higher up the cliff than old Bourne's cottage? He would have been ten miles out to sea before I could have reached the shore below. I tell you, though it made me sick and faint to hear that awful splash! The fall would have killed him even had he not been carried out by the tide.

I suppose they will try to recover his body?
Possibly—but it will be a useless attempt.
Poor Mark? he was the finest fellow in Cliff Dale.

Dead!

Rachel Bourne listened to the village news with parted lips, and a cheek as colorless as marble. Mark Thornton's words recurred to her with awful significance.

Driven to desperation! Then his blood was on her hand.

Before the alarmed news monger could reach her, she lay senseless on the floor—smitten down as if by touch of God's hand.
Thus the hour of retribution had come.

Come daughter, the sun has been down some time—what are you doing here on the cliffs?

The brisk sea breeze was lifting Rachel's silky black ringlets as she sat there drearily gazing out over the sparkling surface of the bright treacherous ocean. She would linger there for hours, just where Mark Thornton met his death. It seemed to be a sacred spot.
Only watching the tide father; oh, let me stay a little longer.

Old Nathan Bourne laid his hand gently on his daughter's shoulder.

Have you forgotten that Ralph Southmayd will expect his answer to night my child?

Father I have told him that I shall never marry him?

He is a good young man Rachel, and will make an excellent husband.

I know it father.

My dear, said the old man after a moment's pause, why do you so obstinately persist in rejecting every suitor for your hand? Your conduct is a riddle to me.

Father, said Rachel gently, but firmly,
the only man I ever loved, or ever could love lies, beneath yonder cruel waves. His last words to me were an accusation of fickleness, but perhaps looking down from Heaven, he may know that I have lived and will die, faithful to his memory alone!

And her father looking into the sorrowful depths of her tearful eyes, relinquished further pleadings. He knew that they would be in vain; that Rachel had indeed resolved to lay her beautiful young life on the shrine of Mark Thornton's memory.

The bleak December winds howled mournfully over the bare cliffs, one dreary night, full ten years after the conversation above narrated, and the bright log fire, before which Rachel Bourne sat, flickered and danced, with fantastic radiance, casting ruddy shadows through the cheerful little room.

Come in.

She heard a faint knock through the fitful swelling of the storm—the door opened and a stranger hesitatingly advanced, his face and scent muffled in costly furs.

I beg your pardon, he stammered, I was told that Mr. Bourne resided here.

My father has been dead some years, responded Rachel, looking wonderingly at her visitor. You must be a stranger in Cliff Dale not to be aware of that.

I am a stranger said the new comer, in tones of sorrowful emphasis. I must be a stranger indeed, when Rachel Bourne has ceased to remember me.

At the same instant he threw back his wrappings, and gazed reproachfully at her.
She uttered a wild hysterical scream, clasping her hands wildly above her head.

Mark! Mark Thornton! it is indeed you or only your spirit came back from the troubled sea to haunt me.

Rachel, dearest, it is I. O, had I but dreamed you loved me still, I would have come back to you years ago.

He held her to his heart, smoothing back the soft jetty curls, and gazing tenderly into the bright troubled eyes, while he told her of the past; how his floating body had been picked up with life not yet extinct, by an outward bound English vessel—how he had dwelt for years in England, never for an instant supposing that he had left a single heart to mourn for him—how that finally led by some strange unaccountable impulse, he had returned to look once more upon the land of his birth.

Then you did not throw yourself from the rock?

No it was an unfortunate mis-step that precipitated me over the cliffs.

Thank Heaven! oh thank Heaven. It has been such an awful shadow over my waking and sleeping moments—the fear that you had reception erected, the observatory was established, and in every particular he left the institution in the most flourishing condition, both as to prosperity and usefulness. He established new relations with the students of social intercourse, and administered the discipline of the college with a firmness, yet with a kindness, which secured him their respect and affection.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Sept. 10th, 1864.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

DROWNED. The body of Alfred Norton was found on the beach at North Quincy last Monday. Lewis Bass, Corner, was called and summoned an inquest whose verdict was—"Accidental drowning."

The deceased was about 20 years of age, and belonged to the State of Maine, where his remains will be removed by his father for burial. He was drowned about two weeks since by the upsetting of a boat near Governor's Island.

CRIMINAL RECORD. The case of Mrs. Murphy who was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Adams, on the 3d inst., for trespassing on the property of Mr. Elbridge Clapp, by fraudulently taking from his premises ten yards of prints, was not settled in a court of law, as it was thought it would be at the time, but was referred to Justice Adams, who found Mrs. M. guilty of a misdemeanor, and fined her ten dollars and costs.

ANOTHER CASE OF FEMININE WEAKNESS. Mrs. Maloney was arrested on Thursday last for an unprovoked assault upon a neighbor. It appears, that she went to a house of a near resident, and without any provocation commenced breaking windows, and exhibiting other acts of unduly conduct. She was sent to the House of Correction. In extension of her offence, it is said that she is subject to fits of insanity, and it is thought that in the present instance, it was not Mrs. Maloney in her lucid moments, but that she was personating a false character.

WRONG ONE. Deputy Sheriff French, for certain reasons, arrested a man on Sunday last, upon the suspicion of his having stolen money on his person. He was taken to the office of the Deputy, a thorough search made, but nothing being elicited to confirm the suspicion, he was liberated.

COMMISSIONS. Among the commissions issued last week, by direction of his Excellency John A. Andrew, Governor and Commander-in-Chief, were placed to find the names of a number of Quincy boys, namely:—

Capt. Luther S. Best, of the 12th Regiment, to be Major.

Private W. Quincy Barker, of the 11th Battery, to be Second Lieutenant.

Sergeant Charles E. Pierce, of the 10th Battery, to be First Lieutenant.

Jonas Shackley, of the 5th Battery, to be Second Lieutenant.

RATIFICATION MEETING. The largest and most enthusiastic meeting ever held in this place, assembled at the Town Hall on Thursday evening, upon a call to the friends of the Constitution and Union to ratify the nominations of the Chicago Convention.

The meeting was called to order by Dr. William S. Pattee, and organized by the choice of the following officers:

President: Jeffrey R. Brackett, Esq.

Vice Presidents: Henry Wood, Jonathan Jameson, James T. Pennington, Benjamin Curtis, of Quincy; Lovell Bicknell, of Weymouth; George Pennington, of Milton, and J. H. C. Blake, of Braintree.

Secretaries: Geo. Cahill, Benj. F. Curtis. Mr. Brackett, in assuming the duties of the Chair, stated its objects and the importance of the coming election. He then introduced Henry W. Paine, of Cambridge, who addressed the meeting, followed by Messrs. Willey, of Boston; Bicknell, of Weymouth; and a Committee was chosen to form a Quincy Club, which held a meeting this evening at the Lyceum Room. The occasion was enlivened by a band of music from Boston, and the ceremonies closed amidst a shower of fireworks.

FROST. There was a heavy frost noticed on the low lands in this town one or two mornings the present week.

JURORS. Messrs. William B. Duggan and Peter Butler, of this town, have been drawn by the Selectmen to serve as Jurors at the September term of the Superior Court at Dedham.

DR. WILLIAM M. CORNELL, formerly of this town, has been appointed by the Commissioner of Pensions, one of the Examining Surgeons of Claimants for the city of Philadelphia.

The following is an extract of a letter recently received by a merchant in this town from his brother, who is in Gen. Grant's army:—

"The rebels are deserting to our lines in squads. Five have come to-day. They are disheartened and will do most anything to get out of the rebel ranks. In seven days sixty have come in our Division front. Our cause looks hopeful if we can have a sweeping conscription to fill up our ranks. Two hundred thousand men added to this army to-day, would end the war in a month."

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, Sept. 8, 1864.

The recent nomination of General McClellan for the office of Chief Magistrate of the United States in opposition to President Lincoln, has been the great topic of discussion in print and by the tongue, (that unruly member) for ten days past. The friends of the peace-party platform candidate appear jubilant and talk loudly of success. A large quantity of powder has been consumed, and enthusiastic demonstrations made by the friends of little Mac throughout the country.

For three years past, when we have been permitted to speak on political matters through the columns of your excellent paper, we have maintained, and do still say, that the civil war produced a fusion of old political organizations, and inaugurated but two parties in the loyal States—one for the Union and Constitution, the other sympathy for the rebels and disunion. And every voter of the country to day having no regard for party names, either Democrat or Republican, is for the integrity of the Union at all hazards, or against the Union. That is so.

The proceedings of the National Democratic Convention of last week, have resulted in the adoption of a peace platform just as the rebels in the South want peace by recognition; peace, but peace at the expense of disunion. Let us read what the Richmond Enquirer says on this subject, September 1st, instant.

"There is but one way to obtain all that we want and to remain in the right; it is the adoption of a manly, straightforward course. Let us reject all secondary questions and refuse all contingent arrangements. The simple recognition of full and absolute independence of the Confederate States is the one great condition upon which alone we can conclude peace; we ask for nothing more; we can accept nothing less. All other questions—of territorial limits, of the payment of the national debt, of compensation for losses—may, even the vexed question of emancipation—sink into utter insignificance by the side of the fundamental condition. Independence and peace is what we fight and pray for, war and death is what we are equally prepared for. Our recognition yielded, we will discuss reconstruction with our enemies, and when convinced that our interest lies in once more trying one government, there will be no danger of our people disregarding their plain interest. Without recognition there can be no armistice, no convention, no discussion—nothing but war, war, war. They must choose between recognition and war; there is no middle ground. Here we plant our banner, and here, with God's help, we mean to maintain it for us and our children."

If the Delegates of the Chicago Convention wish to negotiate with the rebels on these conditions, the sooner the issue is known to the people the better. Well does Mr. Bennett, of the New York Herald, say, the Chicago Platform is rotten, and invites to defeat. He urges his old friend, General McClellan to repudiate it. At the present crisis, the duty of every loyal citizen and voter is plain, whether his antecedents are Democratic or Republican; to maintain against all its enemies the integrity of the Union and the paramount authority of the Constitution and Laws of the United States, to aid the government in suppressing the rebellion, and punishing the rebels and traitors arrayed against it. No compromise with the rebels or the offer of any terms of peace, except such as may be based on the unconditional surrender of their hostility, and a return to their allegiance. That we are solemnly bound to maintain the government, to prosecute the war with the utmost possible vigor to the complete suppression of the rebellion, in full reliance upon the self-sacrifices, the patriotism, the heroic valor, and undying devotion of the American people to their country and its free institutions. Such an amendment should be made by the people to the Federal Constitution in conformity with its provisions, as shall terminate and forever prohibit the existence of slavery within the limits or jurisdiction of the United States. If we mistake not, these views contain the essence of the union platform as adopted by the union convention at Baltimore in June last. Fully agreeing with these loyal sentiments, we shall advocate the election to the Presidency and Vice Presidency of the nominees of that Convention.

Centennial of Brown University (R. I.)

DEAR PATRIOT. You may be pleased to hear from the grand Centennial celebration of this institution, held here on the 6th instant. It was a splendid affair. The numerous Alumni from the various States were present, together with many distinguished strangers from abroad. The Hon. ex-Governor Clifford, of Massachusetts, a graduate of the class of 1827, presided; his address was a noble one. President Snow gave a historical sketch of the College from its commencement. He showed that it was founded upon the broad principles of toleration, which were then, it was claimed, better understood in Rhode Island than in any other Colony. The College has flourished during the Century, and bids fair to do so many more.

A noble speech was made by Professor Golden Smith, of Oxford University, England, and it was finely responded to by ex-Secretary Chase.

General Burnside, also, made a fine address; and judging from Governor Chase's and General Burnside's speeches, we think this war is near an end. Ex-President Wayland gave a history of the College during the twenty-six years of his superintendence of it. He spoke highly of the class in which Governor Clifford graduated; said they were his pioneers. This class included such men as Clifford, Rev. Dr. Swanley, Drs. Thresher, Cornell, Thurber, Bacon, etc. George Bancroft, the historian, and many other noble guests were present to do honor to the occasion. President Snow's Address will be published, and will be a valuable historical document.

Poor Richard's Reasons for buying United States Securities.

The other day we heard a rich neighbor say he had rather have railroad stocks than the U. S. stocks, for they paid higher interest. Just then Poor Richard came up, and said that he just bought some of Uncle Sam's three years notes, paying seven and three-tenths per cent. interest. My rich friend exclaimed, "You! I thought you had no money to buy with." "Yes," said Richard, "I had a little laid up, for you know it is well to have something laid up against a wet day, and I have kept a little of my earnings by me." Now Poor Richard is known to all the country round to be a very prudent and industrious, and withal, wise man; for Richard never learned anything he didn't know how to make use of, and his wisdom and prudence had become a proverb. So, when he took out his savings and bought the notes, more than one was surprised, and it was no wonder rich Mr. Smith asked why. So Poor Richard, in a very quiet humble way, "for I never assumed anything," replied, "I suppose, Mr. Smith, you know a great deal better than I do what to do with money, and how to invest; for I never had much, and all I got I had to work hard for. But I have looked round a good deal upon my neighbors, and seen what they did with their money and I will tell you some things I saw and what I thought of. One very rich man was always dealing in money, and he made a great deal, but he was never satisfied with high interest. So he lent most of his money to some people who he thought were very rich, at a very high rate; and he often told how much he got, till one day the people he lent to went to smash. He got back about ten cents on a dollar of his money. I know another old gentleman, who had some bank stock, and he went to the bank and got ten per cent. dividend. The President and everybody said it was the best stock in the country—paid ten per cent. But what did the old man do but sell his stock the next day! Why? why? said everybody. Because, it pays too much dividend. And in six months the bank went to smash. Now, that I know to be a fact. Well, Mr. Smith, you say railroad stocks are best, because they pay high dividends? Can you tell how long they will pay them? I like railroads. I helped to build one, and I go in for useful things. But I tell you what I know about them. One-third of the railroads don't pay any dividend, and two-thirds (and some of them cracked up, too) do not pay as much as Government stocks. Now that brings me to the Government securities, and I will tell you why I prefer them. I take it you will admit Mr. Smith, that in the long run the investment which is best should have these qualities: First, it should be perfectly secure; secondly, that the income should be uniform and permanent—not up one year and down the next; and thirdly, that it should be marketable, so when your wet day comes, and you want your money, you can get it back. And I think these notes or bonds have got these qualities more than any other kind of personal property you can name. Try it.

"First, then, I have been looking into that great book you call the Census Statistics. I began to think it wasn't worth much; but since I used to study it, I tell you, I found out a good many things very useful for me to know. I found out, by looking at the crops, and the factories and shipping, &c., that we (I don't mean the rebel States) are making a thousand millions of dollars a year more than we spend. So you see that (since the increase of debt isn't half that) we are growing rich instead of poorer, as John Bull and the croakers would have us think. Then the debt will be paid, any how, no matter how long the war is. Besides, did you ever hear of a Government that broke before the people did? Look into your big histories, Mr. Smith, and you will find the people break before the Governments. Well, then, I call that stock perfectly secure.

"Secondly, you want the income uniform and permanent. Well, I want you to take up a list of banks, railroads, mines, insurance companies—anything you choose—and tell me (honor bright now!) how many have paid a uniform income for ten or twenty years. Not one in a hundred, Mr. Smith, and you know it.

"Now here is the Government will pay you without varying a tittle. Now I like something that gives me my income every year.

"Thirdly, you want something which is marketable any day in the year. Now, if you will ask any bank President, he will tell you that Government stocks are the only kind of property that is always saleable, because they will sell any where in the world.

"Now, Mr. Smith, this is why I put my little savings in Government stocks. I confess, too, that I wanted to help that dear old country, which is my home and my country." "I confess," said Mr. Smith, "I hadn't thought of all this. There is a good deal of sense in what you say, and I will go so far as to put two or three thousand dollars in United States stocks. It can do no harm."

Quincy Boys in Libby Prison.

The following communication, which may be interesting to many of our readers, has been kindly handed to us for publication:—

LIBBY PRISON, Richmond, (Va.) Aug. 21, 1864.

DEAR FATHER:—We have arrived in Richmond, at last, though not in a desirable manner. We made a raid on the Weldon railroad, tore up rails and sleepers, and then with our line extending both sides of the road, advanced into dense woods towards Petersburg. We did not go far before we got engaged, and here Joseph Luzzader was killed and a number wounded, whose names you have probably seen. Our First Lieut. Spear was wounded and died in six weeks. Nearly all of us got out safe that time, and that night I was on picket, and advanced the next morning through the woods, though the line of battle remained the same. Our first fight was on the 18th inst., on the 19th we were attacked just before night, and the "Johnnies" came round on our right and left, and the first we knew they were in our rear. Nearly all of our Regiment appears to be here; and I guess they took about 2500 prisoners. I will give you a list of those of our Company to alleviate the anxiety of their friends:—

Henry Curtis, Henry A. Newcomb, Wm. H. Burns, E. Thomas, William Hayden, W. E. Colburn, C. C. Dickerman, A. Derby, F. Becker, A. Bullard, C. Bushnell, J. Durgin, Edward Damon, S. DeForest, T. Doyle, J. E. Forbes, J. F. Green, W. C. Keep, Theodore H. Lout, P. Moran, E. Pierce, H. Sharlin, J. Sheehan, Geo. W. Savil, D. Kealy.

You see these are not all Quincy men, some having been transferred from the 17th Mass. Our prison room is much like the upper story of a wholesale store in Boston, and is quite clean and comfortable. We have two meals a day—corn bread and meat for breakfast, corn bread and beans for dinner—and we don't feel much pinched for food. I have my full suit of clothes, and in fact, they took nothing from me but my gun and some things lost everything. I have my watch all right. My health is good and I shall try and keep it so. I am allowed to write only one page, and you must observe the same rule in answering. Direct to Lieut. G. A. Barker Libby Prison, (Va.) leave it unsealed and enclose in an envelope to Maj. Mulford, with ten cents to pay Confederate postage. We have received some blankets to day. I secured one. There are eight Officers from the 30th here.

Your Son,
Geo. A. Barker,
Lieut. Co. D, 30th Mass. Regt.

GENERAL ORDER, No. 32.

The Volunteer Militia of Massachusetts, as it existed previous to the beginning of the present war, having been almost entirely broken up by the enlistment of its members, individually and as Companies and Regiments, in the service of the United States, in response to the different calls of the President for troops for three months, nine months, one hundred days, one year and three years; and the laws establishing this Volunteer Militia being no longer in conformity with the system of organization prescribed by the laws of the United States, and it having been found impossible to recruit this militia under the laws as they stood, and the safety and honor of the Commonwealth imperatively demanding a well-organized militia for the common defence; the Legislature of Massachusetts at its last session passed an Act, entitled an Act concerning the Militia, which was approved on the 14th day of May last, and which is the 23rd Chapter of the Acts of 1864, establishing a new system, in strict conformity to the Constitution and Laws of the United States, and by which all previous Acts concerning the militia were repealed;

As it was known, however, that some of the old organizations still possessed a strong vitality,—as others were capable of being revived and reconstituted, and as there are many glorious associations connected with the names of Companies and Regiments which have won imperishable honor for themselves and for the State,—the Legislature, while abolishing the whole of the ancient system, provided that the Commander-in-Chief might continue in being and retain such Companies and Regiments of the old Volunteer Militia as he should see fit;

By General Orders No. 22 of the 23d June, 1864, the different commanding officers were directed to make return to the Adjutant-General, on or before the 10th of July, 1864, of the condition of their several commands, stating therein the number of men to be relied on for duty, with any suggestions they might think proper to make relative to the expediency of continuing or disbarring their commands.

From the returns made in response to this Order, and from all other accessible sources of information, the Commander-in-Chief has sought to determine what Companies and Regiments of the Volunteer Militia, and of the Independent Division of Militia, presented such proof of present efficiency, or of a power to recruit themselves so as

GENERAL ORDER, No. 32.

The Volunteer Militia of Massachusetts, as it existed previous to the beginning of the present war, having been almost entirely broken up by the enlistment of its members, individually and as Companies and Regiments, in the service of the United States, in response to the different calls of the President for troops for three months, nine months, one hundred days, one year and three years; and the laws establishing this Volunteer Militia being no longer in conformity with the system of organization prescribed by the laws of the United States, and it having been found impossible to recruit this militia under the laws as they stood, and the safety and honor of the Commonwealth imperatively demanding a well-organized militia for the common defense, the Legislature of Massachusetts at its last session passed an Act, entitled an Act concerning the Militia, which was approved on the 14th day of May last, and which is the 28th Chapter of the Acts of 1864, establishing a new system, in strict conformity to the Constitution and Laws of the United States, and by which all previous Acts concerning the militia were repealed;

As it was known, however, that some of the old organizations still possessed a strong vitality, as others were capable of being revived and reconstituted, and as there are many glorious associations connected with the names of Companies and Regiments which have won honorable honor for themselves and for the State, the Legislature, while abolishing the whole of the ancient system, provided that the Commander-in-Chief might continue in being and retain such Companies and Regiments of the old Volunteer Militia as he should see fit;

By General Order No. 22 of the 23d June, 1864, the different commanding officers were directed to make return to the Adjutant-General, on or before the 10th of July, 1864, of the condition of their several commands, stating therein the number of men to be relied on for duty, with any suggestions they might think proper to make relative to the expediency of continuing or disbarring their commands. From the returns made in response to this Order, and from all other accessible sources of information, the Commander-in-Chief has sought to determine what Companies and Regiments of the Volunteer Militia, presented such proof of present efficiency, or of a power to recruit themselves so as to conform to the requirements of the law, as to warrant him in continuing and retaining them.

And in accordance with the results of such examination, it is hereby ordered that the Companies and Regiments hereinafter enumerated shall be continued and retained, viz.:

CAVALRY.

1. The Company in Boston commanded by Captain Lucius Slade, and heretofore known as Co. A, 1st Battalion Light Dragoons.
2. The Company in Boston commanded by Captain C. T. Stevens, and heretofore known as Co. B, 1st Battalion Light Dragoons.
3. The Company in New Bedford commanded by Captain George H. Shaw, and heretofore known as the company of Cavalry attached to the 2d Brigade, 1st Div. M. V. M.

4. The Company in Charlestown commanded by Captain John F. Gilman, and heretofore known as a company attached to the Independent Division M. V. M.
5. The Company in Roxbury commanded by Captain R. Holmes, formerly known as the Roxbury Horse Guards.

These Companies will be heretofore designated, respectively, in the order above given, as Companies A, B, C, D, E, of Cavalry of the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia; and, until the organization of new companies shall authorize the organization of one or more regiments, will remain unattached.

ARTILLERY.

1. The Company in Boston heretofore known as the 1st Light Battery, and commanded by Captain Lucius Cummings.
2. The Company in Boston commanded by Captain Warren French, at present temporarily attached to the Forty-second Regiment of Infantry.

These Companies will be respectively designated in the order above given as the First and Second Light Batteries Massachusetts Volunteer Militia.

INFANTRY.

The Third Regiment of Infantry, Lieutenant-Colonel James Barton now dying, will be retained under its present designation.

And the following Companies of said Regiment—

1. The Company commanded by Captain John W. Marble, of Freetown, now enlisted in the United States' service for 100 days.
2. The Company commanded by Captain Thomas P. Griffith, of South Carver.
3. The Company commanded by Captain Joseph O'Neill, of Fall River, at present temporarily attached to the Sixtieth Regiment.
4. The Company commanded by Captain David H. Dyer, of Fall River, and now in the United States' service for 100 days' duty.
5. The Company commanded by Captain Isaac A. Jennings, of New Bedford, and now enlisted in the United States' service for 100 days.
6. The Company commanded by Captain O. A. Baker, of Rehoboth, now enlisted in the United States' service for 100 days.
7. The Company commanded by Captain John M. Lyle, of Fairhaven, now enlisted in the United States' service for 100 days.
8. The Company commanded by Lieutenant Thomas J. Borden, of Fall River, formerly known as a company of the Independent Division of Militia.

These Companies will be heretofore designated and known, respectively, in the order above given, as Companies A, B, C, D, E, H, I, K, of the Third Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M. The Company commanded by Captain Lewis Soule, of Abington, formerly known as Co. E of the Fourth Regiment, M. V. M., and at present in United States' service for 100 days, will be heretofore attached to the Third Regiment, unless the friends of the Fourth Regiment shall forthwith offer to reorganize the regiment and shall diligently recruit the same.

The Fifth Regiment of Infantry, Colonel George H. Peirson commanding, will be retained under its present designation.

And the following Companies of said Regiment—

1. The Company commanded by Captain George H. Homer, of Boston.
2. The Company commanded by Captain John W. Collins, of Somerville.
3. The Company commanded by Captain George F. Barrow, of South Duxbury.
4. The Company commanded by Captain George H. Marden, Jr., of Charlestown.
5. The Company commanded by Captain David L. Brown, of Marlborough.
6. The Company commanded by Captain Philip J. Cooley, of Boston.
7. The Company commanded by Captain Charles S. Converse, of Woburn.
8. The Company commanded by Captain D. Webster Davis, of Charlestown.
9. The Company commanded by Captain Andrew A. Powers, of Bolton.
10. The Company commanded by Captain Francis M. Sweetser, of Stoneham.

And these Companies will be heretofore designated in the order above given, as Companies A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, K, of the Fifth Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M.

The Sixth Regiment of Infantry, Colonel Albert S. Follen commanding, will be retained under its present designation.

And the following Companies of said Regiment—

1. The Company commanded by Captain Joseph M. Conant, of Boston.
2. The Company commanded by Captain Geo. F. Shattuck, of Groton.

The above order will not apply to any companies at present in the service of the United States, or to any companies, in conformity with the provisions of said Act, will be at once discharged, and cease to be members of said companies. And the commanders of said companies shall, within thirty days, return to the Adjutant-General rolls of their respective companies, upon blank forms to be furnished by the Adjutant-General, in conformity with the provisions of Sect. 10 of said Act; and all such companies as shall not, within the said space of thirty days, have returned such rolls, shall appear by said rolls to be reduced to a less number than the minimum number of non-commissioned officers and privates by said Act established for a company of its arm, may be forthwith disbanded.

Application for the formation of new companies of the volunteer militia must be made at once to the Adjutant-General, and they will not be granted after the districting of the State for the formation of companies of the active militia under the new statute shall have been commenced.

All organization of the Volunteer Militia other than those herein before enumerated as continued and retained, and excepting the two corps of Cadets which by said Act are expressly recognized and retained, are hereby disbanded; and all officers holding commissions in any such organization, and all General and Staff Officers of Divisions and Brigades, are hereby honorably discharged.

Provided, however, that any regiment or company of the Volunteer Militia, not herein before enumerated, which shall present to the Adjutant-General, within ten days, satisfactory proof of its existence, and power to recruit itself to the minimum strength required by said Act for an organization of its arm, and shall account for its neglect to make returns to the General Order No. 22 of this year, may be reinstated and continued.

The Commander-in-Chief avails himself of this occasion to tender his thanks to the Major-Generals, Brigadier-Generals, and the various Field, Staff, and Company officers, who are by the operation of law discharged as aforesaid, for their past fidelity and efficiency in the service; and he entertains the hope that the reorganization of the militia will receive their constant and efficient co-operation.

By order of His Excellency JOHN A. ANDREWS, Governor and Commander-in-Chief.

WILLIAM SCHOUER,
Adjutant-General.

[Published by Request.]
McClellan Campaign Song.

The campaign song below, written by Jeffrey R. Brackett, of this town, for the Boston Post, some weeks ago, and copied into several of the Democratic journals, seems to have struck the key note for the occasion.

We wait, November's blast, to heal our country's woe,
Lincoln's trembling all aghast, McClellan aches the foe,
We'll cast our ballots then, and choose him President—
Who won the hearts of all his men by saying what he meant.

CHORUS.—
Then for the Constitution the Union and the Laws,
McClellan he shall lead us on, in this our country's cause.
For he's the foremost man in peace, the foremost man in wars.

The rail-splitter has tried to split our nation twain,
McClellan's skill and power applied shall bind it again;
He will not suffer ought to injure what was won
By our heroic sires who fought under a Washington;

CHORUS.—
Then for the Constitution, the Union and the Laws,
McClellan he shall lead us on in this our country's cause.
For he's the foremost man in peace, the foremost man in wars.

McClellan leads the train, while Lincoln plies the brake,
His efforts now are all in vain, his jokes no longer take;
The cars are on the track, the soldiers "all aboard,"
The people go for "Little Mac," and all the rest are flouted.

CHORUS.—
Then for the Constitution, the Union and the Laws,
McClellan he shall lead us on in this our country's cause.
For he's the foremost man in peace, the foremost man in wars.

In life and death we'll strive our country to redeem;
The engine's all alive,—hark! to the hissing steam,
The cars go rattling on, jump in then while you can,
Don't wait for any wagon, nor be the hindmost man.

CHORUS.—
Then for the Constitution, the Union and the Laws,
McClellan he shall lead us on in this our country's cause.
For he's the foremost man in peace, the foremost man in wars.

Crown and Cross.

It seemed a crown of cruel thorns;
It seemed a cross of bitter scorn;
I bent my suffering brows to wear,
I raised my feeble arms to bear.

I might have cast away the crown,
But hark! I loved had crashed it down,
And pressed its stinging points of pain,
Through quivering nerve and bursting vein.

I might have shunned the cross to bear,
But O—the Maker—placed it there;
And, failing the appointed task,
No other service I might ask.

As on my weary way I passed,
Ready to fulfill faint at last,
The burden under which I bent,
Became the staff on which I lean!

And blossoms for the thorn had place,
Upon my head a crowning grace,
That brought me through the burning hours,
The cool and healing touch of flowers.

My crown was love maintained thro' loss,
And truth upheld thro' scorn my cross.

Anecdotes.

A cobbler, at Leydon, who used to attend the public disputations, held at the academy, was once asked if he understood Latin.

No, replied the mechanic, but I can tell who is wrong in the argument.
And how can you tell that? asked his friend.
Why, by seeing who is angry first.

Two little urchins, whose parents paid more attention to the bottle than to the training of their children, were in the habit of seriously annoying their neighbors who lived close by, while at play in front of their house.

One day the lady of the house came to the door and told them to be quiet, or go home immediately. Said one of the children to the other.

Just hear she order us when we don't belong to she!

I haven't another word to say, sir; I never dispute with fools, said a gentleman who was getting the worst of an argument.

No was the reply, you are sure to agree with them.

Says little three-year-old Ruth, Papa, please buy me a muff when you go to Boston.

CAUTION

TO FEMALES IN DELICATE HEALTH.

DR. DOW, Physician and Surgeon, No. 7 Endicott Street, Boston, is consulted daily for all diseases incident to the female system. Prolapsus Uteri or Fluor Albus, Suppression, and other Menstrual derangements, are all treated on new pathological principles, and speedily relieved in a very few days. So invariably certain is the new mode of treatment, that most obstinate complaints yield under it, and the afflicted person soon enjoys perfect health.

Dr. Dow has no doubt had greater experience in the cure of diseases of women than any other physician in Boston.

The Singer
SEWING MACHINES.OUR LETTER A
Family Sewing Machine

Is fast gaining a world wide reputation.

It is beyond doubt the

BEST AND CHEAPEST

And Most Beautiful of all Family Sewing Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful appliances for Hemming, Binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering, Quilting, Braiding, Embroidering, Cording, and so forth. No other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable, and most durable, and most certain in action at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch which is the best stitch known. Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity, can see at a glance, how to use the Letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in gaudy and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work. While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and chastest manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family sewing as our Manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

Hope for the Sufferers!

LET NONE DESPAIR,

For DAILY and almost HOURLY cases are Reported, in which the effect of

THE GREAT

Humor Remedy,

HOWARD'S

VEGETABLE

Canker and Cancer Syrup,

Has been to lay the Axe to the Roots of the Great Blighting

UPAS-TREE OF HUMANITY,

WHOSE FRUITS ARE DEATH!

THE CANKER AND CANCER SYRUP has the most extraordinary cleansing action on the BLOOD, which it PURIFIES AT ITS SOURCE; and though it penetrates every organ of the Body, repairing injured Tissues, arresting the Progress of Decay, and stimulating healthy action, the Digestive, Nutritive and Circulating Organs. As nearly all DISEASES have their ORIGIN in the BLOOD its fountain should be CLEANSED AT ITS SOURCE! This sine qua non is infallibly secured by HOWARD'S SYRUP, which has

Redeemed Thousands of Victims

FROM PREMATURE GRAVES!

THE SYRUP is the most efficacious Remedy known for that dreadful Scourge of our Race, CANCER in its many forms, however obdurate—completely banishing the TORTURING ERYSIPELAS. The worst cases, given over by Physicians, have yielded to it.

CANKER, it cures in its worst forms in young and old.

SCURFULA, ordinary, or recent, it completely eradicates, leaving the system without a trace.

SALT RHEUM in its many aspects cannot withstand its virtues, as thousands testify.

ERYSIPELAS are acted on by the Syrup through the Blood. Many limbs have been saved by it.

ULCERS, however old or malignant, are healed by the Syrup without the usual danger of stopping Running Sores.

KING'S EVIL finds in the Syrup a Specific.

NEURALGIA, however distressing, has been cured by it when all other remedies have failed.

JAUNDICE is cured by the action of the Syrup on the Liver and Bile Ducts, and DYSPEPSIA caused by vitiated or insufficient bile, is removed.

WEAKNESSES—it removes with ease and certainty, and taken regularly, it promotes the healthy periodical secretion.

RICKETS, a Children's disease, it completely eradicates, and saves years of misery, even preventing consumption. To short it is the only safe and certain remedy known for THE CURE OF

EVERY KIND OF HUMOR!

and is so permeating that mothers nursing may keep their own and their infants' blood pure by its use. All suffering from Nervous Complaints, Insipient Consumption, Palpitations and General Debility will find it give them RENEWED HEALTH and VIGOR.

FOR SKIN DISEASES—it is especially suited, as it soon eradicates all Blotches, Pimples, &c., and imparts the Brilliance of Health to the Complexion.

* Where irritation of the Lungs and Coughs attend the diseases named, the excellent and soothing effect of the Syrup ensures relief and repose, and strengthens the system.

No case of failure of the SYRUP has ever been known where its use has been persevered in.

It might be easy to enter into learned scientific theories

Don't Know.
Who is it moves with silent pace,
With brow serene and smiling face,
Each word and action perfect grace?
"I don't know—do you?"

Whose heart shines forth from kindred eyes,
But listens to oppression's cries,
And when in danger never flies?
"I don't know—do you?"

Who does not show, by tongue or pen,
What he has learned—where he has been,
And keeps his thoughts from other men?
"I don't know—do you?"

Who, when he sees his country ruled
By men in foreign countries schooled, Thinks as a freeman he is fooled?
"I don't know—do you?"

Who, when he sees the popish power
Is gaining foothold every hour,
Feels that a storm begins to lower?
"I don't know—do you?"

Who feels that men born in this land,
Who "gainst oppression dared to stand,"
Are just as good as "pupper brand"?
"I don't know—do you?"

Straps.
The young ladies of a town in Pennsylvania are said to be keeping a list of the single affaired men, and noting down the reports of the examining board, with a view to select sound husbands. That's hard on the boys.

A coffin, said an Irishman, is the house a man lives in when he is dead.

To Restore Faded Photographs.—The prints should be unmounted by soaking in water for a time, and then immersed in a saturated solution of bicarbonate of mercury, in which they may be left for two or three minutes, and afterwards thoroughly washed.
The change takes place directly they are in the bicarbonate solution.

The following order, verbatim et literatim, taker from an afflicted widow:—

An Indians correspondent says: "On the farm of Lieut. Ekin, near Downing Green, I was shown a large stone, in the centre of which was a hole, which looked as if it had been used by the Indians for a hominy-mortar. Having occasion to use the stone, the owner caused it to be split, and in the centre of the solid rock found a perfectly round hole, about the size of a thirty-two pound shot; there was no communication from the outside whatever, and there was a good deal of speculation among the curious as to how the hole got there. The only reasonable solution of the problem was the suggestion that the Indian first made the hole, and the rock grew around it."

Why as a lady who flirts with every man she meets like a person whose skin cracks in cold weather. Because she is liable to have bad chaps on her hands.

A western editor was lately shot in an affray. Luckily, the ball came against a bundle of unpaid accounts in his pocket. Gunpowder couldn't get through that.

Long words, like long dresses, frequently hide something wrong about the understanding.

When stretched on his bed in the agony of gout, it was reported to Chatham that one of his official subordinates pronounced an order impossible of execution. "Tell him," said he,
"that I am not a doctor, and that I have no authority to give such orders." "Tell him," said the patient, "that I am not a doctor, and that I have no authority to give such orders."

Sheridan had a very convenient formula for acknowledging all the new publications that were sent him. "Dear Sir, I have received your exquisite work, and I have no doubt I shall be highly delighted—after I have read
it."

If anything will make a man feel "juicy about the heart," it is to talk velvet to a pair of sky colored eyes in a clover field. Time
—a moonshiny evening in June.

The discovery has been made that without a mouth a man could neither eat, drink, talk, kiss the girls, nor chew tobacco.

Robert Lincoln, the President's son, was at Saratoga, and somebody asked him if he was a relative of the President, answered, "Dis-

In the depths of the sea the waters are still;
the heaviest grief is that borne in silence, the deepest love flows through the eye and touch;
the purest joy is unspeakable; the most impressive prayer is silent prayer; and the most solemn preacher at a funeral is the silent one whose lips are cold.

Talking the other night, says the New Regime, of a common friend, whose love of beer has accelerated his death, Timon said,
"Ah! sir, he was a man, take him for half an hour, we shall not look upon his like

If a young lady "throws herself away," understand she has married for love; if she is "comfortably settled," understand that she has married a wealthy old man whom she hates.

There's no use in distributing tracts among the untractable.

Miscellaneous.
The Diamond Ring
It was the night before Christmas.
Dark and overclouded, with the white gusts of driving snow, and raw air which insinated itself into every fold of the most voluminous wrappings. A night which was uncomfortable to the rich, but dreadful to the poor.

Mr. Almayne did not observe the little blue nosed boy, crouching in the angle formed by the brilliantly illuminated plate glass window, as he sprang from his carriage and went slowly across the pavement into the bright, thronged shop. How should he? But little Ben Morrow's eyes eager with the sickly light of starvation, took in every detail of the rich man's equipage, and his purple fingers clasped one another tighter as he looked.

Oh! he thought, how nice it must be to be rich—to have cushioned carriages, and big red fires, and mince pies every day! Oh! I wish I were rich!

And Ben shrank closer into his corner, as the wind fluttered his thin, worn garment, and lifted the curls, with freezing touch, from his forehead.

Nor did Mr. Almayne observe him again when he entered his carriage, drawing on his expensive fur gloves, and leaning among the velvet cushions, with a sigh scarcely less earnest than little Ben's had been.

The child's ideal of a big red fire would have been quite realized if he could have seen the scarlet shine that illuminated Mr.
Almayne's drawing-rooms that night, glowing softly on gilded tables, alabaster vases, and walls of rose and gold, while just before the general flame, the pale widower sat thoughtfully watching the flickering spires of green amethyst light and very lonely in his splendid solitude!

I wonder what made me think of home just then he murmured, idly tapping his foot upon the velvet rug. I wonder what alchemy conjured up the old house under the walnut trees, and the broken bridge, where the willow branches swept the water—the bridge where little Clara Willis used to sit and study her lessons, while I angled vainly for the fishes that never would bite! How lovely she was, that golden haired girl, with blue-veined forehead, and her dark, downcast eyes!
I was very much in love with Clara Willis in those boy and girl days. I should like to know on what shore the waves of time have cast her little barque—it is not often that a person one has known in "long years" vanishes
so entirely and utterly from one's horizon.

Poor Clara—what glittering air places we built in the future—how solemnly we plighted our childish troths! And when I came back, with the fortune on whose golden colonades our fairy castle of happiness preared its pinnacles—she was gone. And Mary was a good wife to me, and a true one—but she was not Clara Willis.

As the thought passed through his brain, he instinctively glanced down at the finger upon which he wore the betrothal gift of his dead wife—the ring was gone.

Lost—it can't be lost, he murmured to himself, trying to think when and where he had last observed it. Can it have dropped from my finger without my knowledge? I must notify the police at once, and have it advertised!
Poor Mary's ring—I would not lose it for twice its value, and that would be no mean sum!

It was a narrow and murky little street, with here and there a dim lamp flaring feebly through the white obscurity of the driving snow; but little Ben Morrow knew every one of its warped flagstones by heart and ran whistling down the alley-way of a tall, weather stained building, undaunted by wind or tempest.

See sis, what a jolly glove I've found! he ejaculated, diving suddenly into a narrow door-way, and coming upon a tiny room, only lighted by a kerosene lamp, beside which sat a woman busily at work. Hallo!
is the fire out?

Wrap this old shawl round you, Ben, said
the woman, looking up, with a smile that partook more of tears than mirth, and you won't mind the cold so much. Every coal is gone, and I can't buy any more until I am paid for these caps. Did you sell any matches?

Not two papers, sighed the boy. I was so cold, Clara, I couldn't go round to the houses?

Well, never mind, Benny, she said, cheerfully. Sit close to me, dear—we'll keep each other warm. Oh Benny, I should like to have given you a nice whole coat for Christmas!

Don't cry, sis, said the boy, leaning his head against her knee. Didn't you give me your shawl for a comforter, only I lost it that windy day. You are just as good and sweet as you can be, Clara, and I love you just as well as if you were my whole sister instead of only half a one!

She smiled through her tears.

What is it about a glove, Ben?
He sprang suddenly up as if remembering.
A gentleman dropped it in the street. I ran after the carriage, but it went too fast for me to catch up. Isn't it nice, sis?

Very, Ben.
She drew the fur glove abstractedly on her chilled hand, and looked at the rich, dark fur.
Why, Ben, what's this?

For her touch had come in contact with something at the little finger of the glove, and she drew it out. Even by the dim light of the lamp she saw the myriad sparkling facets of a diamond ring.

The gentleman must have drawn it off with his glove, she said, while little Ben stood by, in open-mouthed surprise and delight, and Ben, this is very valuable—we ought to return it to the owner at once.

But how can we, if we don't know who he is? said Ben.
It will be advertised, dear, every effort will be used to recover so valuable a jewel. Tomorrow you must ask the newsmen to lend you a paper for five minutes, and we will look at the advertisements.

Sister, said Ben Morrow, under his breath, is it very valuable? is it worth a hundred dollars?

More than that, Ben—why!
Oh, Clara, he sobbed, burying his face in her lap, a hundred dollars would be so nice!
I wish it wasn't wrong to keep it!

Clara did not answer—she only smoothed down her brother's tangled curls, and he never knew how hard it was for her to keep back her own tears.

Mr. Almayne was walking impatiently up and down his long, glittering suit of rooms, in the Christmas brightness of the next day's noon, when his portly footman presented himself, like a respectable, motionless statue in the doorway.

Well, Porter.
There's a young person and a little boy down stairs, sir, about the advertisement.
Ask them to come in, Porter.

Porter glanced curiously at the velvet chairs and Wilton carpet.
"They're very shabby and muddy, sir?"
Never mind; show them in.

Porter departed, by no means pleased, and in a minute or two threw open the door, and announced—
The young person and the little boy!

Be seated, said Mr. Almayne, courteously.
Can you give me any information in regard to the ring I have lost?

Ben Morrow's sister was wrapped in a worn shawl, with a thick, green veil over her face.
She held out the fur glove, and within it a little paper box, from which blazed the white fire of the lost ring.

My brother found it, in this glove, last night, sir, she said, in a low, timid voice.
The initials—M. A.—correspond with your advertisement, so we brought it at once to the street and number specified.

Mr. Almayne opened his pocket-book.
I have promised a liberal reward, he said, taking out a fifty dollar bill. Will this be sufficient.

Clara Willis threw back her veil.
We are very poor sir, she said, but not so poor as to take a reward for doing our duty.
Thank you all the same. Come Benny?

White as Almayne's cheek had grown very pale as he saw the golden braids and clear blue eyes of his sweet first love beneath the faded black bonnet.

Clara! he exclaimed, Clara Willis; is it possible that you do not know me!

She turned at his mild exclamation, and glazed fixedly at him, with dawning recognition.

He took both her hands tenderly and reverently in his; if she had been a duchess, the action could not have been more full of courtly respect.

Clara—do not go yet, he said, pleadingly.
Let me unravel this strange enigma of our two lives! Oh, Clara! if this Christmas Day has indeed brought me the sunshine which never yet irradiated my life, I shall bless it to my dying day!

The low sun flamed redly in the west, before Mr. Almayne's carriage—the very one which Benny had so ignorantly admired the night before—was summoned to carry Clara and her brother, for the last time, to their separate homes. For ere the New Year dawned above the wintry earth, Clara was married to the man who had courted her under a green willow that overhung the wood bridge ten weary years ago. It was a very short engagement—and yet it was a very long one.

For the Patriot.
Deep Bottom. (Va.)
August 10th, 1864.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:
August 5th. To-day we were called upon to witness the execution of private McElhenney, formerly member of Co. F, 24th Mass Vol.
He was tried by general Court Martial in 1862 for gross misconduct, and sentenced to a dishonorable discharge, and forfeiture of all pay, and to serve five years hard labor at Fort Macon, (N. C.) His sentence was sent to Major General J. G. Foster, Commanding Department for approval. The General mitigated his sentence to serve the rest of his term of enlistment to the above place, and forfeiture of all pay and allowances. He was accordingly sent to Fort Macon, where he finally made his escape and went into the enemy's lines. He joined the rebel service, and fought against us until a favorable opportunity occurred for him to desert again to our lines. But unfortunately for him, he made his escape into his own Company's hands at this place, and was instantly recognized. He was sent to Headquarters, and after examination, a Court martial was convened, and he was tried for "desertion," and sentenced to be shot to death by musketry; the sentence to take place within forty-eight hours after its approval.

Sunday 7th. He was sent to our Regiment, and orders were given for him to be shot Monday afternoon, at 4 o'clock; preparations were made accordingly. At 12 m., on Monday, a party of six men were detailed to dig his grave outside our works. Half past 1. A detail of thirty men for escort duty, of which your humble servant was one.
At quarter past 3, the Brigade was turned out and formed battalion line, and had the sentence read to them, when they marched to the place of execution, where they formed three sides of a square, and awaited the coming of the prisoner. The escort was formed at the guard house, in the following manner:

Division of Platoons: the first Platoon in front of the army wagon, drawn by two horses containing the coffin—eight men on each side and the second Platoon in the rear; the firing party of twenty-four men from his own Company, drawn by ballot, came next, and the rear was brought up by the burial party.

The prisoner was brought out and jumped into the wagon with undaunted courage; the priest following him, they took their seats on the coffin. The procession moved, the band playing a funeral dirge. He seemed to be very indifferent, and the priest seemed to be earnestly engaged in preparing him for his mutually end. Having thus the control of it, he wrote to the Mayor, offering to recommend it to the city, if it would bind itself not to sell it again for twenty years. The city refused, and he retained the property, and thus made the first and only speculation of his life; the success of which seemed to give as much pleasure to all his fellow citizens as it did to himself. His life thus declined with gradual and almost unperceived decay, in the society of his children, grandchildren and friends, the most revered and honored man of the city where he lived, rounding a life of singular freedom from misfortunes by an old age of extraordinary vigor and enjoyment.

In December, 1861, just before completing his sixtieth year, he slipped from a chair by his bedside, just after rising in the morning, and injured his hip severely, which confined him for three or four months; almost entirely to his bed. His strength of constitution, however, enabled him to recover from this accident in a remarkable degree. Though unable to walk without assistance, he was free from pain, and could amuse himself with his books, his pen and his "numfroun" visitors as well as before it happened.

Mr. Quincy was eminently handsome at all periods of his life, even down to extreme old age. Three first class portraits remain of him. One by Stuart, taken in 1826, when he was "in the prime of manhood, where youth ends," in the earlier and highly finished style of the artist. The second, also by Stuart, taken in 1826, in his later and freer manner.
And the third by Page, in 1842, as President of the University, in the first greenness of his old age. He was not fluent of speech in his later years, though we have heard that his utterance was swift enough in the fiery days of his Congressional conduct. But though not a rapid talker, whenever engaged in conversation which excited his mind his words were full of wise thought, illustrated by long experience. He was very happy and ready in impromptu speeches, and an admirable presiding officer at public dinners, during his prime. His interest in public affairs remained unabated to the last; and he was one of the few examples of a man keeping at least abreast with his time to extreme old age. The convulsions and disturbances which slavery has produced of late, he had foreseen and prophesied from the beginning as its inevitable fruits, though he had not expected to live to see them ripen.
The part which he took in the Fremont campaign is not yet forgotten, and his interest was great, though his active participation was less, in that which ended in the election to get ready for picket. Every thing quiet along our lines. No more at present. More anon. Yours respectfully. v. v.

Josiah Quincy.
[FROM THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.]

In 1836 he delivered the Bi-Centennial Oration, which he afterward enlarged into a full history of the College, which is exhaustive of the subject for the two first centuries of its existence. A lover of good letters, a gentleman, a statesman, and a man of the world, he was eminently fitted for that difficult station, and he filled it in a manner entirely satisfactory to the public, to the officers and to the students. Though it was impossible that he should have had the management of so many hundreds of young men during so many years without occasions of discipline which exposed him to temporary dissatisfactions and dislikes, we believe that there were none who did not ultimately acknowledge the justice and wisdom of his academic administration. Whenever he appeared on public days at Cambridge, he was always welcomed with the most cordial enthusiasm, and every allusion to his name was followed by rounds of applause. One of his last appearances there was on the occasion of the inauguration of his fourth successor, the late lamented President Felton. Entering the church during the delivery of the Inaugural Address, the entire audience rose and cheered him for several minutes. The eye that saw him blessed him, and the ear that heard him bore witness to him.

After the commencement of 1845 he took leave of Cambridge and removed to Boston, between which city and his estate at Quincy he divided his year about equally. He took his farm again into his own hands, and amused himself with conducting its economy for more than ten years, when he resigned it into the hands of his eldest son. His old age was singularly free from the infirmities and distempers incident to protracted life.
His temperance and activity of body and mind preserved him in a fuller possession of all his faculties than often falls to the lot of man. Indeed, his health had been unbroken in an extraordinary manner during all his life. He was never confined to his bed after the diseases of childhood were over, until the accident which happened to him on the verge of ninety, of which we shall presently speak. During his Presidency of sixteen years he was never hindered in his duties for a day by any illness or accident.
During his retirement, he amused the leisure which the management of his own private affairs and of extensive trusts permitted him, with reading and his pen, and with constant intercourse with society and his many friends.

of Mr. Lincoln. Far from being cast down by the disturbance of public and private affairs consequent upon the civil war which succeeded, he looked upon that war as the most hopeful sign that he had seen during his long life of the future of his country. He used to say, after the war had begun, that he now believed that we were going to be a great nation, of which he never felt sure before. The respect and veneration in which he was held by all descriptions of men during his later years, were the just reward of his long life of disinterested public service. He was never even accused by his worst enemies of any by-ends or self-seeking. His public spirit was real, and his disinterestedness perfect, and though he might have reached higher political distinction by a less straightforward public life, it could never have been crowned with a more approving conscience, or a more universal reverence and affection, accorded to him as the patriarch of the public men of America.

Beside many speeches in Congress and orations on particular occasions, some of which we have mentioned, Mr. Quincy has published the following works:

Memoir of Josiah Quincy, Jr., Boston, 1825; History of Harvard University, 2 vols., Cambridge, 1840; The Journals of Major Samuel Shaw, the first American Consul at Canton, with a life of the author, Boston, 1847; The History of the Boston Athenaeum, Cambridge, 1851; The Municipal History of the Town and City of Boston during Two Centuries, Boston, 1852; The Life of John Quincy Adams, Boston, 1853; Essay on the Sailing of Cattle, Boston, 1859.

[CONCLUDED.]

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Sept. 17th, 1864.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

DEFICIENCIES IN THIS DISTRICT. The following are the deficiencies existing on the 1st of September in the various towns in the Second District, the naval credits allowed having been deducted from the number to be furnished:

Attleboro, 24; Easton, 14; Raynham, 7; Rehoboth, 2; Seekonk, 2; Braintree, 1; Canton, 19; Cohasset, 2; Dorchester, 5; Quincy, 10; Sharon, 1; Stoughton, 12; Abington, 74; Bridgewater, 22; West Bridgewater, 7; North Bridgewater, 24; Hingham, 1; Hanson, 2; Marshfield, 21; South Scituate, 7.

It will be seen by the above that Quincy wanted ten more men on the first of the month to fill the Quota. But we learn from a reliable source that six have been credited to our Quota since that time which will leave four to be drafted on Monday next.

INCIDENTS OF A PLEASURE PARTY. On the morning of the 4th instant, the splendid sail boat Maid of Erin, Captain Regan, after taking in all necessary stores at the furnishing house, near Brackett's wharf, started down the harbor with a nice little party, to have a pleasant sail and a social clam bake. But when nearing Mear's shore, (for reasons unknown) the boat suddenly capsized, spilling its occupants into the briny deep. The water being some five or six feet deep, they must all have met with a watery grave, had it not been for prompt assistance being rendered from men and boats near the shore; as it was, they were rescued without other damage than a serious fright and a cold bath. The Captain and Mate returned in the boat, but the other occupants preferred terra firma; and all arrived safely home at last, minus of their clam bake. Thus immersed were the pleasures of the party.

STATE CONVENTION. The Republican State Convention assembled at Worcester on Thursday last, Gov. Andrew and all the officers elected on the State ticket last year were unanimously re-nominated with the exception of the Hon. Dwight Foster, the present Attorney General, who declining any further to be a candidate, Chester L. Reed, Esq., of Taunton was nominated in his stead. The gathering was very large, and the proceedings of the convention were characterized by intelligence, spirit, harmony and enthusiasm never known before in the history of State political conventions. The Hon. Edward Everett and Whiting Griswold were nominated for Presidential Electors at large.

ORGANIZE! ORGANIZE!! This is the order of the day. Political organizations are springing up all around us. The McClellan men went through the preliminaries of that duty on Thursday evening, at the Town Hall, by forming a Club, and making choice of the following officers:

President: Jeffrey R. Brackett.
Vice Presidents: William S. Pattee, Henry Wood, Benjamin F. Curtis, Nathan P. White, Benjamin Curtis, James S. Penniman, Esq., S. Fellows, Hugh Mundy, Patrick McDonnell, George L. Baxter, and Jonathan Jameson.

Secretaries: George Cahill, Noah Curtis.
Treasurer: George W. B. Taylor.
Marshals: William Parker, Jr.
Finance Committee: Arthur P. Hayden, John Arnold, and George Curtis.

The Republicans hold a Caucus this evening, for the same purpose.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, SEPT. 15, 1864.

As we approach Autumn, the city becomes more lively. Large numbers of our citizens who have sojourned in the suburbs during the summer have returned. The public schools are resumed. Various places of amusement have taken initiatory measures for dramatical and other performances. On every fair week day the streets are crowded with strangers and visitors, seeking by purchase their supplies in anticipation of the cold and severe winter which is prophesied to come to pass. The places of public worship are well attended on the Sabbath, and various courses of public lectures on scientific and literary subjects will soon begin with their "Introductions." The city is quite free from general sickness. Boston is one of the most healthy cities of its size in the world; and with the exception of a few weeks of summer, there is no place in the United States more attractive and desirable as a permanent residence, than this modern Athens of America. There is some reaction in business since my last; but a large fall trade is not expected. With the present high prices people will buy no more than is required for absolute necessity; a proper course to stop speculation. If the community would suspend the use of all foreign commodities for a few weeks, prices would descend "with a run." It has been computed that there is a larger amount of goods of every description now reposing in the stores and warehouses of Boston than was ever known before. Why are these hoarded up unless to foster that morbid spirit of speculation, that is working great injury to the masses?

General McClellan's letter of acceptance as the nominee of the late Chicago Convention, without openly expressing himself in favor of its platform, has been the subject of much comment throughout the country. He has certainly shown himself a skillful politician, aiming to get on a war platform without offending and driving off his peace supporters, but in this he has not succeeded; as many of the prominent peace Democrats are down upon him. In the exposition of his views, he is plausible and politic, rather than bold and decided. He may be for enforcing the war, but he says nothing to stimulate the military arm of our people, when reinforcements of our army by volunteers or drafting are all important to a successful issue. On the contrary, says the Boston Journal, "he takes a position to increase the dissensions of our people, and to embarrass and thwart the war policy of an administration that must remain in power several months at least. This is to propitiate his peace and partisan supporters, and is a terrible foreshadowing of what he would do, should he come into power by means of those supporters." But there is little prospect of his coming into power if the recent elections in Vermont and Maine can be taken as indications of success. Abraham Lincoln, who now fills the Executive Chair of the Nation, has greater responsibilities resting upon him than any of his predecessors; he has shown himself honest, not shrinking from the performance of any duty. Representing as he does the great union or war party, the vitality of the country depends upon his re-election. Defeated, we must expect an ignominious peace by disunion for ever of the North from the South. Had Judge Douglas lived he would have found a true friend to the general government. In his last speech on the rebellion, he said, "the conspiracy is known. Armies have been raised, war is levied to accomplish it. There are only two sides to the question. Every man must be for the United States or against it. There can be no neutrals in this war, only patriots and traitors." The remark, though uttered nearly three years ago, is applicable to the present time.

AN ARMY INCIDENT. The following, in which we have a special interest, we copy from the Fall River Journal of the 13th inst. "To-day we had divine service in the regiment, and there was a full attendance of both officers and men. Colonel Wams arrived last night, and will take command to-morrow—we hope—he is an old officer and one who knows how to take care of his men." "Capt. Bert, the senior captain in the regiment, has been in command most of the time since our arrival here. He is a brave and efficient officer, and deserves the praise of all. He is a member of the old Hancock Guards of Quincy, and served in the old Fourth, under Colonel Packard, at Fortress Monroe and Newport News, and should we meet the enemy I have no doubt but the right flank company will show us a good example."

INTERESTING TO COMMUTATION MEN. The Harrisburg Telegraph, upon what authority it does not state, says that, after mature reflection, Provost Marshal General Fry has concluded to reverse a former decision in relation to the $300 commutation paid by parties who were drafted during the last conscription. The decision shortly to be promulgated will exempt all those who paid the commutation of three hundred dollars for three years.

MAINE ELECTION. The partial returns on Tuesday showed a Republican gain but complete accounts from nearly the whole State according to the Post of yesterday, now show a Democratic gain of about 4,500.

For the Patriot.
"Union and Liberty."

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

It will be observed by posted notices, that all citizens of Quincy who give an unqualifiedly loyal support to the Government of the United States, who believe that the only way to obtain a permanent peace, is through a vigorous prosecution of the war, for the suppression of the Rebellion, who are in favor of the truly patriotic principles set forth in the Baltimore Platform, and of the election of ABRAHAM LINCOLN and ANDREW JOHNSON are invited to meet at the Town Hall, this evening, for the purpose of organizing a Union Club. There will be no music from an imported band, to attract attendance by its novelty, but it is hoped that the importance of the present political campaign will so move the people that there will be a large gathering of men who "march to the music of the Union," in the spirit of the immortal words of the great Webster, "Liberty and Union, Now and Forever, One and Inseparable."

STAMPS ON RECEIPTS. Receipts for the delivery any property, the value of which is over $20, are chargeable with a stamp duty of two cents, and this applies to all any receipts, and all receipts issued or received by steamboat, railroad, or express companies. Duplicates are subject to the stamp duty as originals.

FINE SHOES. Get the modern styles.—About fifty cases of different varieties of boots and shoes made expressly for the Fall and Winter trade, just opened at Curtis's Central Shoe Store.

LEGAL WEIGHT OF COAL. The United States Circuit Court of Philadelphia decided that the weight of a ton of coal is 2240 pounds, instead of 2000 pounds. The judge ruled that a company of grocers might as well meet and agree to reduce the number of ounces in a pound, and make the smaller number the standard of a pound for their customers, as for coal dealers to agree that the weight of a ton shall be 2000 pounds, and furnish that amount to their customers.

THE CROPS. The Loyal Sunrise says the recent rains in Aroostook county, Maine, have wonderfully improved the later crops, and there is a prospect of an abundance of fall feed for cattle. The wheat crop is excellent. Oats, although not so large a growth of straw as usual, are very bright and the crop good. Buckwheat never looked better, and potatoes and turnips promise an abundant yield.

We would advise those about purchasing their boots and shoes to call at Curtis's and examine his styles, qualities, and prices.

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 15.—The subscriptions to the 7-30 loan for the last three days amounted to $1,500,000; total to date, $33,663,000.

Col. Jarvis Barrows of Vernon, Vt., has raised this year ten acres of tobacco, which will yield, in the estimation of good judges, nine tons of merchantable tobacco of the first quality.

The Greenfield (Mass.) Gazette says: "The hop crop in this vicinity has been a failure this season. Some hop growers in the southern part of Vermont have acres from which they do not gather a pound. A blast appears to have passed over them."

The proprietors of the Chicago Times office have discharged their entire force of printers and put a force of forty young women in their places.

The tobacco crop of the Connecticut valley is the largest ever raised.

The official reports show that Illinois has furnished but 1150, and Indiana but 1025 men under the last call for troops.

Washington Territory is now in direct telegraphic communication with Washington.

Snow fell near Wheeling, Va., on Tuesday night of last week.

That stirring events are on foot is evidenced by the fact that all officers and soldiers in Washington are ordered to report immediately to their respective regiments.

On board the Plymouth Rocker, of the Stonington line, on Monday, the passengers were treated to a novel and interesting spectacle. No less than four couples were united in marriage in the main saloon. In honor of the occasion Capt. Geer gave a grand supper to the matrimonial party.

The Secretary of War has rescinded his order of Sept. 11, 1863, which allows men of three years organizations who desire to re-enlist in the same regiment the bounty of $400.

BOSTON, AUGUST 20th, 1864. }

GENERAL ORDER, No. 32.

The Volunteer Militia of Massachusetts, as it existed previous to the beginning of the present war, having been almost entirely broken up by the enlistment of its members, individually and as Companies and Regiments, in the service of the United States, in response to the different calls of the President for troops for three months, nine months, one hundred days, one year, and three years; and the laws establishing this Volunteer Militia being no longer in conformity with the system of organization prescribed by the laws of the United States, and it having been found impossible to recruit this militia under the laws as they stood, and the safety and honor of the Commonwealth imperatively demanding a well-organized militia for the common defense; the Legislature of Massachusetts at its last session passed an Act, entitled, "An Act concerning the Militia, which was approved on the 14th day of May last, and which is the 23rd Chapter of the Acts of 1864, establishing a new system, in strict conformity to the Constitution and Laws of the United States and the Constitution of the Commonwealth, and by which all previous Acts concerning the militia were repealed;

As it was known, however, that some of the old organizations still possessed a strong vitality,—as others were capable of being revived and reconstituted, and as there are many glorious associations connected with the names of Companies and Regiments which have won imperishable honor for themselves and for the State,—the Legislature, while abolishing the whole of the ancient system, provided that the Commander-in-Chief might continue in being and retain such Companies and Regiments of the old Volunteer Militia as he should see fit:—

By General Orders No. 22 of the 23d June, 1864, the different commanding officers were directed to make return to the Adjutant General, on or before the 10th of July, 1864, of the condition of their several commands, stating therein the number of men to be relied on for duty, with any suggestions they might think proper to make relative to the expediency of continuing or disbarring their commands.

From the returns made in response to this Order, and from all other accessible sources of information, the Commander-in-Chief has sought to determine what Companies and Regiments of the Volunteer Militia, and of the Independent Division of Militia, presented such proof of present efficiency, or of a power to recruit themselves so as to conform to the requirements of the law, as to warrant him in continuing and retaining them.

And in accordance with the results of such examination, it is hereby ordered that the Companies and Regiments hereinafter enumerated shall be constituted and retained, viz:—

1. The Company in Boston commanded by Captain Lucius Slade, and heretofore known as Co. A, 1st Battalion Light Dragoons.

2. The Company in Boston commanded by Captain C. T. Stevens, and heretofore known as Co. B

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Headquarters, Boston, August 20th, 1864.

GENERAL ORDER, No. 32.

The Volunteer Militia of Massachusetts, as it existed previous to the beginning of the present war, having been almost entirely broken up by the enlistment of its members, individually and as Companies and Regiments, in the service of the United States, in response to the different calls of the President for troops for three months, nine months, one hundred days, one year and three years; and the laws establishing this Volunteer Militia being no longer in conformity with the system of organization prescribed by the laws of the United States, and it having been found impossible to recruit this militia under the laws as they stand, and the safety and honor of the Commonwealth imperatively demanding a well-organized militia for the common defense; the Legislature of Massachusetts at its last session passed an Act, entitled an Act concerning the Militia, which was approved on the 14th day of July, 1864, and which is the 23rd Chapter of the Acts of 1864, establishing a new system, in strict conformity to the Constitution and Laws of the United States and the Constitution of the Commonwealth, and by which all previous Acts concerning the militia were repealed.

As it was known, however, that some of the old organizations still possessed a strong vitality, as others were capable of being revived and re-organized, and as there are many glorious associations connected with the names of Companies and Regiments which have won imperishable honor for themselves and for the State, the Legislature, while abolishing the whole of the ancient system, provided that the Commander-in-Chief might continue in being and retain such Companies and Regiments of the old Volunteer Militia as he should see fit.

By General Order No. 22 of the 23d June, 1864, the different commanding officers were directed to make return to the Adjutant-General, on or before the 10th of July, 1864, of the condition of their several commands, stating therein the number of men to be relied on for duty, with any suggestions they might think proper to make relative to the expediency of continuing or disbanded their commands.

From the returns made in response to this Order, and from all other accessible sources of information, the Commander-in-Chief has sought to determine what Companies and Regiments of the Volunteer Militia, and of the Independent Division of Militia, presented such proof of present efficiency, or of a power to recruit themselves as to warrant him in continuing and retaining them.

And in accordance with the results of such examination, it is hereby ordered that the Companies and Regiments hereinafter enumerated shall be continued and retained, viz:

1. The Company in Boston commanded by Captain Lucius Slade, and heretofore known as Co. A, 1st Battalion Light Dragoons.

2. The Company in Boston commanded by Captain C. T. Stevens, and heretofore known as Co. B, 1st Battalion Light Dragoons.

3. The Company in New Bedford commanded by Captain George H. Shaw, and heretofore known as the company of Cavalry attached to the 2d Brigade, 1st Div. M. V. M.

4. The Company in Charlestown commanded by Captain John F. Gilman, and heretofore known as a company attached to the Independent Division M. V. M.

5. The Company in Roxbury commanded by Captain B. Holmes, formerly known as the Roxbury Horse Guards.

These Companies will be heretofore designated, respectively, in the order above given, as Companies A, B, C, D, E, of Cavalry of the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia; and, until the organization of new companies shall authorize the organization of one or more regiments, will remain unattached.

ARTILLERY.

1. The Company in Boston heretofore known as the 1st Light Battery, and commanded by Captain Lucius Cummings.

2. The Company in Boston commanded by Captain Warren French, at present temporarily attached to the Forty-second Regiment of Infantry.

These Companies will be respectively designated in the order above given as the First and Second Light Batteries Massachusetts Volunteer Militia.

INFANTRY.

The Third Regiment of Infantry, Lieutenant-Colonel James Barton commanding, will be retained under its present designation.

And the following Companies of said Regiment—

1. The Company commanded by Captain John W. Marble, of Freetown, now enlisted in the United States' service for 100 days.

2. The Company commanded by Captain Benjamin R. French, of Medway.

3. The Company commanded by Captain Isaac B. White, of Boston.

4. The Company commanded by Captain Samuel A. Waterman, of Roxbury.

5. The Company commanded by Captain Augustus Ford, of Worcester.

6. The Company commanded by Captain Samuel S. Eddy, of Worcester.

7. The Company commanded by Captain Alanson H. Ward, of Worcester.

8. The Company commanded by Captain I. T. Stevens, of Braintree.

9. The Company commanded by Captain Benjamin R. Wales, of Dorchester.

And the said Companies, in the above order will be heretofore respectively designated as Companies A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, and K, of the Forty-second Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M.

The Sixtieth Regiment of Infantry, Colonel Ansel D. Wass commanding, will be retained under its present designation.

And the following Companies of said Regiment—

1. The Company commanded by Captain John W. Marble, of Freetown, now enlisted in the United States' service for 100 days.

2. The Company commanded by Captain Thomas P. Griffith, of South Carver.

3. The Company commanded by Captain Joseph O'Neill, of Fall River, at present temporarily attached to the Sixtieth Regiment.

4. The Company commanded by Captain David H. Dyer, of Fall River, and now in the United States' service for 100 days' duty.

5. The Company commanded by Captain Isaac A. Jennings, of New Bedford, and now enlisted in the United States' service for 100 days.

6. The Company commanded by Captain O. A. Baber, of Rehoboth, now enlisted in the United States' service for 100 days.

7. The Company commanded by Captain Jabez M. Lytle, of Fairhaven, now enlisted in the United States' service for 100 days.

8. The Company commanded by Lieutenant Thomas J. Holden, of Fall River, formerly known as a company of the Independent Division of Militia.

These Companies will be heretofore designated and known, respectively, in the order above given, as Companies A, B, C, D, E, H, I, K, of the Third Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M.

The Company commanded by Captain Lewis Soule, of Abington, formerly known as Co. E of the Fourth Regiment, M. V. M., and at present in United States' service for 100 days, will be heretofore attached to the Third Regiment, and the friends of the Fourth Regiment shall forthwith offer to re-organize the regiment and shall diligently recruit the same.

The Fifth Regiment of Infantry, Colonel George H. Peckham commanding, will be retained under its present designation.

And the following Companies of said Regiment—

1. The Company commanded by Captain George H. Homer, of Boston.

2. The Company commanded by Captain John W. Collins, of Southville.

3. The Company commanded by Captain George F. Barnes, of South Danvers.

4. The Company commanded by Captain George H. Marden, Jr., of Charlestown.

5. The Company commanded by Captain David L. Brown, of Marlborough.

6. The Company commanded by Captain Philip J. Cooley, of Boston.

7. The Company commanded by Captain Charles S. Converse, of Woburn.

8. The Company commanded by Captain D. Webster Davis, of Charlestown.

9. The Company commanded by Captain Andrew A. Powers, of Bolton.

10. The Company commanded by Captain Francis M. Swetser, of Stoughton.

And these Companies will be heretofore designated in the above order, respectively, as Companies A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, and K, of the Fifth Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M.

The Sixth Regiment of Infantry, Colonel Albert S. Follansbee commanding, will be retained under its present designation.

And the following Companies of said Regiment—

1. The Company commanded by Captain Joseph M. Coombs, of Boston.

2. The Company commanded by Captain Geo. F. Shattuck, of Groton.

3. The Company commanded by Captain Benj. F. Goddard, of Lowell.

4. The Company commanded by Captain James W. Hart, of Lowell.

5. The Company commanded by Captain Frank H. Whitcomb, of Boston.

6. The Company commanded by Captain Henry W. Wilson, of Boston.

7. The Company commanded by Captain Nathan Taylor, of Lowell.

8. The Company commanded by Captain Moses E. Ware, of Roxbury.

9. The Company commanded by Captain Edward H. Staten, of Salem.

10. The Company commanded by Captain Edgar J. Sherman, of Lawrence.

And the said Companies in the above order will be heretofore respectively designated as Companies A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, K, of the Sixth Regiment of Infantry.

The Eighth Regiment of Infantry, Colonel Benj. F. Peach, Jr. commanding, will be retained under its present designation.

And the following Companies of said Regiment—

1. The Company commanded by Captain Lewis A. Tull, of Springfield.

2. The Company commanded by Captain Henry M. Lyons, of Adams.

3. The Company commanded by Captain Samuel Graves, of Marblehead.

4. The Company commanded by Captain William H. Merritt, of Lynn.

5. The Company commanded by Captain Samuel F. Littlefield, of South Reading.

6. The Company commanded by Captain Henry Stone, of Lynn.

7. The Company commanded by Captain Edward L. Low, of Gloucester.

8. The Company commanded by Captain William H. Landon, of Springfield.

9. The Company commanded by Captain Lafayette Butler, of Pittsfield.

And the said Companies, in the above order, will be heretofore respectively designated as Companies A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, and K, of the Eighth Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M.

U. S. 7-30 LOAN.

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three tenths per cent. per annum—principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing Bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect. They will be issued in denominations of $50, $100, $500, $1,000, and $5,000, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges as soon after the receipt of the original Certificates of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one-quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES OF THIS LOAN.
It is a NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the BEST SECURITY. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in United States Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it cannot pay in anything better, for its own assets are either in government securities or in notes or bonds payable in government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

Convertible into a Six per cent. $5 20 Gold Bond.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent. per annum, for the current rate for $5 20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. United States stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate, is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

The Earth is Full of Thy Riches.

BY WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

Almighty, hear us, while we raise
Our hymn of thankfulness and praise
That Thou hast given the human race
So sweet, so fair a dwelling place.

That when this orb of sea and land
Was moulded in Thy forming hand,
Thy calm, benignant smile impressed
A beam of Heaven upon its breast.

Then towered the hills, and broad and green
The vale's deep pathway sank between,
Then stretched the plain to where the sky
Shoots and shuts in the exploring eye.

And stately groves beneath thy smile
Arose on continent and isle;
And fruits came forth and blossoms glowed
And fountains gushed and rivers flowed.

Thy hand outspread the billowy plains
Of ocean, nurse of genial rains;
Hung high the glorious sun, and set Night's crescents in her arch of jet.

Lord, teach us, while the unsated gaze;
Delighted, on thy works delays,
To deem the forms of beauty here
But shadows of a brighter sphere.

Miscellaneous.

Our Minister's Trial.

A good man was our pastor, Rev. Thornton Haven, and one of no common eloquence.
Our best—I had almost written, all our church members—loved him. I am sorry to say that a few, thorned by those words which fell from his lips when he endeavored to excite us brethren and sisters to

"A closer walk with God," regarded him with other emotions than fruits of the spirit.

Like all other good men he was carefully watched by those who would have been transported with fiend-like delight could they have found a flaw in his conduct.

Well! well! said Mr. Monroe, the wheel-wright's wife, to her husband, as they sat at the breakfast table one morning, suppose Mr.
Haven did kiss Fanny Lawton. She was almost one of the family—what was the harm?

But, said the wheelwright, I don't believe that he did kiss her.
Fanny says that he did, replied his wife.

This seemed to be a clincher to Mr. Monroe. He deliberately wiped his face with his handkerchief, and with a downcast, thoughtful look and much slower pace than usual, went to his shop. He had hardly taken the shave in his hand, and begun to apply it to an unfinished spoke, before Deacon Brown came in. The Deacon stood awhile chewing a fragment of a shaving and talking about this, that and nothing. Suddenly he said—Brother Monroe, have you heard about our minister?

Yes, replied the brother. Then there was not a word spoken for several minutes. The wheelwright lastly worked on the spoke; the Deacon looked out of the window.

At length Mr. Monroe asked softe voce
What is to be done?
Something must, was the Deacon's answer, or the cause will suffer, and then he walked rapidly up the street.

What is this story about Mr. Haven's improper treatment of young ladies? asked the cynical lawyer Thompson of Wood, the tavern-keeper.

Why, said the mixer of sherry cobbles and the drawer of strong beer. The parson is no better than others.

Have you heard of priest Haven's fall?
was the question of one infidel to another.

Yes, just as I thought it would be—ha, ha, ha!

Something must be done, were the words of Deacon Brown, and that soon, he thought, but did not speak. So from the wheelwright's he went to the house of another Deacon, Benton Johnson. He had heard the story and was being an enemy believed it, and was determined to deal with the offender.

The Deacons called on the minister. Deacon Johnson was spokesman. The story in full was that Mrs. Barnard, a grass widow—that is, a woman whose husband has gone off because he could not live with her—had heard as she was passing the parsonage, Fanny Lawton say to the children, you lost a kiss from your father by not being in the house when he got home this afternoon, from the lower village, and I got it.

Mr. Haven denied ever having kissed the girl, and suggested that the Deacons should write to Fanny, who was teaching school about twenty miles distant, and get at the truth of the matter. The Deacons did. They stepped into the minister's study and wrote.
In a few days there came a reply.

You ask me if on one occasion Rev. Mr.
Haven, gave me a kiss, where we were, and who was present. In answer I state—Rev.
Mr. Haven did one afternoon, while I was staying at his house, and in the sitting room, give me a kiss—no persons but ourselves were present.

Deacon Johnson was elated, and immediately wrote to his wife's cousin, a young candidate, that there would soon be a vacant parish, where he, no doubt, could receive a call. Deacon Brown was thunderstruck and disappointed. Fanny Lawton's word was not to be doubted; it was so plain a matter there could be no mistake. Mr. Haven, after all, was a wolf in sheep's clothing. Still the minister denied the charge. He could not do such a thing without being aware of it, and knew that he had never kissed the girl, or any girl but his wife, before marriage or since, in his life.

Deacon Johnson brought the matter before the church. He was excellent on such cases.
The charge contained two allegations:

I. Rev. Thornton Haven had been guilty of an impropriety, which rendered it expedient that he should be dismissed from the pastorate.

II. He had lied in the matter.

Fanny Lawton was sent for, and the church was called together. Rev. Solon Dickinson, the pastor of a neighboring church, was present to moderate the meeting. Our meetinghouse was filled. Every member of the church but old bed-ridden Polly Stearns, was present.
All the scoffers and scorners within half a score of miles, who could get there, were there.

The church meeting was duly opened. Deacon Johnson brought forward the charges.
Fanny was called to testify. Her testimony was:

One afternoon, I think it must have been early in March, three of Mr. Haven's children and myself were alone in the sitting-room; their mother had gone to the sewing circle. Mr. Haven came into the house from the other village; the children met him at the door which opens from the sitting-room into the hall; as he came in they went out, and he gave them each one, as they met him a kiss; then coming in he gave me one.

A painful silence followed Miss Lawton's testimony. At length Deacon Johnson asked: Did he close the door before he came into the sitting-room?

The answer was, I think he did.
Had a pin fallen on the carpet it would have been heard in any part of our large and beautiful sanctuary.

Then Mr. Haven rose up and said, Miss Lawton, what did you do with that kiss I gave you?

Here it is, said Fanny, holding up a specimen of that species of confectionery sometimes called a kiss.

Then there was another pause, and silence that was oppressive. All were too much amazed, and either gratified or mortified and disappointed to move. Most held their breath.

Fanny, said our blessed minister, did I ever kiss you?

No, never. I never said you did.
So ended our minister's trial.

A Word for All.

The Chicago Convention having nominated its candidates, we shall at once be plunged into one of the most exciting political campaigns which has ever taken place in this country. Before the blood gets fully roused by the discussion of the question at issue, we would say a few words to the thoughtful and best disposed of all parties.

In behalf of religion, we have a right to demand of every patriot and good man, that he abstain from fomenting personal hatreds, and the use of passionate acrimony. We should all aim at fairness in stating our opponents' opinions and positions, and do all we can to allay the feeling of bitterness and strife.

After two months have passed, the popular verdict will be given, and all loyal citizens must acquiesce in the declaration of the popular will.

Now one of the real dangers to be apprehended is, that men will carry their party feelings to such an extent, that if defeated in the canvass, they will become revolutionary, resist the measures of the government, and take sides with traitors. Without intending to aid in such a course, even with the determined purpose to prevent it, well meaning persons may lead themselves to schemes, the only end of which will foment discord and breed strife in the North.

In the name of all that is dear and sacred,
both in patriotism and religion, is it too much to ask of all who recognize the truth that the duty of the patriot is greater than the claims of the partizan, that they aim as far as possible to carry on the discussion of great political questions in a spirit above personal rancor and petty spite?

We are all members of the same nation, we have a common origin, mutual interests and hopes. We, alike, are affected by the misfortune or prosperity of the country. Can we then, not, even in our differences, discuss the questions at issue without descending to the level of a bully or a blackguard? Must American politics be marked by low assaults on private character, and the daily press teem with falsehoods and appeals to the lowest passions? If so, then our country will not long be worth the saving.

We urge it, then, on the press, and the leaders of the different parties, that they make it a point of special effort to save us from the demoralizing influences which are so liable to follow an excited political canvass.
The custom at the West is admirable. Let the rival candidates meet the people on the same platform, and present the great questions of debate, each setting forth his principles with frank and fair-minded advocacy. The history of every popular movement, teaches that it is far easier to excite the passions of the masses than to control them after they are once inflamed, and the press or speaker who tries to rouse the mob spirit, is guilty of the blackest crime. If a cause cannot rest on fair and honest advocacy, it ought to fail.

American politics can be rescued from its demoralizing influence, only when the press and platform recognize such things as truth, honor, and patriotism, and the existence of honest difference. If we cannot do this, then a free government based on free discussion and universal suffrage is an impossibility.
Are we willing, even to gain the temporary success of a party to put these in jeopardy?

If not, then let the press and the platform discuss great political questions in the spirit of fairness and moderation, with a love of country that overrides the love of party, with a sense of justice which loves truth, with a conviction of the solemn magnitude of the hour, and the sacred obligations it imposes on every man—a responsibility, for the use of which, he must answer to his conscience and his God.

For the Patriot.

Foreign Correspondence.

LONDON, AUGUST 10, 1864.

The new House of Parliament, or the new Palace at Westminster, as it has been called, has a frontage upon the river Thames, nine hundred feet, and covers a space of nearly eight acres, being the largest gothic building in the world. The building was commenced April 27th, 1840, and it was completed so as to accommodate the House, which sat there for the first time, May 30th, 1850. The principal entrance is called the Royal or Victoria Tower, the Central Tower, and the Clock Tower. The Victoria Tower at the south west angle, contains the royal entrance, seventy five feet square, and is three hundred and forty feet high. The Central Tower contains the grand central Hall, and is sixty feet in diameter, and three hundred feet to the top of the lantern; surmounting it the Clock Tower is forty feet square, and with its belfry spire is three hundred and twenty feet high. The many smaller towers add much to the pleasing effect of the Palace, when viewed from a distance. Our space will not permit us to describe the external elaborate decorations, or the many superbly decorated rooms which the Palace contains; one of which rooms is one hundred and ten feet long, forty-five feet wide, and forty-five feet high. The House of Commons is sixty-two feet long by forty-five broad, and is also forty-five in height—being purposely as limited as possible, that the Speaker may be heard distinctly by all present. It is in a direct line with the House of Lords at the north end of the structure.

The Speaker's Chair is placed in such a position, that supposing all the doors open between them, the Chancellor on the Wool Sack, (the presiding officer in the House of Lords), and the Speaker in the Chair would exactly face each other. Over the Speaker's Chair is the Reporter's Gallery; and over that, and in the rear, is the Stranger's Gallery; over that again, and further in the rear, is the Ladies Gallery, with a screen in front to hide the occupants from the view of the members. It is calculated to accommodate two hundred and seventy-seven members on the floor, one hundred and thirty-three in the side galleries, and sixty-six in the lower gallery, making four hundred and seventy-six in all. The Chamber is lighted by six windows of stained glass on each side, and in the evening it is lighted with gas light reflected through ground glass windows in the ceiling. The floor is of iron, perforated for the purpose of ventilation; and the ceiling, of brown oak, is reticulated into a succession of grand angles, with richly carved borders, and the panel fronts of the surrounding galleries are of the same characteristic national material. The general appearance of the House of Lords' Chamber is similar to the House of Commons. We have made two visits to the House of Commons, and one to the House of Lords. The presiding officers in both branches wear wigs, and the members sit with their backs on, but uncover their heads whilst entering the Chamber and whilst speaking. Mr.
Arbore, in the House of Commons, spoke upon the relations of the government with Brazil, which he contended were not what they should be, there being no commercial treaty with the country, owing to the mischievous and meddlesome policy of the English government, which was not content with interfering with small estates and subjecting them to insult and injustice. He was particularly severe in his attack upon Lord Palmerston, whom he denounced as incompetent to be at the head of the government, and whose policy he denounced as mischievous. Mr. Arbore, is an energetic, fluent speaker, and commanded the attention of the House, but he cannot be called a polished debater. During his speech his left hand was buried in his pantaloons pocket, while his left found a resting place in the mate pocket when not employed in gesticulation.

Lord Palmerston appeared unmoved by the attack made upon him, and with a smile upon his countenance he arose in his seat, and said the speech of the honorable gentleman would provoke me to go in to an angry discussion, but the government being now engaged through the Portuguese government in a negotiation, the object of which is to establish diplomatic relations between this country and Brazil, a controversial discourse upon the matter just at this time is not desirable, and I trust the House will think that I am better performing my duty by abstaining from going into these details, which might lead to remarks which would prove unfavorable to the success of the matter. Lord Palmerston has a great command of words; speaks deliberately and cautiously, and has such a command of his temper, that he is seldom provoked into saying injudicious things. He receives all attacks made upon himself as a matter of course, and as if used to them; but with an air of conscious ability and power to annihilate an opponent in case it should be worth his while to do so. His usual position when seated is not graceful—with his body scrouched low, and his massive head buried to his eyebrows in his hat, he seems unconscious of what is going on about him. Sir H. Cairns denounced the act concerning Brazil, as one which no government would have ventured to direct against another which was not weaker than itself, for it was unheard of, that any state should legislate for the punishment of the subjects of a foreign state who were out of its jurisdiction.

Mr. Newgate, a young man, spoke briefly, with fear and trembling, and is evidently not accustomed to speak in public on a stage.
Mr. T. Baring made a short speech, expressed his ideas in the fewest words possible, and concluded without attacking the government, although he sat with the opposition, who occupy the left, while the government supporters sat at the right hand of the Speaker.

Mr. Packe said something about reformatories, but he spoke so low, and in such a stammering manner, that we were unable to determine whether or not his ideas were less judicious than his efforts to make them known.
Sir G. Gray replied in a conversational tone, and was followed by Lord Manners and Mr.
Heygate. The subject of Reformatories being one which afforded no opportunity to attack the government, was debated in a very tame manner. Sir W. Fraser wished to be informed by the government whether passage were required of British subjects while travelling in France. He said the French government had given notice that British subjects would not require passports, but, notwithstanding this notice, British subjects were often seriously molested while travelling in France, in consequence of not having pas-ports. But how were the French to know who were British subjects? The Irishman's description of a Briton—

"Pride on his part—defiance in his eye, I see the lords of human kind pass by."

did not apply to travelling Britons; and foreigners may well be pardoned for not recognizing one from this description. Sir W.
Fraser made a neat speech, but we did not discover what it amounted to, as he answered the question he put to the government himself, unless he desired the government to authorize the use of some distinguishing mark or label, by which a British subject may be recognized when travelling abroad; a neat little Lion and Unicorn branded upon the forehead of a British subject, would no doubt answer the purpose; but just now, such a distinguishing mark would not be a passport to particular favor any where; and in the German States, it is particularly desirable that the nationality of a travelling Englishman should not be generally known. In reply to Sir W. Fraser, Mr. Cardwell said the matter would receive the consideration of Her Majesty's government. The House went into a Committee of Supply, which afforded the opposition a good opportunity to attack the government. Sir J. Hay denounced the government for engaging in the Ashantee war.

Mr. Whiteside read a letter from a gentleman at Cape Court Castle, in which the war against Ashantee was characterized as objectless and unjust. Mr. Cardwell defended the government in a very able speech. Mr.
Adderly gave notice that he would move on the first day of next session for a committee to enquire into this particular case. The idea of protecting barbarous tribes in Africa, was most senseless and absurd. Mr.

H. Seymour was glad that the Right Hon.
gentleman opposite had given notice of his intention to move for a committee, but he did not agree with that policy which aimed at confining British interests and persons to this one little island. Instead of endeavoring to restrict their past Colonial policy, the increasing wealth and unbounded power of this country, were good reasons for still further extending this policy. Mr. H. Seymour made a long speech, which, in our country, would have been called the spread eagle order. Many items in the supply budget were questioned by the opposition, who were answered by Mr. Cardwell, with great frankness and clearness. He has a most gracious way of soothing the troubled spirits of the opposition. The debates we have alluded to took place on the evening of the 18th of July, and in the succeeding evening we visited the House of Lords; the House had a short session, which gave us an opportunity to see more of the House of Commons on the same evening. A debate concerning the placing of a duty on paper was in progress. Mr.
Mugger made a vehement speech in favor of a duty upon paper, contending that the export duties which other countries put upon rags enabled foreign manufacturers to flood this market with foreign paper, and sell at a price lower than home manufacturers could afford it; and the consequence was, that the paper manufacturing interest was being ruined. He held the Chancellor of the Exchequer responsible for this ruinous state of things, and he was frequently cheered from the opposition benches. Mr. Gladstone replied, reading statistics, showing a continual increase of the importation of rags, as well as an increase in the number of paper manufacturers since the removal of the paper duties. He thought the Hon. gentleman should reconcile these facts with his assertions, that the paper manufacturing interest is going to ruin.

Mr. Gladstone is the ablest member in the House, and will, probably, at some future time, succeed Lord Palmerston, as First Lord of the Treasury. A member whose name I did not learn, said he was in favor of restoring the duties upon paper, and thus protecting the paper manufacturing interest.
If it was to be the fixed policy of the government to allow other nations to put an export duty upon the raw material necessarily consumed by our manufacturers, and not protect them, by placing duties on the manufactured goods, then we may look for the ruin of larger manufacturing interests than the one represented to-night by Mr. Mugger. Suppose the Americans should place an export duty upon cotton, the effect would be that American manufacturers on account of obtaining the raw cotton at a much less price than our manufacturers, would be able to undersell us in our own market. No report of this speech appeared in the morning papers, and we do not believe that Lord Palmerston will say it was a judicious speech to make just at this time, when the American Congress is looking about and levying upon everything and anything that will put money in the Federal Treasury. In Parliament, as well as in the American Congress, are many men who have not that caution and business sagacity requisite to enable them to deal the most successfully with questions of great public interest; the harder such men labor the more mischief they do. We shall without doubt make the great cotton growing monopoly which we possess contribute towards paying the expenses of the present war; and the question as to the best manner

an American and as a disinterested observer, we had arrived at the conclusion that the opposition would strike at the government when the blows would injure the country.

He says, you say you are an American; How does the war progress? I am one of the few Englishmen that were said to believe the North will put down the rebellion. I replied, that there appeared to be a disposition here to encourage the South and to discourage the North; that nearly all the public prints are in favor of the South. Says my newly found friend, the papers are paid for writing up the Southern cause. Money does it. I ventured to enquire, is it not because they sympathize with the Southern people. No, he replied; Englishmen do not do anything from sympathy; or rather their sympathies go out in the direction of their interests—or what they believe to be their interests. Besides, the Telegraph is owned by a Jew; a people that never claim to sympathize with, or advocate any cause because it is good and right. I remarked that he was probably correct in his judgment of the Jew, but I was surprised at his opinion of his own countrymen.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Sept. 24th, 1864.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

MILITARY ARREST. Quite an excitement has pervaded this community, caused by the military arrest of one of our most respectable citizens, Mr. Charles P. Tirrell, on the statement of a Sergeant in the United States service, that on Saturday evening last Mr. Tirrell aided and abetted in the escape of a newly enlisted soldier, who went to Quincy under the charge of the Sergeant to transact some business, and while in the house of Mr. Tirrell made his escape through a window. The officer charged Mr. T. with preventing him from following the man through the window, and in other ways aiding in his escape. Under the information which he received Capt. L. Barnes, the Provost Marshal of the 34 District pursued the only course in his power, in causing the arrest and detention of Mr. Tirrell until he could ascertain whether the evidence was sufficient to justify him in turning him over to the United States Court for trial. Our citizens being convinced that their townsman was one of the last men to lay himself liable to be proved guilty of such a grave offence interested themselves in his behalf, and on correct representations being made Mr. T. was promptly released. The man who escaped is probably one of the class of persons known as bounty jumpers, and we hope the report of his arrest, which prevails, is true. He was a stranger in this place, and having obtained work had boarded with Mr. Tirrell a short time. He left the house as usual in the morning and did not return until evening. Mr. Tirrell did not know that during the day he had enlisted, or that he had any intention of so doing. Mr. Tirrell has taken quite an interest in the matter of recruiting, has attended the meetings of citizens that have been held for filling the quota of the town, and contributed freely of his money for the same purpose although not liable to be drafted being upwards of sixty years of age. Mr. Tirrell assures us that the statements which have appeared in two of the Boston papers that he was "confined in a felon's cell," and "tried by a drum-head court martial," and "sentenced to pay a fine of five hundred dollars and to suffer three years imprisonment" are entirely wrong. That he was provided with comfortable accommodations, and good fare, respectfully and kindly treated by the Provost Marshal, his Deputy and subordinates.

NORFOLK AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY. The 16th Annual Exhibition of this Society will take place at Dedham, on Thursday and Friday, the 29th and 30th instant.

Norfolk is rich in her agricultural products, and but few exhibitions of the kind make a better show.

In the selection of its officers the Society has been fortunate; its management has always given general satisfaction.

By the programme of the Society, published in another column of our paper to-day, it will be seen that the exhibition this season, promises to be as attractive as any former occasion.

CAPTAIN SPEAR. The cordial welcome extended to this gallant officer, by his fellow citizens, since his return home, after the arduous duties of a two years' campaign, in the service of his country, is a tribute rightly bestowed upon a worthy man and a brave soldier. The Captain was among the first who responded to the call, when the war broke out; and has been in active duty—with but short intervals—ever since. He has shared largely in the hardships and dangers of the army of the Potomac—under all its Generals, from McClellan down to Grant. His withdrawal from the service at this time, is in consequence of physical infirmities, and matters of a domestic nature; otherwise, as he expresses it, he would still be with his comrades in the field, and fight it out to the end.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, Sept. 22, 1864.

The weather of the present week has been very fine, and the temperature tonic and invigorating. The hotels are full and any number of strangers and visitors are in town. Gold continues to have a downward tendency. There is more activity in trade than last week, but it is still backward, as prices we are glad to say, are declining. Money is easier on loan and discounts as the banks are becoming more accommodating. The securities of the government are in good demand for investment—very good. As an evidence in the fall of prices, we are informed that a large sale of domestic goods took place in New York on Tuesday, when every article except flannels sold at ruinous low prices for the seller. The same goods could at one time have been disposed of at a profit of ten to fifteen per cent., but the owner lost some $40,000 on the sale.

A co-operative company has recently been formed in this city for the purchase of coal; offers have already been made to supply the association with all the coal the members want, for thirteen dollars fifty cents. Thus an important blow is struck at the monopoly prices of fuel.

The war news of the week is glorious and rejoices every loyal heart. General Sheridan has gained in the Shenandoah Valley one of the most splendid victories of the Virginia campaign. Rebel loss in killed, wounded and prisoners, about ten thousand. The valley of the Shenandoah is cleared out of rebels and rebel rule, and now fairly in Federal command all round the house. No better fought action on the part of the Federal army has occurred during the war. The particulars were sent out by the steamer yesterday to Europe, and we can well imagine that the moral effect of the news will operate wonderfully on European minds in favor of our struggle at the North for freedom against the Southerners for despotism. From General Grant's army no news has reached us to the present moment of a battle which appears imminent. It is well known that he was sending all the troops available to strengthen his left, and that his plan is to strike the Danville road and thus cut the only remaining line of rebel communication with the South and leave the enemy dependent upon the Lynchburg road. Lee has evidently feared some such movement, and therefore sought to withdraw from the Shenandoah Valley a portion of Early's forces; but General Sheridan's vigilance, as we have seen, has prevented the retirement unobserved, and it is probable that the discovery of some such movement precipitated Sheridan's attack, which has resulted in such complete victory as makes the fall of Petersburg and Richmond soon to follow. The rebellion will then be virtually at an end, thanks to the administration, backed up by millions of patriotic hearts.

The political campaign has now opened actively. The Massachusetts Democratic State Convention, we are told, met on Wednesday last at Worcester, with large numbers and harmonious proceedings. The resolutions endorse the national nomination of the party, and pledge a cordial support to them. The delegates at Chicago are thanked for their patriotic and satisfactory action. The fourth resolution recognizes the prosecution of the war as necessary, and as a co-operative work under the principles enunciated in General McClellan's letter; being virtually a war platform. Adopting this at the eleventh hour is a clear admission that the general government has been all along right in every effort to conquer an honorable peace by vigorous war operations. Union Clubs and McClellan Clubs are forming all over the country, and the great contest by ballot on the eighth of November next will be active and exciting. The question is now narrowed to one form; whether we shall put forth the power of the loyal States, and crush once for all the first great rebellion against the Union and Constitution, or invite its repetition by patching up a hollow peace which will continue only long enough to enable the insurgents to revive from their present exhausted and demoralized condition. President Lincoln is opposed to any armistice or compromise with the rebels for peace with dishonor. He is in favor of an honorable and lasting peace, by a complete suppression of this unholy rebellion. The people know it, and will re-elect him triumphantly for another term of four years.

CUSHMAN & BROOKS, jobbers and retailers, at their new store, Nos. 90 and 92, Tremont street, Boston, are opening full lines of Fall Goods at the very lowest cash prices. Their assortment is large and well selected, comprising every article to be found in their line, to which they respectfully invite attention.

We would recommend this House to the attention of those visiting the city, in search of such articles, as they may here have their wants readily supplied, and on the most accommodating terms. See advertisement.

THANKS. We were made the recipient a few days since, through the politeness of our friend, Nathaniel White, Esq., of a fine sample of fruit, from his luxuriant garden. There were many varieties; pears of the choicest qualities; and apples that were tempting to the sight and delicious to the taste.

THE LADY'S FRIEND is received regularly, and its monthly visits are always welcome. The October number is rich in artistic skill and its literary productions. In regard to the fashions, there is not enough developed to give us an inkling of what the Fall campaign will be. This magazine, during its brief career, has met with a success which has secured it a name and character among the best periodicals of the day.

National Union Club.

At a meeting of citizens, called for that purpose, on Saturday evening, Sept. 17th, at the Town Hall, a National Union Club was formed. The meeting was organized by the choice of Henry H. Faxon, Chairman, and L. P. Forbush, Secretary. The following letter from Rev. E. P. Tawing, directed to the Chairman of the Republican Town Committee was read to an appreciative audience.

Quincy, Sept. 17, 1864.

DEAR SIR:—I regret exceedingly that engagements in another part of the state will prevent my attendance this evening. The object in view has my hearty support and to it whatever of personal or professional influence I may possess shall be willingly given.

In the present critical juncture our national government needs the co-operation of every true, christian, loyal man. The issues are simple. Shall we surrender our country to rebels in arms? Shall the ballot or the bullet reign?

With all deference to the opinion of those who think differently; while we grant them the liberty we claim for ourselves, we see no hope of peace but in a vigorous prosecution of the war; which end seems best accomplished by aiding those who are now carrying it on, to wit, the Lord and the loyal people of the North. His and their servant Mr. Lincoln. May his services be continued till this rebellion is crushed; till all "our erring sisters" shall return; till the whole family of states be reunited, whose joy, and pride, again, shall be to say

"WE HAVE ABRAHAM FOR OUR FATHER!"

Yours truly,

EDWARD P. TAWING

A Constitution was reported and adopted. The gentlemen whose names are here appended were elected officers:—

For President—Henry H. Faxon.

Vice Presidents—Henry F. Barker, John Glover, Jacob F. Eaton, Ebenezer Adams, William B. Duggan, Samuel Crane, William S. Morton, Edward P. Tawing, Edward B. Souther, Edwin W. Marsh, Charles Marsh, J. Q. Adams.

Patriotic speeches of the true Union ring were made by Mr. H. H. Faxon, Lieutenants T. H. Newcomb and Thaddeus H. Churchill.

The meeting adjourned to next Saturday evening, when fuller arrangements will be made for carrying on the coming campaign. All Union men are earnestly invited to be present and join the Club and testify to their interest in continuing this war to a successful issue; so that when peace with her white wings does come—it will be no compromise with rebels in arms, but a peace established on the broad foundations of Truth and Justice.

We would invite those about purchasing their boots and shoes to call at Curtis's and examine his styles, qualities, and prices.

FIRE. We learn that the fine dwelling house and barn of Captain Charles Taylor, near the Town Hall, in Milton, were destroyed by fire about one o'clock, on Thursday morning last; fortunately, part of the furniture of the house was saved. A barn standing between the Lower Road and Nesposet River, in Dorchester, on the Marsh, was also burnt about the same hour. Probably the work of an incendiary.

INTERESTING HISTORY. A gentleman of Boston, well known in private business circles, has been all his life, and his ancestors before him, subject to severe attacks of Neuralgia. All the usual remedies failing to help him, he endeavored to discover a cure. By long continued experiments, he at length found an external application which cured him every time he used it without any failure. His friend learning of this, he had numerous calls for the remedy, and for two or three years it won the rounds of private circles, curing almost every one that used it. He sold none, until the demand became so great as to make it almost impossible to supply it without a heavy drain upon his purse.

It was then offered for sale, and he ventures to assert that scarcely any medicine has had such an introduction to the public in so short a time. The sale has been hardly with out a parallel. We refer to "Sturge's Electric Compound." A number of well known gentlemen of Boston and other places, have used it with remarkable effect, and we have no hesitation in recommending it to every one. It is very common for persons who have been cured to visit the proprietor and offer their names for publication, so remarkable and rapid has been the effects of the medicine. It is applied externally, and a child may use it. All respectable druggists have it for sale.

Camp Carrington.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 13, 1864.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:—

I must tell you about some pleasant little incidents that happened yesterday at the barracks of Company B.

You may know that certain public spirited ladies of Quincy,—Mrs. Wm. F. Whitney at the head of them,—lately purchased and sent out for the use of our Company, a tasteful little gift flag with the words "Wollaston Rifles" printed in gilt letters upon it. It was transmitted through the hands of Corp. Wells who with a few words of explanation presented it to the members of the Company yesterday afternoon. Capt. Bent, the chosen head of the Company received it, and made an appropriate reply. How much delighted the boys were with their gift will appear from the following Preamble and Resolutions drafted by our Clerk, and subsequently passed.

"Whereas we, the Officers and members of Co. B, 60th Mass. Regt., have this day received through the hands of Corporal Wells a handsome silk Camp Color, the gift of the ladies of Quincy, it is hereby

Resolved, That we accept the gift and will preserve it with a jealous care; and whenever its azure folds spread out upon the breeze,—when the golden inscription which it bears glimmers in the sun, they shall remind us of those loved ones at home, who are constantly assuring us of their willingness to do all in their power for our comfort and pleasure.

Resolved, That whenever and wherever our duty calls this color shall lead, and stimulate us to renewed exertions to perform a soldier's duty in such a manner as shall reflect credit upon ourselves, our regiment, and the ancient town which we represent.

Resolved, That these resolves be entered upon the Records of the company, and the clerk be hereby instructed to forward a copy to Mrs. W. F. Whitney, and other ladies of Quincy.

E. WEBSTER UNDERWOOD, Clerk.

Immediately following this presentation came another. This time it was our own faithful clerk who was the recipient, and the members of the company were the givers. The gift was a silver badge in the form of a shield-shaped pin on the face of which was inscribed,—"Wollaston Rifles: Clerk;" and on the reverse,—Presented to E. W. Underwood, from Co. B, 60th Mass. Regt. The same Corporal officiated again as spokesman, complimenting Mr. Underwood for his fidelity and general efficiency and concluded by fastening the pin to the lapel of his coat.

The worthy scribe attempted to reply, but his feelings of his modesty were entirely too much for him: he found himself wholly inadequate to the occasion, and fairly broke down. Later in the evening, however, he sent in the following note which was read to the Company after evening prayers, and received with three hearty cheers:—

"SIR: Owing partially to indisposition, and being frustrated at being placed in the position of a speech-maker, I was reluctantly compelled to defer returning thanks to you and our associates for your beautiful testimonial of your regard and esteem. I now desire through you to return my most heartfelt thanks for the same. This gift, coming as it does, not from a few personal friends, but from nearly every one of my fellow-soldiers, many of whom but a few days since were total strangers to me, cannot be too highly prized; and I assure you that it shall ever be my pride, while officially connected with you, to wear it, and I trust with honor to you as well as myself. In the performance of the duties assigned me by our commander I have thus merited your esteem, I sincerely hope that nothing will occur during the remainder of our term of service to in the least impair the friendly relations now existing between us.

Your humble servant,

E. WEBSTER UNDERWOOD."

I may have encroached upon your columns, but I have felt that many of our friends would be interested in reading an account of these pleasant little ceremonies, given by one who was a witness of them. And I will not further trespass now, except to say that the general health of our company is, at present, remarkably good, notwithstanding the limited allowance of food with which the Government, or its officials, supplies us; and that although we try to be contented and satisfied to our duty, we already begin to reckon the time, and look forward with ever increasing eagerness to the end of the "hundred days."

Yours

DANCING SCHOOL. We would call attention to the card of Miss Merrill, of Boston, to be found in another column of our paper to-day. It will be there seen, that an effort is to be made to raise a class in this town, for the purpose of introducing a course of lessons in that graceful accomplishment, under the auspices of an experienced and most successful teacher. It is hoped the call will meet with a ready response, and sufficient encouragement given for Miss M. at once to open a school; for it is a long time since our youth have been favored with such instruction—and fears are entertained that if they are not soon put under some such training they will outgrow their manners.

As a substantial testimonial of the merits of the advertiser in her profession, we subjoin the following:

SEPTEMBER 15th, 1864.

"Miss E. Merrill has been the teacher of dancing in my school the past six years, and has given excellent satisfaction to the large classes under her instruction; not only of children, but young gentlemen and ladies."

"NATHANIEL T. ALLEN, Principal of the English and Classical School, West Newton."

A Visit to New York City.

As business at home offered us a favorable opportunity for stealing abroad, we a few days since jumped aboard the Fall River cars, which were under the charge of our friend Kimball—one of the most cheerful and accommodating Conductors, we have ever met in our travels—and, after a pleasant ride, we soon found ourselves at the steamboat landing, where all were in a bustle; but, in a few moments our cars caught the glad sound "all aboard." We soon glided from the wharf and skipped along on the smooth deep, with a smiling moon over our heads, without a cloud to obstruct its rays. After enjoying several hours on deck, nature urged us to "turn in" for repose, and the next morning found us in New York City.

"Gotham" is a great place—full of strange things and queer people—but we have not room to give our readers much of an idea of what we saw. The Central Park would furnish one with material enough for one column at least; then the reading room and picture galleries in Cooper's Institute are worthy of extended notice, but time will not permit.

We had the pleasure of shaking cordially by the hand several Quincy boys; and we cannot help calling the attention of the younger portion of our readers to one in particular—Manroe Crane, son of the late Ebenezer Crane. This enterprising young man left his native town in pursuit of wealth, and after learning the butchering business in the far West, he started, a few years since, in business, in New York City, where he has met with good pecuniary success. He is now engaged, in company with Mr. Sperry, in erecting a very large building at the foot of West 29th street, near Hudson river, at a cost of $26,000. It is 85 by 100 feet, three stories, and will contain many modern improvements. Mr. Crane has spent several months during the past summer, in the large pork districts of the West, gaining information that will make his new slaughter-house superior to any in the city. It will be finished by the first of October, and it is the intention of the firm to kill one thousand hogs daily, on the average, during the winter, and to give employment to about sixty hands.

Camp near City Point. (Va.)

Co. F, 22d Reg. Mass. Vol.,

Sept. 6, 1864.

Mrs. CAROLINE FAXON: Dear Madam:—Your son was taken sick at this camp, and was sent to Philadelphia, (Penn.) To night I received notice of his death; he died of chronic diarrhoea, on the 24th of August, at the United States General Hospital, at West Philadelphia.

It is with deep, heartfelt sorrow, that I now pen these few lines. Your son was a dutiful soldier, and discharged his duty faithfully. In this campaign, we fought side by side, and his heroic conduct is worthy of all praise. His earthly career has been thus briefly closed. It has pleased the Almighty to call him home, to be mustered into the ranks of the just and faithful. The last year he has improved every opportunity in reading a Bible that came from you. He often thought of home. His term of service would have expired October 25th, which he was looking forward to with pleasure—in anticipation of a reunion again with early friends, after a separation of three years.

Hoping you will find consolation in your great grief, in the sustaining arm of our Heavenly Father, I remain, yours respectfully,

CORPORAL WILLIAM W. MONROE.

BRAVO'S BOOTS. Curtis has just received a good assortment of them, for men's boys' and youths' winter wear. The quality of these boots are too well known to need further praise.

Responsive Campaign Song.

BY F. M. ADLINGTON—WEYMOUTH.

November may come with political blast,
Portending to liberty woe;
A miracle's threaten'd—unknown to the past;
McClellan's to frighten a foe.

A foe,
McClellan's to frighten a foe.

And should he be chosen our next President,
That too for a wonder would stand;
A miracle such as Egypt was sent,
When vermin corrupted the land.

The land,
When vermin corrupted the land.

But vain are the hopes of the poor little Mack,
He'll never be Chief of this Realm;
The great hesitator the spirit would lack
To manage the difficult helm.

The helm,
To manage the difficult helm.

They want him, they think, an available tool,
To Villianism, Power & Co.
And think through their cat's paw the nation to rule,
And freedom strike down at a blow.

A blow,
And freedom strike down at a blow.

And freedom strike down at a blow.

But for the Rail Splitter hearty and stout,
He'll put in the ticks with a crack;
And split up the factions now lying about
Look out for the splinters there Mack.

There Mack,
Look out for the splinters there Mack.

Look out for the splinters and gather them up,
For time they may serve for a show;
And help to remind you while taking your cup,
How you were dishonor'd by being the puppet of Villianism, Power & Co.

& Co.
Of Villianism, Power & Co.

Lines on the Death of Edith L. White.

"SHE IS NOT DEAD, BUT SLEEPETH."

Thou hast left us darling Edith,
For a better world above;
Gone to dwell with Christ the Savior,
To bask forever in his love.

Thou hast left devoted parents
Whose love for thee, there's none can tell
May they find sweet consolation
In Him "who doeth all things well."

Thou hast left a little sister
Whose winsome ways bring fresh to mind,
Our little loving gentle Edith,
Who round our hearts with love entwined.

Thou hast left a world of sorrow,
Sickness, suffering, and pain;
May the trial make us purer
And more meet with Christ to reign.

Give us hearts to feel, dear Savior,
For others woes, as for our own;
Help us show that love to others
Thou to us hast ever shown.

And when, dear Savior life is ended
May all be drawn to dwell with thee,
"No wanderer lost," to spend in Heaven
A life of bliss and purity.

What is more tender than a mother's love
To the sweet infant fondling in her arms;
What arguments need her compassions move
To hear its cries, and help it in its laments!

Of all the love within her single breast,
Of all the mothers since the world began,
'Tis nothing to the love of God to Man.

GENTLEMEN!

Please call at the subscriber's place of business and get measured for one of

Buttrick's Perfect Fitting

SHIRT PATTERNS!

Then you can have Good Fitting Shirts for a lifetime, at a trifling expense.

Notice the benefit which you will receive by procuring a Pattern cut by this celebrated rule.

FIRST—You will always have Good Fitting Shirts.

SECOND—They will be cut from Less Cloth, thereby saving expense, and be perfectly easy to the wearer, as the proper quantity of Cloth is put in the Right Place.

THIRD—You will receive printed Directions with each Pattern, setting forth how to prepare the Cloth, cut and make the Shirt, quantity of Cloth and Trimmings for each pair, and the proper width of Cloth to purchase; thereby saving Cloth and many stitches.

There is much time saved by using a Pattern cut by measure, with Directions so plain that any intelligent person will understand them.

EVERY PATTERN WARRANTED TO FIT.

These Patterns are furnished by THOMAS DODDS.

JOHN A. HOLDEN,

Merchant Tailor & Dealer

CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, DOESKINS

AND VESTINGS,

School St., cor. of Gay St., Quincy.

AS on hand and is constantly receiving from the best sources, New and Desirable Goods adapted to his trade. All who wish first class Custom Made Garments, for a fair price, are respectfully invited to call.

N. B. It would be well to remember, that Cheapness and Decency are relative attributes; they have a relation to the QUALITY of the article we buy, and that, which does not answer well the purpose for which it was intended, is DEAR at any price.
